95 Die In New York Plane Crash

Astro-Jet Afire Before Impact In Swamp Area

Plane Had Just Taken Off for Los Angeles Run

NEW YORK (AP)—An American Airlines jet liner crashed and burned shortly after takeoff today, apparently killing all 95 persons aboard.

Casts guardsmen at the scene just off the south shore of Long Island said they found no signs of survivors.

The tragedy came just as the city was about to give a joyful welcome to Lt.-Col. John H. Glenn Jr., the astronaut who orbited the earth.

The plane, with 87 passengers and eight crew members aboard, had taken off from Idlewild Airport for Los Angeles at 10:07 a.m.

The airline listed one of the passengers as W. Alton Jones, board chairman of the Cities Service Company and a golfing companion of former president Eisenhower.

Minutes later, the $5,000,000 plane crashed in sparkling clear weather, the first fair day after almost a week of rain and fog that had delayed or cancelled hundreds of flights.

The aircraft, a modernized Boeing 707 known as an astro-jet, crashed in a swampy area known as Broad Channel in Jamaica Bay off Far Rockaway in Queens Borough. The area is just off the southern tip of Long Island.

The plane was half in the water and half on the shore.

Witnesses said the plane climbed to about 700 feet from Idlewild, then turned left and plunged at a steep angle.

Some witnesses said they saw flames coming from the plane before the crash, others did not but the crash was in flames immediately after the impact.

The plane was known as "Astro-Jet."

By 11 a.m., the report from coast guardsmen at the scene was:

"There now is only floating, smoking debris in the area."

Police at Idlewild said at the same time:

"Apparently there were no survivors."

The crew of a Mohawk Airlines plane that had taken off from Idlewild about the same time witnessed the crash and radioed an alarm back to the airport.

The crash was the first accident of a Boeing 707 in the United States, the jet liner's first life for passengers and the second of the shoves from the crowd.

P.M: JABS AT LIBERALS' LOUD CHORUS

Speaks at Political Rally in Quebec

MONTREAL (CP) — Prime Minister Diefenbaker jabbed at the "calamity chorus" of the Liberal opposition and "failures" of Saskatchewan's "socialist system" in a five - constituency political rally here Wednesday night.

Since their defeat in 1957, he told a crowd of about 800 in a jammed high school hall, the Liberals have preached a consistent doctrine of gloom. The "calamity chorus" of Liberal Leader Pearson, and MPs Paul Martin and C. Pickersgill pictured Canada darkly and spoke of the country in a "negative way" at home and abroad.

With evident enjoyment, he described the National Liberal Council meeting in Ottawa late in January where delegates sing the "Whitepaper Song.

"We are not the lambs who have gone astray," he said smiling broadly. "That was their description. They sang and they realized what they were saying."

Turning to the CCF - NDP government of Saskatchewan, he said the province's Socialist government tried a number of business enterprises—a boot factory, a paint factory—and all dropped; it won in the red") and a box factory.

MUST BE COMPETITIVE

The Socialists found they could not make profits simply by going into business. They discovered the Socialist system wouldn't work.

Of all those who believe in the socialist system none has a greater advocate than Hazen Argue, the CCF - NDP parliamentary leader who last week defected to the Liberals.

Mr. Argue "found his spiritual home in the Liberal party," Mr. Diefenbaker said, "There will be more observers on that the day goes by."

A man in the auditorium gallery shouted: "Desperate, desperate wash," at one point in his speech and left, assisted by a couple of shoves from the crowd.

Mr. Diefenbaker said that by the 100th anniversary of Confederation in 1967 he hopes to be in a position to bring into the federation as provinces the northern territories of Canada, once regarded as mere lands of ice and snow but now the object of great mineral developments.

He also hinted that the Senate reform measure foreseen in the throne speech at the opening of parliament on Jan. 26 may involve a fixed period of service. At present, senatorial appointments are for life.

TV ADS GET BLASTING IN PARLIAMENT

Member Claims Ads Not Wholly True

OTTAWA (CP)—The perils of misleading advertising, the slenderdog status of "Brand X" and the difficulties of buying a degree without towels in the back got a Commons airing Wednesday.

The consensus was that something should be done about it. But, in the end, long debate, nothing was decided.

J. Chester MacRae (PC—York-Scarboro) touched off the discussion with a resolution urging that a special Commons committee be set up to study commercial advertising and recommend ways to prevent "the distribution of fraudulent and misleading advertising to Canadian consumers."

Robert McCleave (PC—Halifax) confessed to a life-long dislike "that Brand X will some day triumph on television."

Victor Price (PC—Peterborough) said children are being "used" by advertisers to promote their products.

And Frank McGee (PC—York Scarborough) said he has been forced to educate his children to assume that TV ads are "not completely true."

But after an hour's debate Mr. MacRae's resolution was talked out. Debate was adjourned with no decision taken. It is unlikely to come up for consideration before this session.

OPPOSES CROIL BILL

The interests of consumers also were touched on in the debate, where debate continued on the Senate-sponsored Croll (L—Ontario) which would require the interest rate on consumer credit to be spelled out by advertisers and vendors.

The bill was opposed by Senator Salter Hayden (L—Ontario) on grounds it is unconstitutional and by Senator Connolly (PC—Ottawa) on the ground it would be unworkable. There was no agreed method of working out the interest rate when instalment payments were concerned. Different people came up with different interest rates in calculating the same transaction.

The Commons also debated the importance of research by the forestry department.

Douglas Fisher (CCF — Port Arthur) said the forestry products department has a responsibility to encourage research in the confused forestry profession.

H. J. Robichaud (L — Gloucester) said the department supported under farm-produced pulpwood and Hugh Horner (PC—Jasper-Edmonton) said the greatest need

Moslem Patience Finally Breaks, Riots Follow New Algiers Blasts

ORAN, Algeria (Reuters)—Thousands of Moslems clashed with plainclothes police in gun-blazing dawn riots here today after bombs exploded near the edge of the Moslem and Jewish districts.

Police opened fire as the riots ran rampaged through this western city shouting "Moslem Algeria" and "Long live Algeria," and calling for the death of Ahmed Ben Bella and the European terrorist Secret Army Organization.

Since the New Year the secret army has led a wave of violence throughout the North African territory in an apparent bid to provoke bloody counter-violence that will destroy the truce and jeopardize the imminent cease-fire and the 7½-year nationalist insurrection.

Observers have been impressed by the restraint shown thus far by the Moslem majority in the face of daily indiscriminate killings by secret army fanatics.

But Moslem patience finally burst early today after the explosion of seven plastic bombs — favorite weapon of the secret army.

The bombs went off near a boulevard where two time bombs killed 16 Moslems, women and children Wednesday.

When the riots broke out, heavily-armed police rushed to the scene of the demonstrations and were mobbed at the Moslems, who threw anything they could lay their hands on at the security forces.

Though police reported no riot casualties, they often carry away their dead and injured before security forces can get to the scene.

Military officials said 65 persons, including 25 Moslems, were killed and 93 wounded throughout Algeria Wednesday.

Hundreds of troops of the estimated 60,000 surrounding Algiers moved into the city, armed with sub-machine-guns and grenades, to prevent major violence when the cease - fire comes.

The Algerian insurgent "provisional government" in Tunis arranged to meet today to prepare for the final phase of negotiations with the French to end the insurrection.

Negro Leader Says Welensky Planning Arrest of Governor

LUSAKA (Reuters)—Kenneth Kaunda, Negro nationalist leader of Northern Rhodesia, called here today for the "immediate" arrest or detention of Sir Roy Welensky because of an alleged anti-British plot by the Rhodesian federation prime minister.

He made the demand at a nationalist conference in the capital of this British Protectorate.

Kaunda charged that Welensky, now in London discussing the future of the troubled Central African Federation, was planning to arrest Northern Rhodesia Governor Sir Evelyn Hone and other officials and declare the federation independent if his London talks weren't successful.

The African, leader of North-ern Rhodesia's United National Independence party, demanded therefore that the British government arrest Welensky "immediately" or that he be kept under protective custody until a commission of inquiry has been appointed.

New Pakistan Constitution Gives President Much Power

KARACHI (Reuters) — Pakistan's President Mohammed Ayub Khan today announced a new constitution providing for a strong presidential authority and a one-chamber federal legislature, elected indirectly.

Ayub, a lieutenant-general made simultaneously with the release of the constitution, said political parties will continue to be banned unless allowed by an act of central legislature.

He did not set a date for the election but in the past the president has promised elections soon after the promulgation of the new constitution.

Martial law will be lifted after parliament is convened, Ayub said.

The 80,000 members of Pakistan's basic democracies council will form an electoral college to elect the 156-seat national parliament and the 300-seat provincial legislatures of the provinces of East and West Pakistan.

However, the president will have a right of veto over any acts of the national parliament. The parliament can override this veto by a two-thirds majority but he then can take the issue to referendum in the electoral college.

Ayub received a mandate to frame a new constitution at the same time he was elected to a five-year term as president by the basic democracy councils on Feb. 14, 1960.

This is Pakistan's second constitution since the nation was established in 1947. The previous constitution, passed a constituent assembly in 1956, was abrogated in October, 1958, when former president Iskander Mirza imposed martial law, dismissed the central and provincial governments and abolished parliament.

Field Marshal Ayub assumed power on Oct. 28, 1958, after Mirza had handed over all powers to him.

Ayub will be the first president of Pakistan under the new constitution. He will have a three-year term. Members of the first national and provincial parliaments have a two-year term.

Besides the wide terms of both president and legislators will revert to five years.

No New Taxes, Increases Announced In Budget By Provincial Treasurer

Economic Council to Be Created Also Extended Housing Program

TORONTO (CP) — The Ontario government today embarked on a $432,000 billion-dollar spending program and announced a new five-year plan of provincial development.

"Under this plan our aim will be to maintain an adequate rate of economic growth consistent with the financial capacity of the province," Provincial Treasurer Allan Grossman said in delivering his fourth budget address to the legislature.

No new taxes or tax increases were announced, although there will be some minor amendments in existing tax structures.

Other features of the budget include creation of an economic council with representativez of government, management, labor, agriculture and the natural resource and export industries; an extended housing program; accelerated northern development, including a $7,200,000 program to extend communications facilities of the government-owned Ontario Northland Railway; and a 200-man increase in the strength of the provincial police.

Combined net ordinary and capital expenditure for the new fiscal year starting April 1 is forecast at $1,126,000,000, up from $926,000,000 in the current year just ending. The biggest jump will be in educational outlays.

SURPLUS ACHIEVED

Mr. Allan announced a surplus for the 1961-62 fiscal year on ordinary account—the day-to-day business of running the government—of $432,000 on gross revenues of $853,121,000 and gross expenditures of $852,689,000.

Plus 1962-63 he predicted a surplus of $374,000 from gross revenues of $1,005,408,000 and gross expenditures of $1,005,-034,000.

There will be broadened exemptions in the three-per-cent retail sales tax which went into effect last Sept. 1 but they will clip only about $1,000,000 off the total take. They are designed primarily to help educational and religious institutions, hospitals and trappers.

The Succession Duty Act will be amended to permit insurance payments up to $5,000 to a widow without consent of the estate's executors, double the previous amount. There also will be a new six-month exemption from interest on such sums, dating from the death of the deceased.

Changes to the Hospital Tax Act, which Mr. Allan said at a conference of provinces was designed to give some relief to small motel theatre operators, will take a cent or so off the tax on some tickets costing less than $1.

DISCUSSIONS PLANNED

Of the five-year plan, Mr. Allan said:

"Through our economic council we will have discussions with agencies, discussions will be held with industry, management and labor, and consultations will be arranged with the provincial economic council."

Urges U.S. Copy Canada's System Of Different Colored Currency

WASHINGTON (CP)—A wad of Canadian paper money will be introduced in the U.S. Congress in the drive by a California Democrat to get the United States adopt multi-colored currency.

Senator Clare Engle says he's drafting legislation to give the American greenback a new look that he thinks would help the Canadian currency to show how easy it would be to distinguish one denomination from another if the Canadian color plan were adopted. Said U.S. currency now is a light green.

Engle has got the $78 from U.S. Treasurer Elizabeth Rodes Smith, who also has been urging multi-colored currency, not a no avail. The bills she used in her campaign range from $1 to $50.

Mrs. Smith met a stone wall in the form of Harry Holtzclaw, veteran director of the U.S. engraving bureau, who claims multi-colored currency would discourage counterfeiters.

Now the Montreal-born Mrs. Smith plans to leave her government post, probably in June, to help Democrat Pierre Salinger of California in his election fight against Republican Richard M. Nixon in the vote for governor next November.

Determined that her currency campaign should not falter, she turned over her pursemat of Canadian money to Senator Engle so that he can show it around the Senate floor briefly before a Senate committee.

"If you look at it real evenually," she said in an interview.

Meanwhile Congress released testimony in which Holtzcraw insisted that a country of 18,000,000 population—which he later identified as Canada—has trouble when ten-hatching up counterfeit notes which have been picked up out of circulation in that country (Canada), not counting letters of plants or purchases

Prime Minister Diefenbaker said Bermuda is no "clandestine discussions" going on with the U.S. about nuclear warheads.

J. Chester MacRae (PC—York-Sunbury) said some advertising is based on false claims and smeared with half-truths.

Mr. MacRae's move to have a Commons committee study advertising for fraudulent claims was, however, "talked out" and temporarily shelved.

Senator Salter Hayden (L—Ontario) said a senator's bill to force merchants to reveal credit costs might be unconstitutional.

Second Wave Peace Workers Ready to Leave

TORONTO (CP) — Fifteen Canadian university graduates and students will leave for Asia later this year to work in under-developed countries.

They will be the second wave under a program called Canadian Overseas Volunteers, launched last year.

The COV Wednesday announced the names of the 15 and said another five have been placed on a standby list.

Karem Hall, one of those chosen, is a 25-year-old registered nurse from Dundas, Ont. She hopes to work in Pakistan where her parents were born.

All the volunteers are graduates or students of the University of Toronto. Fifteen are expected to leave in August and if a fund objective of $40,000 is met, all 20 will be able to go, the COV said.

14 FROM TORONTO

Fourteen are from the Toronto area. The others, all from Ontario, are: Lorne Rogerth, Smith Sts. Maple, Philip Solway, Bramalea; Miss Elaine Mc-Gookin; Margaret Crew, Brantford; David Ewens, Cobourg, and Miss Hall.

Miss Crew and Mr. Ewens are on the standby list.

The volunteers will work a year in India, Ceylon and Sarawak. They will live and work with Asians under Asian supervision. Their work will include engineering, nursing and teaching.

Oswald Sciascitti, regional secretary of COV, said it costs $2,000 to send each volunteer overseas "and so far we have only $7,000 all told."

Landau still is unconscious after a head injury in an automobile accident in Russia some time ago.

in forestry research is to find ways of fighting forest fires.

Dr. Bowles became lively when Mr. MacRae presented his resolution, stating that while most advertisements he picked it with his shavers who use false claims and misleading.

TV and radio commercials are full of insult to intelligence, he said. The advertising of cough syrup as very vitamins was "nothing short of a lie."

"Detergent boxes are half filled with towels, and boxes of breakfast food are half filled with plastic gimmicks for children."

"Brain - washing" was practiced on children and TV commercials were "too loud and too long."

Mr. Pitman said finance company advertisements proclaiming the advantages of one lending company over another "are uncertainly not in any sense guided by the truth."

Mr. MacCleave had some unkind things to say about soap advertisers who use blue shirts on TV to claim their soap washes whiter, because such shirts show up whiter than white ones on TV.

Mr. Dyer drew a speaking longing to see Joel Aldred cough himself to death outside of a cigarette commercial, or to see housewife who still has a look of indigestion after using some form of indigestion after using some form of indigestion remedy, or to see the people who jump about like spiritually on the beer ads lurch or perchance even fall down."

One Suspect Stayed in Camp Near Bancroft

PETERBOROUGH (CP) — Yvon Lalande, one of four suspects in the $232,000 robbery of the Havelock Bank, stayed overnight in a lonely tent and trailer camp three nights before the robbery, a witness testified in court Wednesday.

Lalande, 31, Jean - Claude Lacoode, 23, Robert Poirier, 31, and Roger Martel, 41, are charged with the April 21, 1961, robbery of the Havelock branch of the Toronto - Dominion Bank.

Lalande was identified in court Wednesday by William Turpin, operator of the camp near Bancroft, 44 miles north of Havelock.

Mr. Turpin said Lalande drove into the camp about 7 p.m. in an Oldsmobile bearing Quebec licence plates. He was the only guest in the camp that night and Mr. Turpin did not ask him to register because of a heavy snowfall.

Lalande's car was back next morning and Mr. Turpin went down the licence number and asked his guest's name. He was told: Perrin. Lalande left the camp about 11 a.m. and drove south.

power in copper-rich Northern Rhodesia.

Colonial Secretary Reginald Maudling said the proposed reforms would give the Negroes more voice in electing the 15 members of Northern Rhodesia's 45-man legislature and are elected by both white and colored voters.

In Lusaka, capital of Northern Rhodesia, the policy - making central committee of Kenneth Kaunda's United National Party went into session tonight to discuss the new constitution.

Kaunda said Wednesday the British government "has failed us" "dodged the issue." He said the constitution "cannot work" and "can only result in political stalemate."

But he added "I am not saying I have rejected the constitution; I will give this further consideration."

John Roberts, Northern Rhodesian leader of Welensky's United Federal Party, expressed "bitter disappointment" at the new plan and said it could "make a laughing stock of the British government."

The leader of Northern Rhodesia's African National Congress, Harry Nkumbula, said he rejected the proposals and might find it difficult to control his supporters "if they decide to go into any unpleasant activities."

In the House of Commons here, Labor and Liberal party opposition spokesmen criticized the new constitution but directed most of their fire at Welensky, who said in London Wednesday he would be prepared to use force to carry out his policies.

English Factory Executives Entertained

TRENTON — This week George Kempf, vice-president and general manager of Erie Resistor of Canada, and the executive, engineering and administrative staff plan-ned hosts to engineers from the Erie plant at Great Yarmouth, England.

Heading up the overseas delegation was A. A. Dyson, managing director of the English factory. With Mr. Dyson were Mrs. Dyson, who has spent the past two months being trained in engineering and administrative techniqu-s at the parent plant in Erie, Pa.; Bernard Cole, head of mechanical design at Great Yarmouth; George Blowers, head of electrical engineering; Jim Chaf, head of chemical engineering; Frank Moseley head of ceramic engineering and Jim Haycock works manager at the English plant.

Mr. Dyson, who visited Trenton five years ago, twned the present visit to the Canadian and American plans an "exchange of ideas", between members of the two plants' engineering personnel.

He said that he and the Erie engineers from Great Yarmouth were particularly impressed with the research activity being carried on at the Trenton factory.

Commenting on changes in Trenton since his last visit, Mr. Dyson said that he was amazed at the growth of the town in five years. He said that he was also impressed with housing development especially.

Mrs. Dyson and his party will spend a few days at the parent plant and other American plants before returning to England.

No Tenders For Ambulance Service Made

TRENTON — By six o'clock last night, no tenders for the operation of ambulance service has been received at the town office and as five o'clock is the deadline set by council it was concluded that no operator will be present to bid on the service.

O. W. Larry clerk-comptroller, has been instructed to now draw up a contract for ambulance service operator from May 15 to Dec. 31, 1961.

The contract will be presented at the March meeting and the Trenton board of health must also approve the contract, and Trenton council will council allow for the payment of a $3,600 annual subsidy out of its funds.

The situation is by way of being a deficit idea as the health board recommended the payment of the subsidy to Mr. Rusbnell at its February meeting. At the Feb. 19 meeting of town council, Councillor Lloyd Worrall proposed that tenders for the service be called, and he was backed by Councillors Ron Burtt and James Duncan. But Councillors Ed Hall and Duncan McDonald voted against the motion. At a previous council meeting Mr. Rusbnell had been appointed to examine the town's ambulance books and had come back to the board of council and council with the recommendation that the subsidy be paid as he said that it barely covered operating expenses.

When tenders were called for the service, Mr. Rusbnell said that he was "surprised" at the move and that while he was interested in supplying the service, provided that the subsidy were paid, he would not tender for it, as he thought his previous offer covered his application.

Mrs. MacDonald Outlines Work Of H-S Assoc.

TRENTON — "In knowledge there is strength," was the closing remark of Mrs. Dave MacDonald of Belleville, to the Dufferin Home and School meeting held in the school this week. Mrs. MacDonald is Publications Chairman of the Belleville and District Home and School District Council, gave a very informative talk on the functioning of the H. and S. movement.

"We remember Education Day during the month of February because it was 46 years ago Mrs. Courtice, who was born in Bloomfield, Ontario, decided something drastically was needed to further the cause of education in the Province. She carried this further to the National level and with her husband the late Rev. Dr. Courtice, a Methodist minister, she worked relentlessly on the Needs of Parent-Teacher understanding."

Mrs. MacDonald mentioned that after Mrs. Courtice died in 1923, the Home and School Council has established her memory for her tremendous contribution, decided to set up a Travelling Library in her name to serve all the Home and School Associations, hence we have The Courtice Memorial Library.

Mrs. MacDonald then displayed many of the books available and highlighted for the members some of their fine qualities. It was the finest display of this type of literature ever seen by the staff at the Dufferin Home and School meeting and the members were most grateful to her for discussing the various publications on sale. Mrs. MacDonald after the meeting. Mrs. MacDonald was introduced by Mr. Walter Siervin, association treasurer, who said Mrs. MacDonald spent many days and nights in this work and what started out to be a hobby has almost become a full time job with her. The thanks of the meeting was given by Mrs. Norman Campey.

This was followed by a film on the work of the association, highly informative film dealing with shyness in various degrees and what was being done to help shy children. Mrs. Price conducted the discussion period after the film with everyone participating.

Mr. Donald J. Sutherland, president, welcomed the members and parents to the meeting and had a special word of thanks for the wonderful work being done by Mrs. MacDonald. He also had a word of welcome for Mrs. MacDonald's husband, Dave, an old Trenton boy, who was also present. A lunch was served at the conclusion of a very enjoyable evening.

ASTRO-JET AFIRE

There have been other fatal jet accidents in the U.S. but they either involved the military or were by or the aircraft were manufactured by other makers.

The 707 costs $5,500,000 and can carry up to 179 passengers, depending on the seating arrangement. The 707s are capable of speeds of more than 600 mph.

Peter Petersen, of Bayport, N.Y., an executive, said:

"I was pulling into Jamaica railroad station the morning when this plane was taking off. I just happened to turn my head and look out the train window and saw this giant airplane climbing and then head straight down to the ground.

"I couldn't believe my eyes. It was a brilliantly bright day and it was a 90 degree angle. I was so shocked I could hardly move."

American Airlines said the 87 passengers included three children and eight employees, in addition to the crew. Six of the passengers were travelling tourist class and 27 first class.

American Airlines said its last accident in scheduled operation was Feb. 3, 1958, when a DC-7 liner crashed in the East River in New York's La Guardia airport. That crash cost 65 lives.

Bodies were scattered over a huge area of the countryside and a trail of wreckage estimated to be a quarter mile long.

FOXBORO FIRE — Belleville firefighters were on the scene fi a futile attempt to put out the fire in the home of William Reilly, Foxboro, yesterday afternoon. Neighbors were first on the scene and managed to save a number of pieces of furniture and a few animals from the burning home. The house was the former Rombough residence.

Fire Destroys Foxboro House Loss Is $10,000

Fire yesterday afternoon completely destroyed the story-and-a-half frame home of Mr. and Mrs. William "Billy" Reilly of Foxboro, formerly the old homestead of the Rombough family.

There was no one home when the fire broke out.

Gusting winds fanned the roaring blaze out of control and firemen were unable to save the house.

Mrs. Airl Rombough occupied an apartment in part of the house, but was not home at the time. Some of her furnishings were saved before the house was engulfed in flames. She was taken to the home of her sister, Mrs. John William at Marmora.

Mr. and Mrs. Reilly lost everything in the blaze. It is understood they had taken care of their children to the doctor. When they returned home they found the house had been destroyed by fire.

Fe loss is estimated at approximately $10,000 and the cause is undetermined.

While at the fire, firemen receive a call from the department to proceed to the residence of Mrs. Floyd Ashley, in the vicinity across from Hopkins' service station. Two boys noticed a fire there and turned in the alarm.

The fire had apparently started around a front window. Fire Chief Vance said that neighbors had it nearly extinguished by the time the truck arrived.

The cause of this fire was not known either.

Firemen remained at the scene of the Reilly fire for nearly seven hours as the wind scattered the smouldering embers.

Tax Bite for Public Schools Down Half Mill From 1961

The good news for city public school supporters this week is that the tax bite for public schools cost in 1962 will be down slightly from last year.

The answer is that although school costs are up, increased assessment of about one million dollars, coupled with increased provincial grants will see the local levy actually reduced by something like half a mill.

The school board has estimated costs for the year at to $1,148,222.52 with the amount to be raised by local levy being $621,250.26. Total local levy last year for current and capital school costs was $613,849.

The big item on the schools expenditure list of course is instructional salaries which are estimated will cost $739,750. Plant operation will cost $103,-900 and plant maintenance $44,-000. Debenture costs at $151,-270, are up from the $150,389 figure last year. Instructional salaries cost $671,026 last year.

On the revenue side the board had a surplus of $51,-856 from last year. Legislative grants are estimated amount to $296,653, while rent which is capital grants of $65,-685.15 and a special grant of $525, bring total legislative grants to $361,078. In addition to this there will be an anticipation grant of $30,911, and a residential and farm assistant grant of another $60,097.

Board trustees were prepared by the special budget committee of William Townson, J. N. McKibbon and school administrator L. A. Kells with Mayor Lloyd Jeffs as chairman.

The budget was approved at a special meeting of the board this week.

School board members note that there are now 12 public schools operating in the city with another — the Parkdale school — to be opened in September. At the same time the Harry J. Clarke school opened last September, will be doubled in size.

Prior to the adoption of the budget the general public were invited to attend a meeting approved of a re-

George Kempf, vice-president and general manager of Erie Resistor of Canada, and A. A. Dyson, managing director of the Erie branch at Great Yarmouth, England, chat at a special dinner given by the Trenton company executive members for Mr. Dyson and a team of English engineers on Wednesday night at the Trenton Country Club.

Around The Tee

A grand rink of Mrs. Agnes Benn, Ron Benn, Mrs. Heather White and Mac White is leading the two-rink Quinte Curling Club are on the championship trail this coast-lead to a provincial title. This rink won the division title against rinks from Trenton Curling Club, Trenton RCAF, Gananoque, Kingston Curling Club and Syracuse Curling Club at the Trenton Curling Club on Wednesday.

In the first game the Belleville rink defeated Jack Hallett of Trenton 20-5. Then the defeated rink was assembled early in the year in anticipation of winning the division title but Mac White and his rink had too many guns for it as opposition. Every member was deadly on crucial plays and could draw "dead" to the four foot if necessary. In the second round the Belleville rink met the Gananoque rink, which defeated the Trenton RCAF entry but the local curlers had too much finesse in the pinches and won 8-2. In the meantime the Belleville entry by "Skit" Campbell defeated Lyle Edwards from the Cataraqui Club of Kingston and then met the White rink in the final game which Belleville won again had all the answers and won 8-4

The Quinte rink moves into Ottawa on Monday to meet the division winners and if successful in the two-out-of-three series, will proceed to Hamilton for the round-robin series for the provincial title. There will be eight rinks in the Hamilton playdowns

The skip of the winning rink stated the ice was in excellent shape and true and it was a most enjoyable playoff. Everyone curled exceptionally well," said the skip, "and should take some beating in future playdowns."

If any members wish to make the trip kindly get in touch with Mac White. He will book the Bank or place your name on the list reserved for clubhouse. The trip will cost $6 which includes ticket to the game. Let's get the draw and that means we'll be worth driving many miles to see.

The tournament for the Brier Trophy and the championship of Canada opens next week at the Memorial Gardens at Sydney, Nova Scotia and all enough members are available has been scheduled to open on Monday, Thursday, March 8th, on which three draws will be held. It is most likely that Rayne Secord of Ontario will meet Ernie Richardson of Saskatchewan or Cec Gervais of Alberta in one of the draws and that game should be worth driving many miles to see.

Brigadier Simester was born in Woodstock, Ontario and received his primary education at Woodstock Collegiate Institute. He entered The Salvation Army Officers' Training College from that denomination as an officer in June, 1930 he was stationed at several southern Ontario cities and towns including Toronto, Lindsay and Trenton. He served overseas with The Canadian Salvation Army Services from 1940 to 1945. His first appointment after the war was in charge of the Oshawa Corps. Brigadier Simester was thence appointed as Young People's Secretary for the Southern Ontario Division with headquarters in Hamilton following a similar appointment for the Quebec and Eastern Ontario Division with headquarters in Montreal. In 1955 he was appointed as the first editor of "The Crest", the Salvation Army's Canadian Youth Magazine. Two years later he was appointed as Commander of the Salvation Army for the Province of Alberta.

Prior to marriage, Mrs. Simester entered The Salvation Army Officers' Training College as Cadet Eleanor Gordon. She was commissioned in 1932 as Cadet Sergeant. Her first appointment as Captain, was in charge of the Corps at Gananoque.

Brigadier and Mrs. Simester have one son, Gordon, who is studying law at Queen's University.

They will reside on Hastings Drive in Belleville.

A special installation service will be conducted at the Belleville Citadel of the Salvation Army Pinnacle Street for Brigadier and Mrs. Simester at which will be present representatives from the Salvation Army National Headquarters, city council and local churches. This Worship service will be held on Wednesday, March 7 at 8.00 p.m.

W. T. Simpson Again Heads Advisory Board

W. T. Simpson was unanimously elected to the position as chairman of the Salvation Army Belleville Advisory Board at the recent annual meeting of the board. Envoy Bram Hiscock, the Salvation Army Correctional Services Officer for Belleville and District, was elected vice-chairman.

It was reported that the 1961 Red Shield Appeal had received $11,682.89, well in excess of its $10,000 goal, with which to carry on the Army's work in the community. Mr. Frank Domenico, the 1961 campaign chairman, was thanked for his leadership in this campaign.

Lt.-Col. S. Gennery announced that the International Staff Band from London, England, would be appointed to Belleville on April 10th. A full program will be presented by it in the ICIVS auditorium. Preparations for this event were discussed by the board members.

Lt.-Col. Gennery was thanked for his work during his three years in Belleville by Mr. Donaldson. The former will be taking up new duties in Halifax, Nova Scotia, in the near future.

Brigadier and Mrs. Alfred Sinnott will be Lt.-Col. Gennery's successors, it was stated.

The meeting adjourned with prayer.

Three Cubs Invested at Recent Meeting

The regular monthly meeting of the 2nd Belleville Boy Scout Group Committee, was held in Christ Church parish hall, February 19th. Due to the severe weather, attendance was down a little. It is hoped that more interested fathers will attend the next meeting.

Scoutmaster R. E. Ingraham reported that the Scouts under the leadership of ASL Terry Johnston had passed successful tests completed on Saturday, January 27th. The weather was ideal, and the outing was thoroughly enjoyed by the boys. Former Scoutmaster Lionel Blaker, of Peterborough visited Camp Saturday afternoon.

THREE CUBS INVESTED

In the absence of Akela Kenny, who is recuperating following surgery, Raksha, Mrs. H. Gibson, reports that three Cubs, Stephen Reid, Tom Rogers, and George Rogers, were invested as Cubs, on Monday night. Congratulations boys. In spite of bad weather there were 19 boys at this meeting, which shows just how keen they are on Cubbing.

The next group committee meeting will be held on March 19th at 7.30 p.m. in the Parish Hall.

Scouts, Guides Sponsor Hobby Show at Kiwanis Centre

Did you get around to the hobby show at the Kiwanis Centre last Friday night? If you did then you were undoubtedly impressed by the versatility displayed by the Brownie, Cubs, Guides and Scouts as displayed by the various exhibits.

There were collections of rocks, stamps, matchbook covers, miniature cars, model trains, to mention a few. There was woodworking — sawing, metal-working, painting and sculpture. Displays of knots, flags, semaphore, signaling equipment, birdhouses, log cabins and many other items indicated the wide variety of interests indulged in by all age groups.

It was a fine show for the display that some few groups seemed to have taken the occasion seriously.

FRIENDLY RIVALRY

One can only hope that in future years the idea may catch on and a spirit of friendly rivalry develop to enhance a worthwhile project.

Those who participated are to be congratulated. Those who attended found a reward for the effort expended; those who met their helpers in the success of the effort now participated in exhibiting might like to take a look at the possibility of doing his best next year.

Very definitely a word is in order congratulating the Rangers and Rovers under Mrs. Ashley and Mr. Murray who not only provided the opportunity but supervised the work. What ever success was attained was in no small part due to their unstinting efforts.

Right Gas, Wrong Car?

About a year ago Douglas Fisher, M.P. for Port Arthur, listed 13 reasons why he thought the NDP which he now represents in parliament had poor prospects for winning the support of the Canadian people.

These points, in summary, are:

"Labor unions are unpopular with the majority of Canadians and seem incapable of improving this opinion;

"Most Canadians are not political animals and they tend toward caution and conservatism. Radicalism and radical political parties make them uncomfortable;

"The Canadian labor movement is disconnected by space; its political unity is weak; it has much traditional and jurisdictional rivalry; it has few outstanding leaders;

"Few unionists or union locals have experience in partisan politics and those who have, mostly labored in a losing cause;

"The union movement does not exhibit strong growth characteristics. Its organizing impetus has run down;

"The mass of organized labor is centred in large urban areas which are traditionally underrepresented in parliament, vis-a-vis rural areas;

"There is little class-consciousness in Canada, even among union members, and thus there is little imperative or driving bitterness which gave the British Labor Party its dynamic for so long;

"There are no well edited, colorfully written or presented media means within labor's control or on its side;

"Organized labor in Canada seems to have few academics or intellectuals in its ranks and very little, almost no, support in the universities or colleges;

"The new political venture has roused no stirring response from French-Canadian unionism;

"The United States links of most Canadian unions are not only a political embarrassment, they prevent any seizing of the strongest force in this decade, that is a burgeoning Canadianism whose reverse coin is anti-Americanism;

"Women are an increasing part of the Canadian labor force and the potential vote, and they tend to be more conservative than men politically and are much more difficult to organize in union terms."

This critique of the party which he now represents would appear to still be an influencing factor on Mr. Fisher's thinking if his remarks in the House of Commons regarding the resignation of Mr. Argue from the NDP are any criterion.

Whilst these points are certainly the result of a positive self-appraisal, with which we can find little fault, they do suggest that a negative atmosphere surrounds the prospects and framework of the NDP.

We cannot help but wonder how a person can admit these facts and still hold faith with the movement or party which they comprise. We do not suggest that these facts should or do affect in any way the principles and ideals which Mr. Fisher, Mr. Argue or any other individual hold dear.

The public, however, may wonder how an individual, if he does wish to remain true to his basic principles and concepts of better government, can allow himself to attempt to propagate these views via such an apparently unsatisfactory vehicle.

We question not the right of the existence of a party, but we do wonder as to whether the right form of a party was created or whether, perhaps, there exists a need for another party unfettered by affiliation with any specific segment of our society. It may well be that what was originally required was a fresh, new party representing a new era of political thought but independent in its ability to represent the fullest possible range of Canadian society.

This may be the crux of the situation in which the NDP and some of its representatives now find themselves, the high octane philosophical fuel does not match the set pattern of a vintage organizational vehicle.

The Direct Approach

For those worried about the constantly increasing tax burden which citizens have to assume, a refreshing approach, albeit somewhat drastic, has been attempted by a small group of citizens of New Guinea.

Angered over an annual personal income tax amounting to about $4.50 this group of Papuans repelled a group of police sent to apprehend a number of tax defaulters with axes.

This is expressing the ides of tax cutting via a very simple and direct approach.

Federal Election Costs Expected to Hit $20 Million

BY RICHARD JACKSON
(from The Ontario Intelligencer's Ottawa Bureau)

OTTAWA — The fast-approaching national election is bound to be far and away the most costly of Canadian political history.

Because, nonetheless, though it is, there seems to be something mentally unhealthy implied in the contributing and collecting of campaign funds, the four Federal parties are coy about quoting figures — although the backing of the party or your choice with a few dollars would seem only to be an exercise of the fires democratic process.

The one solid statistic is the $16,000,000 that Chief Electoral Officer Nelson Castonguay says it's going to cost the treasury.

He is the engineer in charge of the election machinery, a complicated and costly device comprising the staff of 265 across Canada, and the material and supplies that it requires to poll and count the votes.

Last time out, in '58 when some 9,000,000 voted, the tab was $9,000,000 or $1 per vote.

This time, another million will be going to the polls, so at the still going price of a buck a head, the bill should run $10,000,000 — but let's take a few thousand either way.

That's $10,000,000 just to start.

It's the part that shows.

What never gets out is what it costs the parties and the individual candidates.

This has been variously guesstimated at between $10,000,000 and $20,000,000.

EACH VOTE $3

That could make the final accounting somewhere in the $20,000,000, or between $2 and $3 for each vote.

There are 263 Federal constituencies (two of them are dual-seat), and setting some kind of a financial target for the field, the Liberals are beating the bushes for an average $10,000 per riding.

This would be a little better than par for the course, which falls somewhere between a maximum $12,000 and a minimum near zero.

That's the official accounting, of course, to comply with the law to report each candidate, winner or loser, is required to make to Chief Electoral Officer.

In the '58 election, the biggest bundle was spent by the losing Conservative candidate, Mr. A. Reginald Lawson in the Montreal suburban riding of Mount Royal, won by the Liberal contender, Alan McNaughton, currently chairman of Parliament's potent Public Accounts Committee.

The candidate who pinched the campaign pennies fight-est was a Conservative, and, of course, in Quebec, a loser, a Mr. Eugene Dorais who spent what he officially reported to the Chief Electoral Office's ear as "nil" in the party's riding.

Almost certainly, Mr. Dorais' "nil" was no more realistic than Mr. Lawson's $24,000 and; to be practical, no more surprising.

WHERE IT GOES

Because, not so many years ago, before it became politically expedient for candidates to be so coyly modest, a high-up campaign spending was registered with the Chief Electoral Officer from one of the "nil" or campaign spending something just short of $100,000.

So striking a firm figure for the parties themselves is just about in the realm of fantasy in educated imagination as in the case of the party's accounting with the guesstimates of the politicians prober.

While shooting for $20,000 per riding, a target of just over $5,000,000, they admit they will be lucky to hit $12,000,000.

The Conservatives as the party in power, would have less difficulty, having campaign funds and if the Liberals collect $3,000,000, they should be able to perhaps about double it.

Campaign contributions and a surprising number of those who help fill the party hope chests hedge their bets traditionally are split two to one as between the "ins" and the "outs."

They're shattered and shaken CCF-NDP, still falling on its collective face and unable to mount anything even resembles a national campaign, has appealed for $1,000,000 from organized labor, and the farm group (if any are listening) and should come off best lucky to get that much.

Finally, Social Credit, financed largely in oil-rich Alberta and politically oddball British Columbia, is the only one spending something better than $1,000,000.

Add it all up and it tops $20,000,000, which makes your "X" for the Federal election $2 and perhaps some odd cents.

Strictly Personal

Lessons Tend To Kill Talent In Children

By SYDNEY J. HARRIS

Formerly Personal Prejudices:

Piety without social responsibility leads to a smug self-satisfaction: while social responsibility without piety leads to idolatry of the state or of some elite; only a firm combination of the two gives "salvation" in meaning, either for society or for the individual.

It is true that success may spoil some, but the way a man behaves when he loses money is a much surer indication of his basic character.

Women secretly believe that all men are children, and are never more so than when they men prepare to fight for some abstraction, like democracy, or more existential persons, are moved only by tariffs and not by slogans.

When we say we are "doing our best" we usually mean "under the circumstances: for no one knows, really, what he really is until he faces the ultimate crisis, and then we realize how little he yesterday knew existed.

It is scientific that the person who is not pleased with others is never pleased with himself; no matter what he practice. It seems to be: the chronic faultfinder is the chronic self-deceiver, the profound sense of dissatisfaction with himself.

One of the finest and briefest prayers I have ever heard was Goethe's: "Give us light, and give us light to that we don't stand in our own way; let us do from moment to moment what should be done, and give us clear eyes for the consequences of our actions."

When we are young, we believe that speaking the truth is the most important thing; as we grow older, if we mature, we learn that speaking the truth lovingly is the only way to make it count — for the truth we love merely cuts without curing.

WHAT ABOUT FAITH HEALING?

Great emphasis is being made in religious circles today on the matter of divine healing.

There are still some diehards who claim that miracles of healing never did occur, do not occur now, and never will occur. Most people, however, believe that healing processes in mind and body are accelerated by religious faith. Some people believe in nothing but divine healing. Others are so confident that scientific medical practice is ideal to be used in the treatment of disease that they turn shrinks down in great disdain upon any faith-healing pretentions.

The truth would appear to lie between the two extreme positions, one of complete faith and one of disbelief. When our Lord carried on His healing mission in Judaea and Galilee, there did not exist even the simplest processes of modern medical treatment. A person had to be healed by the enactment of miracle or not healed at all. Today that is all changed. Modern medicine in its finest practice is the doctor and what he does! But the patient who has religious faith has a powerful factor working for his recovery. Furthermore, there are many cases of people before which modern medical treatment stands helpless. There are millions of people who claim that having been given up by the doctors they somehow managed to recover to everybody's astonishment (including the doctors').

Only God knows the whole truth. We can be friendly, tolerant, and grateful.

THE PACKSACK

By GREGORY CLARK

Distinctly I remember a stylish lady, a friend of my grandmother's and arbiter of morals and manners for all the town, saying with distaste:

"He is the kind of man who smokes on the street."

Smoking, in the opinion of a sharp, almost fifty years ago, was a vice. And like other vices, it should be practised in private.

In the buffet parlor car on the train yesterday, there were only two other passengers besides myself: a middle-aged lady, and a fat gentleman. He was at the far end of the car, the lady was in the middle, and I was at the other. The fat man was smoking a cigar, I was smoking my pipe. And presently the lady began fanning the air with a newspaper.

"Pardon me," said the fat man, "but does my smoking bother you, ma'am?"

"Not at all, dear!" said she, with the expertly some poor man have to suffer all their lives.

"I sympathize with you", said the fat man. "I have three children, called perfumes, which so many women douse themselves with nowadays."

I knocked out my pipe for fear of getting into the fight.

To Your Good Health

Milk Is the Perfect Food For Human Consumption

Inquiries keep coming in about whether a form of milk is as good as another. Rather than try to answer each individually, I offer the following to provide ample background on the subject.

First, milk, whether, it's whole, homogenized, or standard — anything labelled "milk" contains approximately 3.5 per cent butterfat and 8.5 per cent other solids made up of proteins, milk sugar, and, a dozen minerals including the important one, calcium. The vitamins, in varying amounts, are chiefly A and D. Small amounts of B and C are also present.

So with all its fats, proteins, minerals, carbohydrates (sugars) and a pretty fine array of vitamins, you have the reason why milk is called the perfect food for human use.

Yes, I read of the recent storm stirred up by a person who contended that older people shouldn't drink milk. But I trust you have noticed the resounding lack of agreement from everyone else. Milk remains the closest to a balanced natural food that is known.

The interesting difference between evaporated and ordinary milk is that about half the water has been removed. Undiluted for cupful, evaporated milk will have about twice as much of the fat, protein and minerals. You'll usually find on the label a formula to show how much water to add to reconstitute evaporated milk to the original dilution.

Then powdered milk, almost all moisture is removed, so that the solids remain, and the addition of water restores them to the equal nutritional value. Whether you prefer the consistency and texture of evaporated milk or milk in its original form is, of course, a personal matter.

One of the added values of evaporated milk for babies is that it is sterilized and therefore safely measure, obviously.

Now skim milk, whether milk, skim milk powder, and non-fat milk. In all of these, the butterfat content has been removed, leaving the other solids. There's even evaporated skim milk on the market now.

Skim milk is fine for reducing — but it is not for growing. Removal of the butterfat removes the vitamin A, and also removes the A, D and E vitamins. This should be kept in mind so that other sources can be used for these vitamins.

The amount of vitamin D varies quite widely in milk, depending on whether the cows are eating fresh, green forage and are out in the sun, or are eating dry feeds and are inside, or any rate not in the sunshine most of the time.

Much milk has Vitamin D and sometimes other vitamins added. Evaporated milk ordinarily has A, D and E. Vitamins A, D and D are customarily added to butter. Fresh milk has a small amount of Vitamin C, too, but this is lost as the milk is exposed to the air. The important B Vitamins are present in all forms of milk.

Dear Dr. Molner: Is there a positive way to tell whether a man is the father of a certain child? — Mrs. W.G.

No, the best that laboratory tests can do is to reveal that he may be the father of a child — or, in certain combinations of blood types, say positively that he is not. No test yet devised can say definitely that he is.

TODAY'S TALK

By GEORGE MATTHEW ADAMS

DO SOMETHING

The man who has little money is not to be pitied. Neither is he who is in trouble or who lives through pain or sorrow or hardship. He alone is to be pitied, he alone is unfortunate who has nothing to do or to live for.

There is nothing to compensate for an idle life.

There never has been and there never will be a human being with nothing to do, with no plan, who can hope for happiness.

We can only hope for the little stretches of happiness anyway. And these periods come at us because of what we do, what we think, what we achieve through troubled hours and the days of anxious waiting for the ripening of the fruits of our labor.

But this doesn't mean that we don't need a friend to help and encouragement. It means most that we must have a purpose. We are dependent creatures. No man can live to himself alone and have any measure of satisfaction come to him.

No matter how gifted a man or woman may be, they can be little personal respect unless a useful work dominates and rules and a plan of life has been evolved as a controlling affair from day to day.

This is a much better world since it has been recognized that a female brain is every bit as good as a male brain. Size of brain has nothing to do with the quality of intelligence.

Has there ever been a man born with nothing to live for a greater or less degree inspired and nourished by the faith and belief of others?

And so we have woman with things to live for that add to the greatness of the world. And if she can do nothing else she has given a man a real fix worth and greatness when she has found in his faith and loyalty that is able to hold him through any storm.

SCOTT'S SCRAP BOOK

By R. J. SCOTT

'Lines on Life'

By Dr. Stuart E. Rosenberg

The story is told of a man lost in a jungle. Desperately, he sought to escape, but the thick foliage seemed to ensnare him. From the distance he beheld a frightening, terrifying sight. The ferocious beast seemed to be approaching. Though he wished to retreat, there was no place to run; what is more, he was frozen in his tracks with fear. Yet, as this wild object came closer, he observed, with great relief, that it seemed now to look like a domesticated, tame animal, and was not what he had previously imagined. As the creature came closer still, he discovered, to his amazement, that it was not an animal at all, but the figure of a man. He lurched forward to extend his arms in friendly embrace and just then, made an even greater discovery: this was not just another man — it was his brother.

Distance distorts. From afar, even brothers cannot see each other, nor recognize their brotherhood. "Is not this our world?" we are often isolated from the "world" of our fellow human beings. We understand, or recognize only what we are doing, thinking, feeling — and neglect to hearken to what's beyond. The silence we take is often overly-defensive; we seek primarily to protect our own position, hardly ever get to know the viewpoint of the other fellow. And this, because we see him only darkly, as through a dim glass. We are even capable of great delusions: we imagine that we're looking at or listening to others, when indeed, we are not. Only our own voice interests us; too often, we are bored by the sound of others.

We talk much about brotherhood, and yet, have difficulty recognizing our own brothers when we see them. Perhaps, we're giddy of not even troubling to look too far beyond our prejudices.

The real tests to our integrity as brotherly men may be found in the way in which we answer such questions as these:

1. Do we accept religious or political differences as normal? Are we capable of living with those whose profound beliefs that at variance with our own?

2. Do we recognize the possibility that even our seeming may provide part of the solution? Or are we too confident that they can only be the cause of the problem?

3. Are we temperamentally conditioned to the possibility of experimentation — with new ideas, new forms and fresh ideas, or the introduction of old ideas which were never tried? Or are we emotionally afraid of the new and the untried?

4. Can we learn to begin again, to try again, even after we have failed? Or are we permanently committed to saving our own face, even if it means destroying ourselves, in spite of ourselves?

5. Are we prepared to question? Or are we satisfied that we have most of the available answers? And if we think that we have the answers, what are we willing to do in order to make them available to others?

6. Do we really believe in what we say we believe? Do we are satisfied to say things that sound believable, without ever trying to find out what it is we honestly believe?

7. Do we strive to recognize the true equality of groups not our own? Or are we smugly complacent, so long as we have arrived at what we think are "final" conclusions.

8. What do we really know about our neighbor's religion, his family life, the things he holds dear, his profoundest aspirations? Or don't we really care?

We may not score with all the good and noble answers, at this stage. We can never begin at the top. The tragedy is often we never move even to try to begin at the beginning.

Canada, he said, has a population of a little more than 18,000,000 and about $2,000,000,000 in currency circulation. The U.S. has more than 180,000,000 people and about $29,000,000,000 in circulation.

Heavy Damage In 3-Car Crash At Intersection

Damage was extensive in a collision which occurred at the intersection of Bridge and College streets shortly before noon on Wednesday.

It is understood the brakes failed on a city bus, causing it to go through a red light at the intersection. At the same time a taxi cab, driven by Gordon St. Louis, was proceeding north on College Street across Bridge Street. The bus slammed into the side of the cab and as a result of the impact, the taxi struck the side of a car proceeding south on Colemans Hill driven by M. Huddelson of West Huntingdon.

The bus was being driven back to the city garage at the time by Hugh Kerr of R.R. 7 Belleville, an employee of the Belleville Transit Commission.

There were no injuries as the result of the accident.

An official at the Transit Commission office said the bus had gone through a lot of water while working on the west hill and the brakes got wet, causing the failure.

The fruit of the vine and of the sea are teamed in Broiled Fillets Continental to indisputably demonstrate the affinity wine and fish have for each other. White wine's subtle piquancy delightfully develops the delicate flavor and texture that are natural to the fillets. Secondary seasoners of onions and olives bring their own special accents to the dish. This recipe also proves a point long recognized by practitioners of the European culinary approach: entrée cookery need hold no terrors for the cook, nor need it be expensive. Continental Broiled Fish Fillets With Wine Seasoner

If you're a novice, there's no better way to begin your exclusive into wine cookery than with fish. These two foods have a natural affinity for one another. Broiled Fillets Continental proves the point perfectly. Used as a basting liquid as well as the foundation for the sauce, white wine gives a pleasant piquancy to fish fillets and plays up their natural mild taste. Onion slices and stuffed olives have secondary but seasoning roles.

BROILED FILLETS CONTINENTAL

1 pound fish fillets, salt and pepper, juice of half a lemon, 2 tablespoons butter or margarine (divided), 2 small onions, sliced thin, ½ cup dry white wine, 1 tablespoon flour, ½ cup milk, ¾ cup sliced stuffed olives

If frozen, let fillets thaw on refrigerator shelf. Separate fillets; place or preheated buttered broiling pan. Sprinkle with salt, pepper, lemon juice. Arrange onion slices over fish. Dot with 2 tablespoons of the butter. Place in broiler, about 3 inches from source of heat. Broil (basting frequently with wine) about 10 minutes, or until fish flakes easily when tested with a fork. Arrange fish and onion slices on a hot platter. Melt remaining tablespoon of butter in small saucepan. Blend in flour. Drain off liquid remaining in broiler pan; combine with milk and gradually blend into flour mixture. Cook, stirring until thickened and smooth. Stir in olives. Pour sauce over fish. Serve immediately. Makes 3 to 4 servings.

Careers for Girls

Is Social Work the Career for You?

Miss Doris Clark, Master of Social Work, has had special training in psychology and vocational guidance. In preparing this series, "Careers for Girls," Miss Clark has interviewed career women in the fields she is covering, as well as counsellors.

Doris Clark's human relations column, "Succeed with Living" runs regularly in The Ontario Intelligencer.

by Doris C. Clark, M.S.W
(Fourth in a Series for Teenagers on Careers for Girls)

Do you enjoy English more than algebra? And social studies more than arithmetic? Do you love to figure out why people act the way they do? Perhaps, then you should be finding out something about the profession of social work in training. Here are the likes I have mentioned as apt to "go with" the girl who will be successful in this interesting profession.

And profession it is; demanding a university education and then one or two years' post-graduate work in a recognized school of social work, of which Canada now has eight.

WHAT DOES SHE DO?

The child who is unhappy or in trouble, and the family the worker's help. Perhaps his own parents are ill or separated and he has to be taken from them. The social worker can make him feel that someone understands him; she can find for him a foster mother who will like him, be kind to him as if he were her own.

For the child need for help to adopt a baby, the worker can arrange that, too, finding just the right one for them.

Then you know that some families seem to have trouble getting along together, don't you? Sometimes a person from outside who can help them find out if the reasons why people do the things they do can pave the way toward happier family life.

Take for instance the Brown's. They spent quite a bit of Mr. Brown's savings on a honeymoon and then set about to buy furniture and a house.

Then bables began to come, three of them, one after another. Mrs. Brown had serious illnesses and the bills piled up. The children were sickly. Mr. Brown seemed always to be fighting with Mrs. After five years of marriage, Mrs. Brown found herself wondering why she had married in for all this trouble.

GOOD LISTENER

The social worker who came (in response to a neighbors' call) was friendly and Mrs. Brown poured out her story — the years of illness, money troubles and Mr. Brown's growing impatience with her.

She still loved him, she said, but it seemed as if everything had gotten off on the wrong track.

But the social worker was able to persuade this discouraged young mother that something could be done about her troubles. Worry and failure could put a strain on love, she said. She asked for a list of all the debts. She arranged for the children to get a health examination.

On a second call, she talked with Mr. and Mrs. Brown together and worked out with them a plan to set aside an allowance from each week's pay toward the debts they were struggling with. Then she arranged for them to join a "Married Couples" group where at least one night a week they could put aside family cares and mix with others their own age.

The worker visited the family every week for a year, then once a month, encouraging them in their progress. Then she began, advising Mrs. Brown about food budgets, helping her with the mom's to understand why they were irritable with each other and introducing them to mom patient and cheerful.

Two years later, on her final call, the worker found a much neat Mrs. Brown and healthy rosy-cheeked children. Mrs. Brown proudly displayed a new bank book recording the beginnings of a debt-free savings account. Her thanks to the worker for her wonderful help were overwhelming.

CASE WORK, GROUP WORK, COMMUNITY PLANNING

This is just one of the jobs the social worker can do. Encouraging or private service the neighborhood with Near-Neighbor Service, psychological people, workers with children and others with special needs. Or she helps make the grade alone. In recreation centres she can work with groups of boys or girls, character through team play and competition. Through Big Sister and Big Brother organizations, she can guide teen-agers in social activities. Through welfare councils she can help plan for the betterment of her community. In each of these fields she can work.

Besides this, social workers very across the country and are increasing as the profession becomes more needed. The usual vacation period is three or four weeks annually and most agencies have retirement plans.

Because Canada has only one-third of the social workers that there are jobs for, her services are always in demand. These skilled "helpers with human problems" can get about fast.

(The new secondary school program in Ontario broadens your choice of subjects. To learn more about social work and what studies will lead you into it, ask the teacher or guidance counsellor in your own high school).

The next article "Occupational and Physical Therapy" will appear Monday, March 5.

Mr., Mrs. Daniel T. Patrick Mark 65th Wedding Anniversary

CAMPBELLFORD—Mr. and Mrs. Daniel T. Petherick quietly celebrated their 65th wedding anniversary at their home at Healey Falls near here on Saturday. The occasion came just ten days after Mr. Petherick's 90th birthday.

Although they are now retired, the couple farmed at their Healey Falls home until 30 years ago. They were married at the home of Mrs. Petherick's parents, Mr. and Mrs. Thomas Barnum, on February 24th, 1897. The late Rev. R. L. Edwards performed the ceremony.

They attended Zion church at Petherick's Corners, about five miles north-east of Campbellford. Mrs. Petherick was the former Netta Jane Barnum.

Mr. Petherick worked as a taxidermist at the building of the Healey Falls power house and is said to have moved the first stone for the building of the plant. He was also for many years road superintendant of Seymour township.

The couple have six children: Harold and Melville of Campbellford; Murray, who now operates the farm; Fred of Kingstone; Mrs. Carl Stephens (Etta), of Campbellford, and Mrs. William Begg (Jessie) of Norwood. There are nine grandchildren and 28 great-grandchildren. The entire family was on hand on Saturday to honor their parents at a quiet dinner.

Mr. and Mrs. Petherick received messages of congratulation from the Prime Minister, the Queen, Rod Webb, Bob Thompson, and the Hon. W. A. Goodfellow, as well as many others.

Col. P. Wills Legion Branch Meets at Hall

The regular meeting of the Col. Thos. Willis Branch, of the Royal Canadian Legion, was held Monday evening in the Legion hall on Pinnacle St.

A former member of the Branch, Mrs. Patricia Bach, was initiated; the third ex-service woman to join the branch since the first of the year. Mrs. Ina Rollins was enrolled at the January general meeting, while a special meeting was called later to initiate Mrs. Marjory Ruse. The increased membership is gratifying to the president, Mrs. R. Kirby, who is striving to almost double the enrolment of the past season.

TRIBUTE PAID

During the two minutes of silence Comrade Len Taylor was remembered.

Arrangements were made for several ladies, accompanied by their husbands, to attend the opening of the new Legion hall at Lakefield, on Saturday, March 10, and to continue on to Cox Hill for a zone rally on Sunday.

At an executive meeting chairmen were appointed to head the various committees, and they in turn, will select committee members.

After a discussion, led by sports convener, Mrs. Janet MacDonald, it was decided that following the business session of the regular meetings the remainder of the evening would spent either playing cards or darts as the members preferred and possibly next year enter zone competition.

WIDELY TRAVELLED

During 1960 Governor-General and Mme. Vanier entertained more than 11,500 people and travelled 15,600 miles on official visits.

Women's Institute

The February meeting of the Quinte Women's Institute was held at the home of Mrs. K. R. Vivian, Shannonville, with an attendance of 31 members and four visitors.

The meeting was opened by the president Mrs. J. Parrott, who welcomed everyone and thanked Mrs Vivian for opening her home for the afternoon.

All letters were read and business dealt with. Thank-you notes were received.

Mrs. Parrott asked all to stand for one minute of silence for Mrs Putnam, a member who had passed away.

Mrs. Parrott asked the resolutions convener to take charge of the meeting. As Mrs. S. MacDonald was ill, Mrs. K. Vivian took the chair. Mrs. MacDonald gave the motto which was read by Mrs. Robertson. The motto was "Three Things to Give"; aims to the needy; comfort to the sad; and appreciation to the worthy. It had been well prepared.

Mrs. Vivian introduced the guest speaker for the afternoon, Mrs. C. Holmes.

As the topic was on "Resolutions", she chose the resolution of a full course meal, as follows: soup, the broth for contentment and happiness; entree, you must give love, smiles and pleasant speech; hospitality, you should break down all grudges and share good will with strangers; dessert, memories come unbidden and brings resting to old sorrows; friendship, as it plant it brings sound fruit not bitter. One must be a friend to the neighbors; fruits, good resolutions are not stars and if one looks hither, he must aim higher than tree tops. A woman does most good in the home. One must have more faith in herself and rededicate herself to a better membership.

Mrs. Holmes closed by reading a prayer, a "Song for Happiness".

Mrs. Vivian thanked Mrs. Holmes for her fine talk and Mrs. Parrott tendered a vote of thanks to Mrs. Holmes.

The hostess and her lunch committee, Mrs. A. Brook, Mrs. Doxtator, Mrs. Fitzgerald and Mrs. MacDonald served lunch, and a social time was enjoyed.

Does Boy Like Girl?

DORIS CLARK

DEAR DORIS:—I am 14 and I like this boy very, very much. He started going around with my best friend and that night I cried myself to sleep. Then she moved to Vancouver.

Then I went to a party with him, and since I have seen him quite often. Once when we were with a bunch of kids, he said that I was his girl friend.

I don't know if he was fooling or not. I don't believe in going steady and he doesn't either. How can I find out if he likes me or if he is playing me for a sucker?

I got to know. You may think I'm wrong, but I don't care. My mother and father like him very much. Please help me.—UNCERTAIN.

DEAR UNCERTAIN—What makes you suspect the worst, Desperate Daisy?

If neither of you believes in steadies, what does being his girl friend mean? He likes you—yes. But this desperate crush will pass, so keep one eye open to the other handsome Romeos around you.

TO MIXED UP—By all means get to know him better than "just a smile and greeting" before you "further the relationship." Don't trust that "love-at-first-sight" business without taking a good second look.

OPEN FRIDAY EVENINGS

Otto W. — They've hired my emergency offer in government. Now let him stand by them.

Otto W. — My parents have the four of us — myself, my two brothers and my sister. Five years ago, during a Fourth of July weekend when all the others were away an emergency arose. My father had been sailing and under my mother's care, when she suffered a heart attack with no one to look after either of them. My wife and I took them into our home, thinking it would be to tide them over a short interval of hardship.

Well, talk about The Man Who Came to Dinner; it's five years now. None of the others has made the slightest move to relieve us of this strain. Our parents' apartment was closed up that summer. Since then my wife and I haven't had a vacation. The main burden of financing and tending is on us. It's not easy. Dad is hard of hearing and turns the radio on full-blast. They require special diets. The problems increase, but the others ignore them.

Conrad W. — Otto has always made all the decisions concerning our parents himself. As the oldest, he never consulted the rest of us. If his present undertaking is too hard, it's just too bad. He has only himself to blame. He took the old folks out of their home. He closed down their apartment. Now let him keep them.

He was just playing the big shot that summer. He knew where I and my brother and sister were. He could have summoned us. Together we could have made some joint arrangement for keeping our parents in their own home, and we'd turns watching over them. But no, he made a single-hand decision to run things alone. Now he's getting tired of the grand gesture. He was confident we'd all chip in for such a clean sweep. Our position is that it wasn't at all necessary. Our folks might still be in their own home. This is Otto's project.

The Council: The father of this man has defective hearing which, assuring it may be, spares him, at least, from the sounds of such an ugly debate over who's doing too much, who too little, in caring for him and his wife.

There seems to be some basic acrimony between these brothers, or between Otto and the others, to which the plight of the parents lends fuel but certainly hasn't been the cause. It's one of those personality clashes that goes "way back" and on. For a fuller and more objective picture of all these siblings, should be probed and treated separately.

But taking the picture as presented, the Council can attempt a resolution. There's a mysterious side to Otto's position. Why did he wait five years before protesting the unequal assignment? Was there enough of his parents' money on tap to ease the blow? Was he as highhanded as Conrad claims, or just humane?

As for Conrad and the others, they have their excuses are too easy. They salve their conscience by calling the care of their parents "Otto's project," merely because Otto took some emergency steps solo. Would they have preferred that Otto flee the scene, too, as did they, and leave the parents to the mercy of the neighbors and the police? Their sulking is mainly defensive rationalization at shirking their own duty.

... and to recrimination, say ... With no backbiting, eyes to the future — a better one for the parents and for Otto's household, a more participating one for Conrad Co.

Here are three suggestions, all aimed at keeping the elderly pair together: 1. Three months a year in each of the homes of their four children. 2. A new apartment with maid service, financed by an equal basic contribution from each and, plus "extras" as required. 3. Placement in a good nursing home.

Women's Institutes

WALLBRIDGE W.I.

WALLBRIDGE — Mrs. Griffin Ketcheson was hostess for the February meeting of the Wallridge Women's Institute. The meeting was held on Monday night instead of the regular Thursday in order to listen to the Farm Forum broadcast on Technical and Vocational training.

Vice-president, Mrs. Morley Phillips was in charge and conducted the business meeting before the broadcast. A discussion period followed during which many different views on the subject were discussed, after much debate the question sheet was answered. Due to a power failure almost immediately following the broadcast, this was all quite difficult.

The leaders for the 4H Homemaking Clubs for the spring project "Featuring Fruit" are: club 1 — Mrs. G. Ketcheson and Mrs. C. Vanderveldt; club 2 — Mrs. D. Shorey and Mrs. W. Shorey.

Mrs. R. Hart, Jr., won the draw.

The hostess and committee served refreshments.

Couple Honored With Shower

MENTO — Springbrook hall was comfortably filled on Friday evening when relatives, friends and neighbors gathered to honor Mr. and Mrs. Lorne (Karen Ketcheson) on their recent marriage.

Mr. Ken Mumby acted as chairman and commenced the evening's entertainment by calling the young couple and expressed their sincere wishes to them. Mr. Keith VanHorne and daughter sang two numbers. Mr. Glen Shorey read the address and Lorne and Karen were presented with a space saver, as well as several individual gifts for which they suitably replied, thanking everyone for the lovely gifts as well as all who had contributed and were responsible in any way toward the success of the shower. The young couple invited all to visit them at anytime. Refreshments were served and dancing enjoyed to the music of Mr. and Mrs. S. Nelson.

SPEAKING of MANNERS

PATRICIA LEWIS

DON'T TAKE YOUR DIET OUT TO DINNER

To do or diet?

Should he accept, knowing full well that the calorie-count is well beyond his range? Or should he refuse, and nibble his five-calorie carrot sticks in righteous isolation?

If the invitation is tempting, other questions come to mind. If the dieter accepts, must he eat everything that's offered? May he correctly decline foods that would throw his count out of whack for a week? If he does have to refuse a helping, should he plead "diet" out loud or simply say "No, thank you," and swallow his apologies?

Before accepting any dinner invitation, the weight-watcher would be wise and courteous to weigh the pros and calories very carefully. Anyone who is on a strict diet — doctor's order, you know — should decline any dinner invitation until his calorie countdown is completed.

But the middle-of-the-roader, the dieter who is cutting down to clock in his waistline a bit, should recognize that acceptance of an invitation does involve a few gastronomic obligations at the dinner table.

Correctly, every dinner guest — the dieter as well — should taste a little over everything that's put on his plate when the hostess is serving. At informal dinners in servantless homes, the hostess usually puts some of everything on each plate. She then passes them down the line until each guest is served. Very often, it's hard to catch her eye and discourage her from giving you "potatoes" look. If she does give each guest a choice, then the dieter can politely decline whatever does not fit into his dietary budget, and his conscience, may combine with the diner's ease.

If the service is buffet, there's no problem, and the calorie conscious one may pretend on the casserole and stock up on lettuce leaves.

If food is offered by a hovering waitress, the dieter still has a courteous "out." As she starts to serve an unwanted food, he can murmur "No," or indicate with a nod of his head that he'd rather pass it by. The transaction is private, and even the hostess need not be the wiser.

"Optimals," such as rich sauces and gravies, may properly be declined, even if the hostess is doing the honors at the end of the table. Bread, rolls and what else may be voted upon when passed beneath the diner's quivering nose.

When refusing foods, the calorie-conscious need not be more than "No, thank you."

Above all, he shouldn't launch into a lecture on weight control and offer a few observations on the perils of overeating. A weighty discussion should be avoided at all costs.

The courteous dieter, when he goes out to eat, always keeps this truism in mind: the calories that count with him are usually miscounted to his happy-eating dinner companions.

Shy Canadian Is Entrusted With Direction of Project To Reach the Moon by 1970

By HAROLD MORRISON

LANGLEY AIR BASE, Va. (CP)—James A. Chamberlin is a lanky, shy Canadian entrusted by the United States with direction of a $500,000,000 project to orbit two men in space in the next great stride to reach the moon by 1970.

"I have no doubt we will get to the moon and project Gemini will be a major effort in that direction," said the dark-haired bespectacled engineer who spent 13 years with the A. V. Roe plant at Malton, Ont., becoming design chief of the Avro Arrow jet interceptor which the Canadian government cancelled in 1959.

"In some ways our project will be like telling the astronauts to go fishing. By various means we hope to link the two man capsule which we are designing with a space supply ship, somewhat like refuelling a jet plane in mid-air.

"There will be all kinds of problems. We don't pretend otherwise. We hope to keep the astronauts in space for 14 days. They will be living in cramped quarters. We plan to open the hatch and have the astronauts move about in space in pressurized suits.

"What we hope to do, generally, is learn how man can live and operate in space. One of the most difficult problems is human waste disposal. People might think this is funny, yet I don't know whether this problem can be solved. We are thinking of suction apparatus and plastic bags for disposal but we are not sure that this can work."

The 46-year-old Chamberlin, highly respected by his American colleagues, is a native of Kamloops, B.C., who has held aerodynamics engineering jobs in Dartmouth, N.S., Montreal and Toronto.

A graduate of the University of Toronto and the London Imperial College of Science, he is chief engineer of the U.S. National Aeronautics and Space Administration.

Heading a staff of 160 engineers, Chamberlin played a leading role in designing the Mercury capsule which astronaut John Glenn used in his orbital space flight.

The Gemini project — named after the twin stars, Castor and Pollux — will have a capsule along the same bell - shaped design as the Mercury, only larger. But instead of landing in the ocean by parachute after re-entering the atmosphere, it will have a winged device so that it can land on earth, much like a plane.

One booster, Titan II, still to be tested, would shoot the manned capsule into orbit. Another, Atlas-Agena B, would fire off a space supply ship.

TIE UP IN SPACE

By ground radio control or through some form of electronic - telescopic equipment aboard the manned vehicle, an attempt would be made to hook the passenger ship onto the freight ship as they orbit in space.

"This is what I mean by fishing," Chamberlin said. "We don't know yet just how the link will be made. It may be necessary for the astronauts to search for the supply vehicle and attempt to guide the two vehicles together.

"But this is just one of a number of experiments we plan. We plan to have the manned capsule decompressed, the space suits compressed, the hatch opened and the men moved around a bit in space to see whether a man can live, work and operate in space. All this is necessary if we are to land men on the moon."

Feeding and exercising will be difficult. At zero gravity there is no weight. The men will have to feed themselves from tubes of specially prepared food squeezed into their mouths where the body muscles can take over the job of pushing it down into the stomach.

Exercises will be devised so that the spacemen can keep their muscles in shape. "We plan to devise a capsule whereby the men may turn around in his seat but that is about all the space he will have."

COMPARISON OF MANNED SPACECRAFT

CANADIAN'S SPACE JOB — Project Gemini, the United States effort to launch a two-man space vehicle by 1964, is under the direction of a Canadian, James Chamberlain of Kamloops, B.C. Chamberlain says the vehicle, as sketched above, might send two men into space for as long as two weeks. One experiment would be to have the men leave the vehicle in space and then return. (CP Photo).

New Sales Tax Exemptions Will Reduce Total Revenue By About $1,000,000 Yearly

TORONTO (CP) — Broadened exemptions to the Ontario three-per-cent retail sales tax, and some amendments to simplify administration, were announced today by Provincial Treasurer Allan.

Also announced in his budget address to the legislature were changes in the Succession Duty Act, the Hospitals Tax Act and some technical amendments to the Income and Corporations Tax Acts.

The new sales tax exemptions will reduce the total revenue by only about $1,000,000 a year, Mr. Allan said at a pre-budget press conference. Introduced last Sept. 1, the tax is expected to bring in $76,000,000 in its first seven months instead of the estimated $60,000,000 and for the next fiscal year is forecast to raise $160,000,000 rather than the $150,000,000 originally estimated.

The changes:

Exempt food products will be broadened to include insulin, vitamins and certain dietary supplements now classed as drugs and medicines;

The definition of classroom supplies will be broadened to include all instructional equipment and equipment used for research by universities, the exemptions to apply when the materials are purchased by school boards, colleges and universities;

A new definition of students' supplies will be included for exemption, to be spelled out in detail in the regulations;

Certain equipment to be defined in regulations will be tax-free for hospitals when purchased for their own use;

Works of art will be exempt when purchased by museums or art galleries supported by public donations and grants by public bodies;

Religious institutions will be exempt from tax on purchase of equipment for use in parts of their premises where religious worship is regularly conducted;

Religious and educational publications to be defined in regulations will be exempt;

Equipment to be defined in regulations and purchased by licensed trapper of fur-bearing animals, will be exempt.

Vendors whose taxable sales do not exceed $100 a month will be permitted to file returns on a quarterly or half-yearly basis instead of monthly.

The corporations tax amendment will be simply to bring it into line with adjustments made at the last session of Parliament.

The income tax change will permit tax collected by Ontario during the year to be turned over to Quebec if the taxpayer moves to that province before the end of the year.

Changes in the Hospitals Tax Act are technical, chiefly to help the small movie theatres which have been getting a refund in recent years, Mr. Allan said.

Effective April 1, tax exemption on estimated prizes will be increased to 36 cents from 25 cents. In places of amusement not classified as Class D theatres in communities of under 10,000 population the exemption will be raised to 75 cents from 25. Year on admissions between 27 and 82 cents will be reduced by one cent.

Death Duties: Succession Duty changes, an insurance company will be required to file a statement up to $5,000 to a widow without consent of the provincial treasurer — double the present amount, interest on unpaid duty, 6% per cent — effective death of the deceased, in future will not take effect until six months after the death. The new changes is expected to become effective when the amendment is put through the legislature and been given assent by the Lieutenant-Governor.

On the sales tax in general, Mr. Allen said that without it the government "simply could not meet our obligations to education, health, welfare, highways and all the other services which are essential to a modern, expanding economy."

BILLION-DOLLAR BUDGET — A record million-dollar budget was presented to the Ontario legislature today by Provincial Treasurer Allan. He predicted a $374,000 surplus in the 1962-63 fiscal year from gross revenues of $1,005,408,000 and gross expenditures of $1,005,034,000. Million Set Aside to Aid Housing Plan

TORONTO (CP) — Slightly over $1,000,000 is set aside under expenditure in the 1962-63 Ontario budget for pilot operation of a provincial housing program announced last week.

Of the $1,087,000 total, $300,000 will go toward purchase, rehabilitation and management of existing structures intended for use as public housing. Provincial Treasurer Allan said today in his budget address to the legislature.

Another $150,000 will provide grants to assist non-profit, limited - dividend housing companies and other groups in building accommodation for the aged, physically handicapped and low-income families.

Operation of rent certificate schemes, under which low-income families will receive provincial subsidies toward rent, will require an estimated $50,000 — the same amount is set aside for studies of all aspects of housing.

AUTHORITY PLANNED

Setting up a Metropolitan Toronto housing authority — a public company which will negotiate, design and construct federal-provincial housing projects in Metro Toronto — will take another $75,000, while $25,000 will go toward establishment of a housing advisory committee.

Authority capital - expenditure, under Dominion-provincial public housing agreements ending the 1963-64 year, is expected to reach $5,600,000, up from $2,600,000 in 1961-62.

Mr. Allan said the housing program "represents a new and bold effort on the government to meet public housing needs in the light of greatly changed conditions."

"In general the shortage of housing accommodation is not been overcome, but there are still significant pockets among families requiring rental housing and particularly among those who cannot pay an economic rent."

Municipalities, Local Agencies Will Benefit

TORONTO (CP)—Some $425,000,000, or 45 per cent of the Ontario budget for current revenues, will be transferred to municipalities and local agencies in the next fiscal year.

That amount is equal to the province's total budget seven years ago, Provincial Treasurer Allan said today in his budget address to the legislature.

"Obviously," he said, "there are limits as to how far we can go."

Unconditional grants to municipalities, to be applied against relief of farm and residential property taxation, will amount to $28,400,000 in 1962-63.

In addition, the grant per pupil in elementary schools under the Residential and Farm Property Tax Assistance Grant Act is being increased to $15 from $3. These grants are available only to municipalities who undertake to keep the school tax rate borne owners and farmers 10 per cent below the industrial and commercial rate mill rate.

School and library grants will go up to $254,000,000, an increase of $28,700,000. Capital outlay for vocational schools will increase to $29,000,000 from $9,000,000.

Highways will include $10,000,000 to finance municipal winter works programs. Road subsidies are being increased by $8,000,000 to $81,000,000.

Some $1,000,000 will provide for a 4.7-mile spur line to the new plant and Laughlin Iron ore development at Dane, 20 miles north of Englehart, where construction starts this spring on a $30,000,000 mine and pelletizing plant. The development is expected ultimately to employ 400 men.

STARTS MAY 15

Construction of the rail line will start about May 15 and is expected to be completed by the fall, Mr. Allan said.

The rest of the GWR program calls for major communications improvements including installation of microwave and modernization of present facilities.

Work already has started on improving the railway's North Bay yards. Other capital works to be undertaken include projects at Kirkland Lake, Moosonee, Cochrane, New Liskeard, Ramore, Fraserdale and Otter Rapids.

"This program, which will be largely completed by 1963, will greatly help the north play a direct on-site employment," Mr. Allan said.

Increased government grants to the Ontario Research Foundation will be made available for a project aimed at finding new uses for coniferous ovailable from the province's forests, he added, and a study of pulping characteristics of hardwoods.

NEW HEALTH SERVICE

The budget also announced a new health insurance service to operate in four centres. Health department officials said the first will be at Sudbury, to be followed by one at Kingston. Others will be chosen later.

The service is designed to provide persons who now have no local health unit available.

In addition, a new bursary program will be undertaken with the aim of encouraging medical and dental students to practise in less-populated regions of the province.

Amount and number of the bursaries have not been settled but health department spokesmen said they will be granted to doctors and dentists who are taking to practise for a certain number of years in designated areas.

New Products In Northland

TORONTO (CP)—The Ontario government will undertake several study and research projects under a step-up-by-step program of northern development, Provincial Treasurer Allan said today.

The objective, he said in his budget address to the legislature, "is to develop new products, processes or of our natural resources in Ontario and expand sales in markets at home and abroad."

The Ontario Research Foundation, the economic council and government-owned Ontario Northland Railway will participate in the program to provide such government departmental heads of forests, mines, economics and travel and publicity and agriculture.

96 Per Cent of Population Enrolled in Hospital Plan

TORONTO (CP) — Helping keep residents of the province healthy will cost the Ontario government $14,000,000 or $14 a head, in the 1962-63 fiscal year.

Provincial Treasurer Allan said in his budget address today the province's total health department will represent a $13,400,000 increase from the 1961-62 fiscal year.

More than half the increase — $7,500,000 — will go toward holding hospital plan premiums at present levels of $2.10 a month for single persons and $4.20 for families.

Of the remainder, $5,000,000 will go into an enlarged mental health program. Care, treatment and rehabilitation of the mentally disturbed will involve a total expenditure of $58,400,000.

Mr. Allan said the hospital insurance plan "continues to be an unqualified success" with slightly more than 96 per cent of the population now enrolled, up from 95 per cent a year ago.

An estimated $1,541,000 will be spent by the Ontario Hospital Services Commission under other capital costs.

'Golden Horseshoe' to Get Lion's Share of Increased Expenditures on Highways

TORONTO (CP) — Ontario's "Golden Horseshoe" will get the lion's share of increased highways expenditures by the provincial government in the 1962-63 fiscal year.

Provincial Treasurer Allan in his budget speech said today that total appropriations for highways and roads in 1962-63 are $264,200,000, an increase of $17,100,000 over the previous year's expenditures.

Of the $247,100,000 appropriation, $185,900,000 is set aside for capital and $78,400,000 for maintenance purposes. Most of the total municipalities will receive $51,800,000 — $28,100,000 for capital and maintenance grants, respectively.

Proposed capital expenditures on provincial highways are about $185,900,000, for slightly less than the $120,100,000 estimated expenditure in 1961-62.

But what it means to the northern Ontario highways, Kingsway, the Toronto, Hamilton and Port Hope districts will receive nearly 50 per cent more, in 1962-63 than they have in the current year.

Among the expensive projects to be undertaken in the district, which includes the so-called "Golden Horseshoe," around the Toronto area, are $5,000,000 for work on four controlled access highways, the Queen Elizabeth, Gardiner, Mid - Toronto by-pass, section of Highway 401 and construction of work on Highway 7 through Hamilton and Brantford and 405 connecting the Queen Elizabeth Highway with the Queen Elizabeth.

Total expenditure for the area is $42,167,000 compared with $29,354,000 in 1961-62.

Other expenditures for the other districts (1961-62 totals in brackets) are: eastern Ontario $23,364,000 ($28,865,000); south, eastern Ontario $27,450,000 ($25,000,000); central Ontario $41,800,000 ($34,000,000); northeastern district $18,297,000 ($24,000,000); northwestern Ontario $9,381,000 ($13,721,000).

The figures do not include capital expenditures on property purchases and surveys or expenditures expected from the federal government, under the Trans-Canada Highway. Ottawa pays about 40 per cent.

Education Outlay Roughly $200 Per Student in All Schools House Is Told

TORONTO (CP)—A $60,000,000 boost in net appropriations for the department of education in the Ontario government's 1962-63 fiscal year is the greatest in the province's history, Provincial Treasurer Allan said today.

The increase brings total net appropriation for the department to a record $329,900,000, or an outlay of roughly $200 per student in elementary and secondary schools and universities.

In his budget address Mr. Allan, who dealt at length with the educational program and its cost, said:

"Never, before has the role of education been more vital to our economic and social progress, indeed, even to our national survival, than it is to, day."

Mr. Allan said the particular need of secondary school curricula accent on preparation for more commercial and technical education. This, he said, calls for the federal - provincial agreements under which full capital costs of vocational school accommodation will be paid by the senior level of government up to April 1, 1963.

START 32E PROJECTS

The provincial treasurer said 825 building projects have been begun under the scheme by the end of 1961. Fifteen-hundred more are under the program, including both work undertaken by local boards and projects by the department itself, is expected to total 3,000 projects.

Mr. Allan reported "excellent progress" in attempts to overcome the province's teacher shortage. The supply of teachers for secondary schools nearly met the demand in 1961, although a shortage persisted in the primary and elementary fields.

In September, 1961, he said, 1,000 teachers were enrolled in the province's 10 teachers' colleges. The supply of teachers for secondary schools will be increased "significantly."

New accommodation in 1961 provided 66,150 pupil places in secondary schools at a cost of $33,000,000 a d $39,200 pupil places in secondary schools for 1962.

"While these figures reveal a deceleration in the building program," he said, "it would be wrong to put that the volume of secondary school accommodation will doubledby advance shapply in 1961 and 1963 due to the provision of technical and vocational accommodation made possible by federal-provincial grant support."

Enrolment in secondary schools in the current school year was about 1,467,000, an increase of 76,000 over 1960-61, and next year and nearly twice that of 10 years ago.

Capital costs in the 1962-63 fiscal year are expected to total $60,000,000, up from $40,000,000 over the current year's expenditure.

Grants made under the Residential and Farm School Tax Assistance Act, Mr. Allan said, are boosted to $15 a pupil from $5 in 1962-63, increasing total payments under the act by $9,000,000 from the $6,000,000 spent last year.

Both capital and maintenance grants to universities are to be boosted in 1962-63 to $15,000,000 and $23,000,000, respectively.

"In the past seven years alone the province's grants to universities have been increased by $15,500,000 or 55 per cent," Mr. Allan said. "This is eloquent testimony to the effort we are giving to the universities and colleges in meeting the demands of the day."

The provincial treasurer said the province's program of student aid is "clearly achieving its objective of ensuring that no student who has the ability to benefit from higher education is denied the opportunity because of his financial circumstances."

In the current fiscal year 12,000 Ontario students received bursaries and scholarships worth $1,450,000, in addition more than 7,750,000 had been loaned to more than 4,000 students. By the province's student aid loans fund set up in 1958.

Customers Will Miss Friendship of Retiring Banker

TORONTO (CP) — Joe McCully, a banker who would have gladdened the heart of Stephen Leacock, retired Wednesday.

It was the late humorist who once wrote:

"When I go into a bank I get rattled. The clerks rattle me, the wicket rattle me, the sight of the money rattles me, everything rattles me.

"The moment I cross the threshold of a bank and attempt to transact business there, I become an irresponsible idiot."

But Stephen Leacock didn't do business with Joe McCully.

It was in Toronto's downtown branch of the Bank of Montreal that customers and others lined up four deep to watch the world series on television the banks.

LIKED PEOPLE

To Joe, now 65, banking meant working with people.

"Certainly the series games and the wedding of Princess Margaret—brought in people who weren't customers," Joe said.

"But they made friends for the bank and friends are future customers."

Another gesture was Joe's purchase of a $1,000 pneumatic-ince-and-wood bench which he had painted and installed in front of the bank just off Yonge Street on Adelaide for customers to rest.

People passing "Joe McCully's bank"—the head office advertised it that way once —saw many things in Joe's career that other banks seldom display.

They saw gold bricks, a ton of new ore and the pre-atomic piece of gold it would yield, and the Grey Cup presented by Mr. McCully grew up in Exeter, a village of 600 by road, ten Ontario and his playboyship is:

"I believe in taking banking off Wall Street and putting it on Main Street."

Banking was not Joe McCully's first love — in fact it was the last thing he liked.

He was going to be a farmer, but his father was intrigued him. Once he toyed with the idea of working in a bank for a day—he was getting $350 a year at the time.

"I don't regret staying a bit," he says. "Every day has been different and I think banks are dull places to work, but they're not. I've had a ball."

He isn't certain what he'll do after he gets back from a Florida vacation. A bachelor, he may spend some time travelling.

Or he may take up another business.

Must Be Curtailment on Hunt Camp Expansion in Some Areas

By A. E. BEACH

TWEED—With an estimated invasion of 30,000 hunters annually into this district, it is becoming quite apparent that there must be a curtailment on hunt camp expansion in certain areas that are now carrying near the maximum number of hunters for safe hunting.

At the present time the readily accessible areas are well populated with hunt camps and also support a very heavy transient hunting pressure. In logs laid addition the Crown lands are subject to heavy hunting pressure from the camps established on privately owned lands as well as from cottages.

To determine future policy a field survey is now in progress to determine hunting pressure throughout the district to enable the various services to determine what further hunt camp establishments may be permitted and where.

For the moment four townships west of Highway No. 41 have been precluded from further hunt camps, being the townships of Ashby, Effingham Anglesea and Grimsthorpe. These townships already support a heavy permanent camp population, and in addition there is a heavy influx of hunters from permanent camps and cottages on privately owned lands as well as a concentrated day hunter influx.

It is hoped that in the near future sufficient data will be available to project our findings on to maps giving full coverage of our district and provide information that will permit full and safe use of the game resources.

At present hunt camp permits are only being issued where conditions warrant and after a full investigation has been made.

Hunt camps on Crown lands must be covered by a land use permit at an annual rental of $30.00 per annum. Also the camps are subject to municipal taxes.

Average Weekly Earnings Drop By 2.2 Per Cent

OTTAWA (CP)—Canada's industrial composite index of employment, based on a 1949 level of 100, declined by 2.1 per cent between last November and December, the Dominion Bureau of Statistics reported today. The index dropped to 117.9 from 121.6.

During the same period average weekly earnings dropped by 2.2 per cent to $77.08. The payroll index dropped five per cent to 213.5.

In December, 1960 the employment index was 114.4, average weekly earnings were $75.18 and the payroll index was 202.4.

The DBS report said the decrease was reflected in most industrial divisions except trade. In general the losses were seasonal, and the seasonally adjusted index was slightly to 120.3 from 119.9.

The biggest changes were in forestry, where employment dropped by five per cent, and general engineering projects where employment rose by three per cent. The over-all increase in the seasonally adjusted index was offset by unusually heavy decreases in the food and beverage division.

RARE, MEDIUM, WELL-DONE

By GEO. H. CARVER, Sports Editor

Gordie Howe may be a better all-round hockey player; others may equal or break one or more of his many records, but these opinions do not affect the hero-worship of hundreds of hockey-minded youngsters of the city and district.

One of the main topics of drooling round talk when the squirts and peewees shed sandshams and shirts for shoulder-pads, shinguards and skates is the coming of Maurice "Rocket" Richard next week to referee the annual Fuller-Firemen hockey game in aid of the Shrine Club's Crippled Children Fund.

Picking my way through a welter of shirts, skates, socks, sweaters and sundry items of boyish clothing in the squirt dressing room the other night, I was waylaid not a few times by shining-eyed youngsters who obersued: "Are we going to be able to talk to him, Mister?" "Where is he going to be?" "When is he coming and what time does he get here?"

The Shrine Club Crippled Children's Committee, under Shrine chairmen Tom Lewis and Shriner George Muller made arrangements for the Rocket to officiate at the annual puck battle of the city boys in blue. Richard is touring Canada making speeches, presentations, and refereeing minor games.

The Shriners have arranged a busy program for the Rocket. He will be taken on a tour of the city and district, weather permitting, with a special visit to the Corbyville distillery where he will inspect the plant under the guidance of Shriner Committee chairman George (Mickey) MacDonald.

As in the case in other communities in which he has appeared, the Rocket will be bombarded with a lot of hackneyed questions.

He probably has stock answers for it: "Will Gordie Howe beat your record of goals scored? Do you think Bobby Hull will equal or exceed your fifty-goals-a-season record? Will the Canadiens repeat for the Stanley Cup?" and many more worn-out queries.

However the Rocket did come up with a new angle on the penalty shot in an interview the other day. He suggested the shot be taken by an opposing player from the red line with players at both sides lined up straight out from the goal like basketball players in foul shots. If the "shooter" doesn't score, the puck is in play and general hostilities commence. Sounds like a good idea.

Besides officiating with other former National Hockey League players, as is expected, the Police-Firemen hockey tilt, the Rocket will give some youngster the biggest thrill of eight-to-ten years life.

He will present the handsome "Tommy McNevin Memorial Trophy" and miniature for the first time to the champion of champions of the Belleville Minor Hockey Association Squirt Division. This youngster has been selected for his achievements in the fields of hockey, education and music appreciation. His name will not be made public until the night of the presentation which will take place between periods of the hockey game.

This young champion will be photographed with the Rocket after receiving the McNevin Trophy and award. He will be a king for a night and will receive the thanks of hockey and educational figures, not to mention those of some 240 playing members of the squirt division.

Present indications point to a fine "house" for the hockey game, the Rocket and the ceremonies. Tickets, the boys in blue tell me, are selling well, but have not reached the bottom of the barrel, so to speak. There are plenty left at the low price of twenty-five cents. And every cent with the exception of arena expenses, will be given to the Shrine Club Crippled Children's Fund.

It is going to be a great night. The Westland and Prince Edward Regimental Band in all their regimental finery will be on hand. A number of crippled and retarded kiddies will be special guests at the game and if you think your twenty-five cent ticket tab is not going to a worthy cause, take a look at the shining faces of these less fortunate children.

If you cannot attend the game and ceremonies, buy a ticket from any policeman or fireman, any way, just to show your heart is in sympathy with their efforts, and the Shriners' cause.

Last year, if memory is correct, you donated some $1,500 to the crippled kiddies' fund. Let's make it $2,000 next Tuesday night, eh?

Blues Tie, Hull '40'

By THE CANADIAN PRESS

Chicago Black Hawks may have to settle for another third-place finish in the National Hockey League this season because of their inability to win on Toronto ice.

The Hawks, coming along at a fast clip after early - season misfortune, were chilled 4-4 by the Maple Leafs in a penalty-studded contest at Toronto Wednesday night.

As a result they dropped five points behind the second-place Leafs and Canadiens, nine more games to play to Toronto's 11.

Elsewhere Wednesday night, New York Rangers straightened their grip on fourth place by coming from behind for a 2-2 tie with the Boston Bruins at New York.

The Maple Leafs now have 72 points, 19 fewer than first-place Montreal Canadiens, while the Black Hawks have 67. The Rangers have 53, four more than fifth - place Detroit" but they have played three more games than the Red Wings.

DEEP IN CELLAR

The Bruins haven't been able to win in their last 13 outings—managing only three ties during the span — and are deep in the cellar.

Chicago, fired by Bobby Hull, twice pulled to within one goal of the Maple Leafs, but was unable to overcome an early Toronto lead.

The Hawks haven't won a game in Maple Leaf Gardens in two years, losing four times and tying twice in six contests this season.

Hull popped in his 40th goal of the season at 1402 of the first period to slash a two-goal Toronto lead in half. In the second, he set up Eric Nesterenko's 14th tally after Leafs had opened up a 3-1 edge.

By scoring in Chicago's 61st game, Hull drew even with the pace Bernie Geoffrion of Canadiens set last season in tying retired Maurice (Rocket) Richard's 50 - goal record.

SETS RECORD

The 40th goal also set a Chicago club record for most goals by a player in one season. Hull set the previous mark when he scored 39 times in 1958-59.

Goals by Bobby Pulford and Red Kelly put the Maple Leafs ahead 2-0 in the first 11 minutes of play. Frank Mahovlich tallied before the first period ended and defenceman Tim Horton scored late in the second.

Referee Frank Udvari handed out a total of 28 penalties—14 to the Maple Leafs — as tempers flared on various occasions. The Toronto infractions included a 10 - minute misconduct to Mahovlich and a rare two - minute minor to goalie Johnny Bower for throwing the puck forward.

At New York, the Bruins scored twice in the first six minutes of the opening period but the Rangers fought back.

Dean Prentice's goal started the New York comeback early in the third. Rookie Dave Balon tied the game at 14.36. Camille Henry drew assists on both tallies.

Harry Smith Will Join Terriers

TRAIL, B.C. (CP) — Harry Smith, fiery defenceman for Trail Smoke Eaters of the Western International Hockey League, said Wednesday he will join Galt Terriers for the world hockey championships in Colorado Springs next month.

The decision, announced by Smith, came after months of conflicting reports here about Smith's movements. Jack Roxburgh, Canadian Amateur Hockey Association president, had said Smith would join the Galt team. Smith had said he wouldn't.

The defenceman leaves Sunday to join Terriers in Colorado.

Maroons Lead Series 3-1

CHATHAM (CP) — Jim Connelly fired three third - period goals to lead Chatham Maroons to a 3-1 victory over Strathroy Rockets in the fourth game of their Ontario Hockey Association Senior quarter-final series Wednesday night.

The victory gives Maroons a 3-1 lead in the best-of-seven series. Fifth game is in Strathroy Saturday.

The two clubs battled to a scoreless first period. Rockets grabbed a 1-0 lead at 11:55 of the second period with Willie Hess scoring on a pass from Walt Williams.

Connelly struck for his first goal at 8:36 of the third period, and scored his second at 16:14 to give Chatham a two-goal margin in the penalty box.

Rockets pulled goalie Norm Harris with 40 seconds remaining in the game, but the move backfired. Connelly took a pass from George Ashton and fired the puck into the open net to complete the scoring at 19:36.

Personal Costs Heavy

By JACK SULLIVAN
Canadian Press Sports Editor

To date, the federal government has spent $14,875 of its $5,000,000-a-year aid to amateur sport, for the remaining $4,985,125 isn't spent before the end of this month, the end of the fiscal year, a new $5,000,000 becomes available.

There is no provision for carrying over unspent budget allocations into the following year.

By the end of March, 15 young Canadian figure skaters will have returned home from the world championships at Prague at considerable expense to their families and the Canadian Figure Skating Association. Possibly one, and maybe three of the group, will return as world champions.

That's the picture as the skaters start packing for their trip. Total transportation costs for the 16 is about $10,000. Then there is ice time in Prague for practice, cost of clothing on the eve of the championships, hotel accommodation and so on which conceivably could boost the figure to $15,000 or more.

PERSONAL INVESTMENT

"Most of the skaters come from homes of moderate means and they're making the trip at great personal sacrifice," says Nigel Stephens of Toronto, president of the Canadian Figure Skating Association.

An extra $5,000 allocation by the newly - constituted national advisory council on physical fitness would seem to be in order.

The CFSA hasn't approached the council for funds. "We now are in the process of making a study of our needs and we hope to have it ready in a couple of weeks, or more," says Stephens.

"We are going to ask for funds for use in getting the public interested in figure skating. The big item here would be making ice facilities available to the public at small cost. Rental time is expensive, anywhere from $8 to $11 an hour, and I think the government could help pay these costs.

"We are also going to ask for help for our senior skaters, to assist them in their training costs and also to travel to competitions."

EXPENSIVE TRAINING

"The big cost is training. Most of our skaters are on the ice six to nine months a year, three to four hours a day, and the average cost is, each would be close to $6,000 over 12 months."

It's an expensive sport and probably no one realizes this more than Mrs. George Jackson of Oshawa, Ont., mother of 20-year-old Don who has held the Canadian and North American titles since 1956.

Ten years ago she went out to work to help finance her son's career. Most of her earnings, about $23,000, went towards his expenses.

"Now," says Stephens, "these families are helping to pay the costs of sending our skaters to Prague. Transportation cost for each skater is about $600. The CFSA is paying two-thirds of this plus hotel accommodation for three days. But the skaters pay for ice time in Czechoslovakia and the cost of coaches, and it could mean a few hundred dollars expense for each of our competitors."

That $4,985,125 in the government till looks mighty inviting.

1968 Winter Olympics

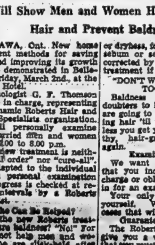
Hees Agrees Banff Best

BANFF, Alta. (CP) — Trade Minister Hees says he is in full accord with slogan writers who found "Banff is best" as the site for the 1968 winter Olympics.

Mr. Hees concedes he has a natural prejudice, since having the 1968 games at Banff would earn a lot of dollars for Canada.

But in a speech Wednesday night closing a two-day seminar of the Calgary Olympic Development Association, sponsors of the Banff Olympic application, the sailing cabinet minister said he has technical reasons, too.

Experience on slopes in Europe and the United States showed him Banff has the potential to be "the best skiing area in the whole world."



Rocky Mountain scenery, together with snow conditions and accommodation needed for the games, would reserve a big trend carrying Canadians "by century.

Hair and Prevent Baldness

OTTAWA, Ont. New home treatment methods for saving hair and improving its growth will be demonstrated in Belleville Friday, March 2nd, at the Quinte Hotel.

Who Can Be Helped?

Will the new Roberts treatment cure baldness? "No" For baldness cannot help men and women who are clean-headed after years of greasy hair tonic. But if you still have some hair, your scalp is still creating hair, you can get long new hair glorious hair you have, some conditions, such as "spot baldness" usually have complete coverage if caught in time.

Other conditions that usually bring on excessive hair-loss—dandruff, itching, over-oiliness or dryness, telltale clogged with sebum or seborrhea—can be corrected by the Roberts home treatment if caught in time.

"DON'T WAIT UNTIL IT'S TOO LATE"

Baldness won't wait for doubters to be convinced, you are going to keep right on losing hair 'til you're bald unless you get your scalp in healthy, hair-growing condition again.

Examine You Free

We want to make it clear that you incur absolutely no charge or obligation by coming in for an examination.

Your only obligation is to yourself. We do not accept cases that will not respond.

Injuries Hit Training Camps

'Rocky, Cepeda, Joey' Are Holdouts

NEW YORK (AP) — Rocky Colavito, Detroit Tigers' slugging outfielder, got $55,000, it offered a reporter, $45,500, wants over $50,000."

Orlando Cepeda, San Francisco Giants' National League home run champion, got $30,000, is offered $42,500, wants $60,000.

Pitcher Joey Jay, 21 - game winner with Cincinnati Reds last season, got $25,000, is offered $35,000, wants $50,000.

That's the status of the three major holdouts in major league baseball today.

Colavito, who became an official holdout Wednesday, remains at his home in Temple, Pa., and insists he won't report to the Tigers' training base in Lakeland, Fla., "until I get a decent increase." The Rock hit 45 home runs, drove in 140 runs and batted .290 last year.

The Giants, stung by estimates that Cepeda earned $27,000 last season—when he batted .311, hit 46 home runs and drove in 142 runs, broke precedent and revealed the big first baseman outfielder's salary. Manager Al Dark added that reports that Cepeda has been offered $45,500 for this year are "just about right."

Jay, who never won more than nine games in a season through his first four years with the Reds, was the ace of the pitching staff for Cincinnati's 1961 National League champions. He won 21 games and was named the Comeback Player of the Year in baseball that season.

Jay, who never won more than nine games in a season through his first four years with the Reds, was the ace of the pitching staff for Cincinnati's 1961 National League champions. He won 21 games and was named the Comeback Player of the Year in baseball that season.

Outfielder Jim Lemon of Minnesota Twins, who may have learned last year what an extended holdout can mean, continued to impress team officials with his slugging at Orlando, Fla. Lemon hit 31 homers and drove in 109 runs in 1960. Last season he held out for 17 days and never did get into stride after he reported to training camp, ending up the season with 14 home runs and 32 RBIs.

Injuries hit several other camps. Outfielder Tommy Davis of Los Angeles Dodgers, who has a history of back trouble, strained his back and may rest for a couple of days.

Left - handed hurler Billy Pierce of the Giants suffered a stiff neck when hit by a ball thrown by catcher Ed Bailey.

Right-hander Jerry Walker of Kansas City Athletics pulled a muscle in his lower back and had to be carried from the field. He'll miss four or five days.

The Big Seven

Andy Bathgate of New York Rangers drew an assist Wednesday night, but still kept a hold on runnerup Bobby Hull of Chicago Black Hawks in the race for the National Hockey League individual scoring crown.

Bathgate's assist came in New York's 2-2 tie with Boston.

Hull, meanwhile, scored Minnesota goal and also picked up an assist in Chicago's 4-2 loss to Toronto Maple Leafs and now has 73 points.

Stan Mikita of the Black Hawks, picked up an assist and took over sole possession of third place with 66 points.

Softball Meet Scheduled For Sunday

Softball climbs back into the local sportlight this weekend when the Belleville and District Softball League holds its first meeting of the year.

The meeting has been called for Sunday afternoon at the Recreation Centre at 2.30 o'clock.

The five teams from last year, Cobourg Merchants, BCAF Flyers, Picton Welts and the Bobcats and Joyce Real Estate, from Belleville, are expected to have representation at the meeting. Any other person interested in the popular summer sport are invited to attend.

It is hoped that all five of last year's entries will continue in the league this season. Indications are that a sixth entry would be welcomed, if enough could compete in the strong competition.

All teams played under the lights last summer and attendance at the games was greatly improved over previous years.

As in any organization, it is necessary to get off on the right foot, so the league executive is hoping for a big turnout Sunday afternoon.

Women's Curling

BC, Quebec Get Scare

By SCOTT SCHILL

REGINA (CP) — Prince Edward Island and Nova Scotia nearly played lovely roles to British Columbia's and Quebec's Goliath Wednesday night.

The Islanders, without a win, met British Columbia, which sported an unbeaten record, in the seventh round of the Canadian women's curling champion-ships, losing out 8-6.

On another sheet of ice, once beaten Quebec was pushed to the last rock before winning an 8-7 decision over one-win Nova Scotia.

Anne Philpe of Quebec and Joyce McKee of Saskatchewan had 6-1 marks, Alberta had four wins in seven games, followed by Manitoba, Ontario and New Brunswick with 3-4 records, Newfoundland two wins and five losses, Nova Scotia with a win in seven matches and P.E.I. with a 0-7 record.

Saskatchewan won its seventh-round game 12-4 against New Brunswick after being pushed for five ends. Alberta beat Newfoundland 13-3 and Ontario beat Manitoba 10-5.

In the sixth round, Mrs. Hansen shellacked Newfoundland 18-1, in eight ends, Quebec beat New Brunswick 12-5, Saskatchewan picked up a 9-3 win over Nova Scotia, Alberta beat Manitoba 13-8 and Ontario whipped P.E.I. 11-3.

Score Was 19-3

Pepsi's Clobber Kingston

By GEO. H. CARVER
Sports Editor

The Pepsi's threw their precision-passing machinery into high gear here last night and demolished over a skeleton Kingston club for a points-packed victory.

The score, according to the press box adding machine was finalized at 19-3. The penalties, a mental job, were six, four to the winners including a minor and misconduct to MacDonald.

Kingston led at one time although briefly. Veterans Clint Tinkess sank the first Kingston goal, while the faithful few were picking out their pews, at 1.36 of the opening period.

After that the Pepsi's scoring skids opened and the deluge fell.

The win was the third in a row for the Lacrinarders, one that practically cinches a spot in the OHA Eastern Ontario intermediate "A" round robin playdowns. They have defeated Kingston twice and Lindsay once and from here it looks like the Scugog Lumberjacks for the Pepsi's finals opponents.

After the opening Kingston goal, they threw in seven markers and with their passes clicking like castanets, heaved home four more in the second exercise.

Seven more pucks whistled into the Kingston nets behind a harassed Wayne Nicholls in the third but the Kingston crew punctuated the score with two markers.

The Kingston team iced only eleven men with their more experienced players deciding to stay home. However they never quit trying in the face of overwhelming odds. Nicholls in the Kingston net had 58 pucks heaved at him while the Turk was on the receiving end of 22.

Davy Jones came up with a hat trick with Gregson, MacDonald and Shaker Baker scoring duos. Flori had four assists, MacDonald two and Baker two.

Floyd Crawford one of the engineers on the Pepsi train fed five pay-dirt passes to his hungry flock. He added a goal for good measure.

"Wilson" Brown had three helpers, Boily and Doran two each with Rowbotham and Taylor getting losers.

The Pepsi's travel to Lindsay Friday night where they should wrap up a spot in the round-robin finals.

The Maple Leafs and Bruins moved closer to the pantheon of hockey league finals last night with wins in the first games of the semi-finals.

Leafs battled the Rangers 11-3 while the Bruins pulled out a closer 3-1 win over the Hawks. Both were the first times in goals-to-count series.

Willie Mays Must Wear Hard Hat

CASA GRANDE, Ariz. (AP)—Willie Mays must wear a hard hat at all times this season just like every other member of San Francisco Giants.

That's the word from manager Alvin Dark, and it was final as far as any that brooked no argument.

"I'll wear it until it falls off," commented Willie, who has never worn a protective helmet at bat.

Mays, reputed to be baseball's highest paid performer at $105,000 a year, is a regular brush - back victim of opposition pitchers. Dark apparently figures the lining in regular wears inside his cap is not adequate protection for such valuable property.

To Use Force If Necessary Says Rhodesian Premier

LONDON (Reuters) — Prime Minister Sir Roy Welensky of the Federation of Rhodesia and Nyasaland warned here today he will "use force if necessary" to carry out his plan for a multi-racial African grouping of British territories.

He issued the warning at London Airport after flying in from Salisbury in a last-ditch effort to block British moves expected to give Nyasaland a bigger political say in the protectorate of Northern Rhodesia.

Welensky, who has arranged showdown talks with the British government, referred to the federation's constitution as "the only thing we have got."

WOULD USE FORCE

He added: "It means that I would take every step necessary to carry out this policy that I wish to carry out—and use force if necessary."

Welensky flew here from his capital of Salisbury a few hours before the British government was due to outline its new constitutional proposals for the protectorate.

The copper - rich territory, with its economy closely linked to land and the self - governing colony of Southern Rhodesia, comprises the Federation Federation.

Welensky, who is reported to have described the latest British constitutional proposals as "not good enough," was expected to be present in the gallery of the House of Commons for their presentation by Colonial Secretary Reginald Maudling.

Even Commercials Imbued With Spirit of Outdoors

By CYNTHIA LOWRY

NEW YORK (AP) — Television viewers can be forgiven if they start thinking they houses are by beer and offices for pet rotaries.

When a network foreign correspondent wants to read his report on current events, he straps himself into his trench coat and stations himself in front of the Arc de Triomphe or with a background view of the Thames (preferably in the rain) and starts to talk.

When intense coverage of John Glenn's space launching is in progress, correspondent Roy Neal of NBC was stationed for no apparent reason—at a large desk set in the middle of an open field. CBS' Walter Cronkite, dripping wires and microphones, was just standing on—apparently without benefit of notes or assistants — in what looked to be a bit of abandoned farmland.

Even the commercials, are imbued with the spirit of the great outdoors: Most cigarettes are smoked at beach picnics,

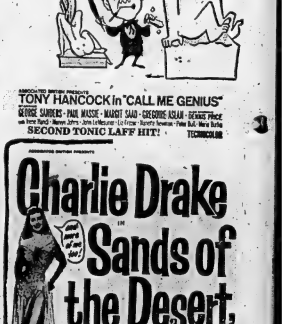
Models shampoo their hair in front of old greek temples and curiously Dad's a girl taking a bath in an ordinary tub set in the midst of a forty glade. Incredibly good automobiles are exhibited on turntable, which appear to be grand ballrooms, of hotels.

That's life in TV-land.



CBS won't do any talking, but it looks pretty definite that Marshal Dillon will be losing Chester next season. Dennis Weaver, who has played the comedy side-kick role for seven long seasons, was in New York last weekend taping a 45-minute sample of a show called TV Tonight, which CBS is thinking of putting into a late - evening weekly spot.

Meanwhile, ABC's Lawman may vanish next season along with The Tall Man, Tales of Wells Fargo, and Frontier Circus. This will make the once overwhelmingly popular western the rarest category of programs on the schedules.

Gina's Hubby Wants to Become Canadian Citizen

By DAVID SCOTT

TORONTO (CP)—Gina Lollobrigida may have turned down offers having anodder on Canada but her husband—Italian husband, Dr. Milko Skofic, is as anxious to be even more (if that's possible) Canadian than Gina.

"As much as she (Gina) loves Italy, he loves Canada," a source close to Dr. Skofic said here Wednesday.

The question of allegiance arose earlier this week when the glamorous movie queen told newspaper men in Rome, "I am 100-per-cent Italian. I love Italy. I did not really want to go to Canada."

The tune differs from the rhapsody played in the summer of 1956 when Gina, her infant son Andrea, and husband arrived in Toronto to begin their sojourn in a posh rented mansion.

Only her husband has returned since, and he was in July last year to pay taxes and settle some business.

ABSORBED EDUCATION

Speculation had surrounded the Skofic future in Canada and in the first place. Primary theory was that Canada might want some of Dr. Skofic's Milko, made sixteen by Italy because of Gina's Yugoslavian husband.

Last May 18 Gina denied rumors she did not plan to return to Canada.

"Our plan is to look for a home in Canada so we can have time off from my work," she was quoted.

Gina will be in or near Toronto because we find the countryside here is beautiful."

Tuesday night she announced she has "cancelled my plans for Canada."

Her husband's brother Peter, a Toronto importer said he has no knowledge of the actors' plans or whims.

But Dr. Skofic said, "my brother definitely has not changed his mind. He is a Canadian taxpayer and I know he wants very much to become a Canadian citizen."

Catholic Bishop Deplores Labor Conditions in Diocese

NORTH BAY (CP) — A pastoral letter, deploring the "shocking and unchristian" condition of many workers in his area, has been issued by Most Rev. Alexander Carter, bishop of North Bay diocese, bishop of Sault Ste. Marie.

The letter says:

"We cannot be to realize more and more our responsibilities in the field of municipal, provincial and federal government—we must develop a great sense of civic and social responsibility; workers must come to realize their great duty and give a good name to their union by participating actively and intelligently in the affairs . . .

"In our own diocese the condition of many of our working men is nothing less than pitiable. Almost the entire population of certain districts is limited to seasonal work — work which may last for four to six months of the year. Yet these fathers have families to support, children to educate, clothe and feed. They struggle on from year to year, always hoping to survive each year, but they go through life feeling a great sense of frustration and fear.

"But we cannot give up service to the need for unions and ignore their existence when the financial interests of the church are at stake.

"For this reason I am issuing the following directives:

1. In all diocesan construction the same wages will be established by the government in conjunction with the unions present or elected.

2. In all diocesan work, all things being equal, preference will be given to contractors using only labor from unions.

3. We shall remain in close contact with union leaders and their representatives in each district when proof is given that he refuses to hire union labor, or refuses to accept the right to approach his men for purposes of organizing them."

Expect Kennedy To Give Decision On A-Tests Soon

By HAROLD MORRISON

WASHINGTON (CP) — President Kennedy's top advisers were moving towards a decision to resume nuclear tests in the atmosphere, but there was no definitive preparation of massive proposals for such a statement.

Authorities said Wednesday that a long as the East-West talks in Geneva — at 17 — it cannot afford to fall behind Russia in nuclear weapons, which he gains in hy atmospheric tests series last fall.

Reports of indecision on whether or not to order resumption of atmospheric testing will be discussed in a television address Friday night, an informed source said.

While Kennedy was reported to be studying such analyses of the Russian explosions last fall, there were reports that Soviet scientific experts are already at Christmas Island and other Pacific territory, preparing for more tests which might take place within a few months.

Kennedy has said he won't allow detonations before the 18-country disarmament talks open in Geneva March 14. But he will inform the public fully if he decides tests are necessary.

Horse-Whip Tainted Meat Sellers -- Curtis

TORONTO (CP) — Long Branch Mayor Mark Curtis said Wednesday night people who sell tainted meat should be "have a whipping and perhaps that's not good enough for them."

Reeve Curtis said the public must recognize that some so-called bargains are not bargains at all.

He noted that some advertisements offer hamburger meat at five pounds for $1 "but you can't be inspected meat," he said. "One might find maggots in the meat instead of beef."

Reeve Curtis was speaking during a Metropolitan Toronto council discussion of a move by the health committee to have inspected meat sold in the city.

REVERSES DECISION

LOS ANGELES, Calif. (AP)—An appeals court has nullified a $65,700 judgment won by seven-year-old Peter Lee Dykes, injuries suffered in a fall down the stairs of a Brentwood home. The District Court of Appeals, reversing a 1958 superior court verdict, ruled Wednesday that there was no proof of negligence by the home owners, Howard L. and Ann M. Buck.

Nehru's Party Retains Control Of Lower House

By SIDNEY WEINLAND

NEW DELHI (Reuters)—Prime Minister Nehru's ruling Congress Party today retained control of the key Lower House of Parliament as it headed toward a slightly-tarnished victory in southering returns in the Indian national elections.

The party has won 351 of 360 seats declared so far. The Lower House, the Lok Sabha, has 494 elected seats.

Latest lineup of the parties is Congress, 351; Communists, 18; Jan Sangh (Hindus), 18; Praja Socialists 7; Conservative Swatantra 9; Socialists 6; Independents and other parties 51.

The Congress Party held 362 seats in the outgoing Parliament in a general election in 1957. Other standings were Jan Sangh 4; Praja Socialist 20, Independents 36, others 47.

CONGRESS LOSES SEATS

The Congress Party victory was not overwhelming but in the 10 days of voting that ended Sunday the party lost big majorities in the state assembly of Rajasthan by one vote, Nehr the Congress Party leader in the state, was defeated by a wide margin. Congress lost 22 seats, mostly to the Swatantra Conservatives.

In the state of Madhya Pradesh, with two results yet to declare, Congress had won 140 seats in the 288-member legislature. The final result also was tight in the state of Bihar.

However, Congress retained its majorities in the 10 remaining Indian states.

Nehru himself easily retained his parliamentary seat but had to whopper two-thirds cut from his 1957 margin.

Notable defeats for the Congress Party included Congress Union Minister B. V. Keskar and V. K. Jain, party whip and Nehru's home state of Uttar Pradesh.

In general, Congress candidates who lost dropped their seats to opponents from within the party to run as independents.

No One Benefits In Long Strike Says Official

WINDSOR, Ont. (CP)—Chrysler Canada Ltd. president Ron Todgham said Wednesday in a letter to employees that both the company and the United Auto Workers Union (CLC) have become "grievous and mounting losses" during the contract strike by production workers.

Three thousand hourly - rated employees have been on strike at the company's three assembly plants for the last 12 days.

Todgham said: "The union leader did its utmost to prevent a work stoppage which, frankly, it can ill afford from the standpoint of social or share - of - industry peace at this time.

"Organized labor," said Mr. Todgham, "knows that its members have enjoyed the highest overall wage losses entailed in a lengthy strike in the history of greater Windsor, already depressed by past major labor conflicts, is in no position to withstand another one."

In a reply, Gordon Burt, Canadian UAW director, said Chrysler has not met the terms of the conciliation board's recommendations and general management has moved toward employee ness.

Mr. Burt charged that "management ineptness at Chrysler has become a byword throughout the industry" and said that the auto industry, management and labor, must make up its its workers' "sweat and toil has lost in sales."

Although major issues still unsettled are non - economic ones, union spokesmen have said they are the type that could lead to prolonged strike.

These include production standards, relief time in plants, seniority, job opportunity and the amount of time allowed for union members on the job to handle union business.

Govt.-Owned Industry Still Hot Topic

By THE CANADIAN PRESS

A brisk debate in the Newfoundland legislature Wednesday showed that one of Premier Joseph Smallwood's most controversial projects is far from old-hat in the province.

It was 19 years ago that the Liberal premier embarked on an expensive program of developing industry in the province. Since then the government has paid $800,000 to start 17 provincially - owned industries which are in debt to the province by $400,000.

The bill that sparked the debate authorizes sale of two of the industries to private interests.

Opposition leader James J. Greene said the sale of United Cotton Mills Limited and Newfoundland Textiles Limited was another example "of the extravagant scheme carried out in a wild and woolly way."

The premier said the annual $40,000 loss would vanish even if that the plants kept $500,000 in profits to reinvest. Last year they paid out $250,000 in wages last year.

Developments in other legislatures:

Edmonton — Highways Minister Gordon Taylor told the Alberta house how the government arranged to get the contract for a new superhighway between Calgary and Edmonton 12 miles west of Wetaskiwin. A delivery was a Wetaskiwin delegation, on day, to persuade the government to build the highway by the city.

ATTACKS DOCTORS

Regina — Premier Woodrow Lloyd delivered a sharp attack on the Saskatchewan College of Physicians and Surgeons for its opposition to the government's prepaid medical care plan. He said claims the doctors are being threatened, publicly and privately by the CCF government.

General Motors Spent $174,000 In This City

OSHAWA — Spending by General Motors of Canada last year for materials and services in Oshawa and the Toronto area totaled $174,000,000, the company announced today.

Of this amount the company's payroll in Belleville was $174,000 for materials.

Gil president E. H. Walker said the company's wages and salary payments were $75,000,000, the same as in 1960. Employment during 1961 averaged 18,776.

Production of cars and trucks by General Motors last year was 196,000, down 13,000 from the year before. Production was resumed in December between strikes at plants affected by GM's hourly-rate employees.

The spending figures do not include those of General Motors companies in Canada or GM's subsidiaries, 1,300 dealers from coast to coast.

Payments were made to more than 5,000 large and small businesses in every province during the year, an increase of nearly 500 over the previous years.

This is in keeping with our established policy of seeking out Canadian sources of supply wherever possible," said Roy Walker.

Fredericton — Opposition Leader C. B. Sherwood said thousands of persons working in New Brunswick's forests are "chained to such low pulpprices that they literally have to give away their heritage.

PLEASE - PIPE DOWN — Those young-sters, whose highland heritage is but ancestral, leave no doubt they need more time to acquire a taste for bagpipe music. Bagpipes, Scottish Songs, Dances and Tartans Return To Cape Breton, Not Culture

By IRA DILTSDALE

ST. ANN'S, N.S. (CP) — Up Nev, Norman MacLeod's ghost were to return to the hills and glens of Central Cape Breton, he might shout for joy at signs of revival of Scottish culture.

After a second look, however, it might weep. The bagpipes and Scottish songs, dances and tartans have returned but the ancient Celtic culture is disappearing from the homes.

Nurtured by hardship for centuries in the Scottish Highlands and in islands off the northwest coast of Scotland, it was carried to North America by thousands of Scots seeking freedom from landowners and religious persecution.

It flourished for a while in various parts of the continent, including Cape Breton, the north shore of the Nova Scotia mainland, North Carolina and the Glengarry area of Eastern Ontario.

ARRIVED IN 1817

It has probably survived best in Cape Breton where a clannish quality has been fostered by the severe climate and years of hardship in a region of relatively slow economic development.

MacLeod, a clergyman, adventurer, school master and magistrate, landed with his followers first at Pictou, N.S., on the mainland, in 1817. Unhappy there, they sailed away three years later. Hit by a savage storm, they sought shelter in the Bras d'Or Lakes.

They landed on the west side of the lakes, in central Cape Breton at a hilly, scenic spot now called St. Ann's. A settlement was started there under MacLeod's leadership.

He sailed in 1851 to Australia and New Zealand with some of his group but others remained and their descendants are still in the area.

Scottish communities sprang up all around the lakes and on a belt of meadow, mountain and lake running from the northwest coast to the southern corner of the island. Many came directly from Scotland; others trekked overland from other parts of the Maritimes. One story tells of a family leaving Prince Edward Island and a 999-year lease on their land because they wanted land in Cape Breton that would be theirs forever.

SCOTTISH NAMES

The settlements often took Scottish names—Inverness, Loch Lomond, Dunvegan, Strathlorne, Barra Strait, Iona and dozens more. Once settled, the Scots stuck to their own communities, clan customs and religion.

Iona, for example, is settled almost exclusively by Roman Catholics bearing the name MacNeil. At Little Narrows, ten miles away the villagers are Protestant with a Presbyterian background.

Many settlers could neither read nor write Gaelic when they arrived. Clan histories, witch tales, love songs, work songs and stories of Bonnie Prince Charlie and other heroes were seldom written but many still survive.

Spinning, weaving and knitting blankets and clothing were once almost universal in the homes. Now, says Mrs. Flora Heuser, 81, a MacIsaac of Port Hood by birth, the spinning wheel is in the parlor.

The milling frolic, a gathering of settlers pulling a homespun blanket across a table to the tune of a Scottish air, has survived in many places. But it serves no useful purpose. Today's factory - made blankets don't need the treatment, designed to raise a fluffy, smooth surface on the yarn blanket.

ENGLISH CAUGHT ON

The Gaelic tongue can still be heard on some farms, in the odd work gang, or on the streets of Margaree, Mabou, Christmas Island, Iona, Little Narrows, Tarbot or Dunvegan.

English took the upper hand two or three generations ago, however. It began to appear in schools in the 19th century and it was considered uneducated to be unable to speak and read it.

Gaelic survived best in religion. On occasions such as communion or church anniversaries, places of worship are crowded for services completely in Gaelic. In Roman Catholic parishes confession is still taken in the ancient tongue.

Two of the best-known Gaelic-speaking clergymen are Rev. Stanley Macdonald, brother of the late Premier Angus L. Macdonald, and Dr. A. J. MacKinnon, former moderator of the Presbyterian Church in Canada. But Gaelic-speaking ministers and priests are becoming few.

Dr. MacKinnon, whose charge is Little Narrows, recalls the time when a minister ignorant of Gaelic would not be given a charge in Scottish charges of Cape Breton.

GAELIC COLLEGE

Father Macdonald has been preaching in Gaelic to Cape Breton Scots most of his life and still does active parish work at Big Pond but uses the language less often now than when he was younger.

While most authorities concede the language is dying, Rev. Angus MacKenzie is promoting a project he hopes will perpetuate the arts and crafts of Celtic culture "to the end of time."

Inspired by stories of Rev. Norman MacLeod and his followers, Mr. MacKenzie left his Presbyterian charge of Spencerville, Ont., in 1939 and established a memorial to the pioneer preacher—the Gaelic College of Celtic Folk Arts, 16 miles north of Baddeck on the Cabot Trail.

He says that before his college opened, Highland dancing had virtually disappeared from Cape Breton. Bagpipes were seldom heard and clan lore was being forgotten.

Since 1948 more than 2,300 have received Gaelic singing and language instruction at the college, 1,500 have been trained in Highland dancing, 300 girls and 100 men and boys have taken lessons on the bagpipe and upwards of 500 Cape Breton girls have made their own Highland dresses.

FORMED SOCIETY

A Roman Catholic movement to preserve the culture began even earlier. Father Macdonald recalls the beginning of a campaign among priests in the Scottish areas near Antigonish on the mainland and in Cape Breton 60 years ago. The first Scottish Catholic Society was formed. Now, he says, the culture is "respected, so people want it."

The provincial education department appeared in the picture with Gaelic summer school instruction in Halifax in 1939 and 1940. The classes were resumed in 1950 and carried on for eight years by Mr. Macleod, a MacLeod, now at St. Francis Xavier University in Antigonish.

At St. F.X. he gives the only instruction in Gaelic at the university level in Canada in addition to teaching Scottish history.

Glenn's Public Appearances Have Propaganda Value

By JOSEPH McGWEEN
Canadian Press Staff Writer

It was not only the scientific success of John Glenn's orbital flight that sent the United States into an emotional binge. Glenn's attractive personality had something to do with it.

Americans would have been mildly delighted in any case with Glenn's pioneering space flight. But they were given a bonus—they got not just a hero, but the image of a hero.

Not only did Glenn come through his space ordeal with cool courage. He then met the highest dignitaries of the country with poise, cracked jokes with President Kennedy, spoke of his wife as the "rock" of his family and—above all — spoke with obvious sincerity of his deep patriotism.

Newspaper writers have been digging all the way back to 1927 for a parallel in the wild acclaim that greeted Charles Lindbergh's epic solo flight across the Atlantic. Some sort of a comparison may be possible today when Glenn will be treated to a Broadway ticker - tape parade in New York, as was Lindbergh.

FELL SHORT

The propaganda potential of Glenn as a prime topic of the day has Kennedy and other high government officials are reported cautious about crediting him abroad. Perhaps they feel that, after all, his exploit fell short of those of the Soviet Union's spacemen Gagarin and Titov.

Observers feel that even if Glenn does not leave his own country he is doing a needed job of morale - building at home. The frenzied reaction to his flight was itself a measure of how much Americans were hurt by Russia's earlier advances in space exploration.

This was sometimes demonstrated in an odd, inverted kind of way.

New York, for instance, it was easily possible to come across people — and not just simple people who refused to believe Russia had conducted orbital flights. It was all a propaganda stunt, they declared stoutly in the face of all evidence.

After the Russians released pictures, one question was "why didn't they show these at the time it was done?" Kennedy's messages of congratulations to Premier Khrushchev didn't compose the sceptics.

When Glenn's flight was repeatedly postponed, the wisdom of total publicity exposure was sometimes questioned. It is really the weather that is causing delay? Some doubters wanted to know. Is there danger to the astronaut cracking up on the climb? Will this be the worst disaster of them all?

Glenn's soaring success was taken not just as a victory for United States science but for the American way of life.

Burma's Premier, Other Members Govt. Arrested

Army Takes Control In Lightning Move

CP from AP-Reuters

RANGOON—Burma's defence chief, Gen. Ne Win, seized power Saturday and arrested Prime Minister U Nu, ex-president Sao Shwe Thaik and other members of the government.

One casualty was reported in the army seizure of power—the son of former president Thaik was fatally wounded in a stray bullet when Thaik's guards and troops exchanged fire. Thaik was Burma's first president. He retired from the office in 1952.

Military headquarters said U Nu was arrested at his suburban residence at 2 a.m. and taken away by soldiers. Thaik lived a few hundred yards away.

Military personnel in quick succession also arrested Thakin Tin, finance minister and president of Burma's ruling party; Housing Minister U Zahre Latt; Trade Minister U Tweza; Industries Minister U Rashid, and the minister for Karen state affairs, Saw Hla Tun.

The army suspended parliament and seized strategic communications, transportation and security points throughout the country.

Win, who announced the takeover on the state radio, said the army's one-elected government for 18 months before being succeeded by the Sun. March 4.

Eyewitnesses said army units with tanks and guns rolled into Rangoon before dawn Saturday and took over the homes of cabinet ministers.

Immediate cause of the army move was believed to be a decision to declare a state of the Shan state for Burma to have a federal instead of unitary government, with the area inhabited by the Burmese people reduced to a province administrative unit.

THAKTIN REVOLT

Shan leaders attending a meeting here were believed to have favored federalism and secession if Nu's government did not accept their demands.

Win in his broadcast said the army made its move because the country was in danger of "causing alarm and anxiety" to the people.

He promised to the people to keep calm and asked officials to carry out their duties normally.

Foreign Minister Sao Hkun Hkio, who is also minister for external affairs, was among leaders who advocated federalism before the army took the custody of the army.

Rangoon airport was closed this morning and there was talk about their business without explanation as if nothing had happened.

Nu became the first prime min. in U Nu's government in Burma in 1948. He led the country until 1958 when he resigned to devote himself to the re-organization of the anti - Fascist People's Freedom League, the government party.

The following year, he was again elected premier, by the Burmese Chamber of Deputies in the absence of Win, the present Burmese Socialist leader.

In 1958 he turned the chief of the Burmese general staff, to form a new government when his own party split into factions was confirmed as premier by parliament and held office for 18 months.

In 1960 Nu won a landslide victory in national elections and again became premier.

Evidence Curtailed By Judge's Ruling

PETERBOROUGH (CP) — A provincial police officer testified in a jail cell to get information about a bank robbery, but his evidence was stringently curtailed Thursday by Judge A. R. Wilmot.

Const. Miles Blouin posed as a prisoner in county jail here to gain information on the whereabouts of the $232,000 taken in the Aug. 31 robbery of the Toronto-Dominion bank in Havelock, Ont.

For more than two days Const. Blouin was in the same cell block as Roger Poirier, 31, and Jean-Claude Lalonde, 24, two of the four Montreal men charged with the robbery. The others are Lawrence Lalonde and Roger Martel, 41. A fifth suspect, Hermyle Lalonde, and a George Wilson, died of a heart attack shortly after his arrest.

TESTIMONY IMPERFECT

Arthur Maloney, defending two of the men, claimed that under these circumstances the court would get "only an imperfect record, incomplete and inadequate account of what was said" if the court admitted his report.

"All we can get at most is a distorted prejudiced recollection of this officer.

Judge Willmott ruled that, because of Const. Blouin's admitted weakness in French, he could not be permitted to report only the statements he heard speak in English in the cell block.

A second OPP plant, Const. Pierre Courville, 26, tutors of his evidence allowed on the stand because of his knowledge of the spoken French language.

Const. Courville was in the block with Lalonde, Poirier, Martel and Hermyle Lalonde. His testimony concerned the plan the man was allowed in court to keep the train of the conversation. But it was not admissible as evidence.

Const. Courville's evidence was limited to two short statements. He said he heard Poirier say to someone, while they were pacing the floor: "I though you would

Cause of Crash That Claimed 95 Lives Still a Mystery

NEW YORK (AP)—Recovery crews worked through a bitterly cold night recovering bodies from an American Airlines airliner that plunged with powerful fury into the shallow waters of Jamaica Bay Thursday.

The Boeing 707 jet — adapted for speedier takeoffs from airports surrounded by residential areas — carried 95 persons to death less than two minutes after it had taken off from Idlewild Airport at 10:07 a.m. Thursday. It was bound for Los Angeles.

It was the worst U.S. air disaster involving a single aircraft, topping the toll of the crash of a Trans World Airlines Constellation in Chicago last Sept. 1 in which 78 lost their lives.

The 237,000-pound astro - jet, nearly as long as a city block, fell feet first, plunged straight down suddenly and with such terrific force that the pilots probably had a chance to radio that he was in trouble.

NO INDICATION OF CAUSE

There was no flame, no smoke, no trailing exhaust, no outward indication of damage.

A Mohawk Air Lines plane bound for northern New York state followed the doomed jet from the runway and its passengers got a ghastly, bird's-eye view of the tragedy.

"The jet made a beautiful take-off. Then it happened. It was as if something reached up from the earth, grabbed its nose and pulled it down. The plunged crashed perfectly perpendicularly, making a terrific splash as it plowed into the muddy swamp."

The "terrific splash"—a 200-foot geyser—was the result of the 850-degree-hot engines hitting the icy water at 190 m.p.h.

The plane carried 87 passengers and a crew of eight.

Among the passengers was W. Alton Jones, 71, executive committee chairman of the Cities Service Company, who was on his way to California for a fishing trip with a friend—former president Eisenhower.

Also aboard was a young Canadian engineer on a year - old Stuart E. Allam of Ridgefield Park, N.J., and formerly from the Toronto suburb of Leaside.

He was sales manager for Marconi Instruments Company of Englewood. He was reportedly going to Los Angeles on a business trip.

Federal investigators hoped to retrieve the jet's flight control box from the murky water of Jamaica Bay.

This device, a small, yellow metal globe about the size of a basketball, carries a recording of the plane's height, speed and other data which the investigators hope will give them a clue to the cause of the tragedy.

Pilot, Capt. James F. S. Heist, 56, was a veteran of 18,300 hours in the air.

Names of the passengers were retired Admiral Richard Lansing Conolly, 60, and his wife of Westbury, N.Y.; Dr. Conolly, former deputy chief of

READY TO SHARE A-ARMS CONTROL WITH CANADA

But Will Not Yield Warhead Custody

WASHINGTON (CP) — The United States is prepared to share with Canada control over the firing of U.S. nuclear weapons on Canadian soil, but the U.S. won't yield custody over the nuclear warheads.

State Secretary Dean Rusk so informed a press conference Thursday in commenting on the Prime Minister Diefenbaker's nuclear policy statement that he expected to send soon in the procedure of a cease-fire in the 7½-year-old Socialist rebellion.

Street shooting in scattered areas of Algiers were said to have killed about 10 persons, including a woman.

A French lawyer described as "liberal" was found shot to death in his office. His predecessor was stabbed to death in the same office in 1957. Both were agents of the European rightist group, the Secret Organization, which opposes Algerian independence.

Police Casbah action erupted so fiercely that Algiers police headquarters ordered all its cars and men out of the area. About 80,000 Moslems live tightly packed in the ancient quarter in Moslem social squalor.

Cars lit to the army," was the broadcast order.

DEMONSTRATION SCENE

A police radio call said a terrorist attack started the fight and "we have called them on anything that moves, on people standing on rooftops and balconies."

The firing started just after 9:30 a.m. when a group of Moslems leaped to the Place du Gouvernement, a large square in the heart of the city.

REPORTERS BARRED

French troops barred reporters and photographers from the area. Hand-grenade explosions reverberated there and machinegunfire were heard.

Moslems told foreign correspondents they were shooting at their people again, both the army and the OAS and at them.

A French commando unit deployed around the Place du Gouvernement, dispersing groups of Moslems in tattered clothing and sending them scurrying. The troops knocked over stands of Moslem vendors.

DEBATE OFTEN RAW, ANGRY AND PEPPERY

Insults Traded Across Floor

OTTAWA (CP) — Opposition MPs and Works Minister Walker traded insults and innuendoes across the Commons floor Thursday.

Up for study was the $217,401,000 spending plan of the public works department for the 1962-63 fiscal year—generally a topic that gives MPs a chance to boast about what they've done for their constituencies.

Instead, the debate was often raw, angry and peppery.

One exchange erupted after Arnold Peters (CCF—Timiskaming) said he believes political patronage is returning to the public works department.

Mr. Walker: Mr. Chairman, the honorable member is making a serious allegation. He either, should put up and give some information or shut up and withdraw. I resent that very much."

Mr. Peters: "I do not want to go into the matter to any extent but I will use an example."

Mr. Walker: "Give us some good examples and not just the usual fiction."

Mr. Peters: "If the minister would contain his assining self and remain in his seat I will tell someone else has had an opportunity to reply . . ."

And, a few minutes later:

Mr. Walker: ". . . The only chance I have seen of any patronage in the honorable member's riding is when he himself, is trying to get something."

Mr. Peters: "I am not in that, and there is no possibility of me getting any patronage."

Mr. Walker: "Then will soon be out of business."

Mr. Peters: "The-minister, if he wishes to ascertain these facts—"

Mr. Walker: "Put up or shut up!"

Mr. Peters: "I with the minister would shut up. I am getting very tired of listening to him."

Mr. Walker: "You will get tiredier."

The CCF member did not elaborate on his charge apart from saying that the question of political influence in regard to

Mr. Walker and a flock of opposition MPs traded bitter salties during debate on works department appropriations for 1962-63.

Robert McCleave (PC—Halifax) indicated there may be action within a week to revive the parliamentary divorce procedure.

Frank Howard (CCF—Skeena) suggested in a statement that it must set a date for the Prince Rupert, South byelection by March 8.

Several Municipalities in Quebec Hiring Agencies to Do Policing

MONTREAL (CP) — A growing tendency by Quebec municipalities to hire private detective agencies to provide policemen is creating concern among the province's regular police forces.

Some 30 municipalities — La Chute, Lorraine and Lafleche-will soon be policed by the agency making the biggest mark in this field, the Phillips Investigation Service.

The province of Quebec Police and Fire Chiefs Association now is studying the problem with a special legal committee.

William Phillips, head of the Phillips bureau, emphatically denies suggestions that his men not capable to taking over the policing of a town.

He says his men "are as well if not better trained than those now employed in most small towns and I can give them as much, or better service, more cheaply."

Lafleche had a 12-man force that cost about $63,000 last year. The Phillips agency is reported to have signed a contract to provide Lafleche with a force of a chief, an assistant chief, eight policemen, three clerks and one patrol car for about $53,500—a saving of $10,000.

Ernest Trudel, a Lafleche alderman, chairman of the council's police committee and an enthusiastic booster of the private force, says he hopes a private agency will provide men who will do police work and nothing more.

"We have had trouble for the past 10 years because the police force in Lafleche was choosing sides in elections—and working to support its views."

Opposition Members Call Ontario Budget 'Old Hat'

TORONTO (CP) — Provincial Treasurer Allan presented a record-breaking budget to the Ontario legislature Thursday, declaring it broke new ground with a five-year plan of economic development.

The opposition's reaction: "Old hat."

Liberals and New Democrats showed up as enthusiasm for Mr. Allan's forecast of an economic upswing, coupled with a billion-dollar spending program including big new outlays for education, health and welfare.

The budget called for no new taxes or tax increases. It provided for a slight broadening of exemptions to the three-per-cent retail sales tax and for additional concessions in the Succession Duty Act.

Liberal Leader Wintermeyer called the budget "unimaginative" and said it made no fundamental rearrangement of the provincial - municipal tax relationship to relieve the burden on municipalities.

"It is clear the government has built up over the years a staggering tax edifice with no apparent plan," he said.

For the New Democratic Party, Ken Bryden (Toronto Woodbine) declared the five-year plan is no different "in significant respects from the last 15 years of planlessness."

Mr. Allan, in his 1½-hour address, said the plan aims at maintaining "an adequate rate of economic growth consistent with the whole well - being of the province."

He called for combined net ordinary and capital expenditures in the fiscal year starting next month of $1,180,000,000, up $128,000,000 from 1961-62. Almost half the increase will be in the educational field.

The budget estimated a surplus of $2,000,000 on ordinary account for the year just ending and included a $74,000 surplus next year.

Of the general economic picture, Mr. Allan said retail sales had shown a modest increase in 1961 and that there was a strong provincial product — sum of all goods and services produced in Ontario — was between six and seven per cent ahead of last year.

"The prospects are bright for continuing growth and for increases in personal income, corporation profits and savings."

It was the fourth annual budget delivered by Mr. Allan, a former Toronto city controller and the Lake Erie district.

Among other majors features of the budget were proposals to finance two projects recently announced by the government: a 12 - point housing program designed to boost rental housing construction and use, and an economic council to help plot the future of Ontario's economic growth.

French Troops Storm Casbah, Battle Moslems

Brutal Triple Murder Enrages French in Oran

CP from Reuters-AP

ALGIERS — French troops fought a wild, hour-long battle with Moslem gendarmes in the ancient Casbah today.

Thousands of troops ringed the squalid native quarter after crack units stormed into its narrow byways to get down Moslems who fired at them from rooftops. The uprising was crushed with gunfire and grenades.

There was no immediate accounting of casualties.

Military officials said they believed the fight started after a terrorist attack set off edgy tempers.

Police cars were withdrawn from the area at the height of the brief fight to let troops take over the job of restoring order. Green and white rebel flags waved in some areas in defiance of the troops.

Barbed wire barriers sealed off the old quarter, but after fighting had died down to random shots one exit into the Place du Gouvernement was opened to let Moslems go to the nearby mosque. Moslems are in the eighth day of the observance of Ramadan, a holy month in their faith.

TROOPS ON ALERT

Although the Casbah outbreak was quelled, troops in platoon strength kept a watchful eye on European section of the city, alert for signs of further disturbances.

Bitterness reached a new pitch Thursday in commenting on the Prime Minister Diefenbaker's nuclear policy statement that he expected to send soon in the procedure of a cease-fire in the 7½-year-old Socialist rebellion.

Street shooting in scattered areas of Algiers were said to have killed about 10 persons, including a woman.

Policeman Awakes 16 Residents In Burning Block, Then Collapses

BROCKVILLE (CP)—Fire in a two-storey apartment-commercial block burned out of control for more than two hours today before firemen managed to bring it under control.

Fifteen persons living in three third - floor apartments scrambled to safety in below-zero weather after patrolling police constable Paul Marshall, 26, first saw flames and smoke coming into the burning building and awakened them, then collapsed.

Const. Marshall, taken to hospital after he was overcome by smoke, turned in the fire alarm. He was credited with saving the lives of the apartment occupants.

While firemen poured water into the heavily damaged building on Brockville's main street across from city hall, an uncoffi cial estimate of fire damage was set at about $100,000.

The blaze believed to have started from faulty wiring in the third-floor apartment of Mr. and Mrs. Ernest Bolton, was one of the third major blaze in this area in less than two months.

Fire raged through the Grand Central Hotel Jan. 10, causing $125,000 damage, and a fire in an automobile garage was blamed for causing damage of about $125,000.

Firemen contained flames in the Bolton apartment before they reached the attic, thus preventing to the centre and managed to save parts of two apartments and most of three stores.

The Fowler apartment was burned out and the other two suffered extensive water and smoke damage.

Also damaged were real estate offices, an electric store and a women's clothing shop, all on the first floor.

1st Commodity Trade Surplus Since 1952

OTTAWA (CP)—A nine-per-cent rise in 1961 exports to a record high gave Canada its first commodity trade surplus since 1952, the Dominion Bureau of Statistics reported today.

The country exported $37,600,000 more than it imported last year, the bureau said in a preliminary report, adding that the surplus was the highest when more detailed figures are fit.

This compares with a $37,900,000 trade deficit in 1960—the fourth in a row.of deficits which climbed to a record $1,200,000 deficit in 1956.

Total exports and imports were at record highs last year. Total exports of $5,882,100,000 topped the previous record set in 1957 by $5,395,300,000, and the $5,844,500,000 imports in 1961 was sharply upwards. In the last quarter, exports to the United States were up 22.7 per cent from a year earlier and

READY TO DISCUSS

Rusk declined to say whether any formal negotiations on the sharing of control had been initiated with Canada, but he said:

"The U.S. remains prepared at any time to discuss such arrangements with the government of Canada. We have, of course, discussed such arrangements with other governments."

While Rusk brushed off attempts to dig deeper into the joint control issue, other sources said a draft of a formal agreement covering the use of nuclear warheads for Bomarc missiles in Canada had been drafted and brought to the attention of the Canadian government. So far the Canadian government has not approved it.

TORONTO (CP)—The Jockey Club Ltd. will extend rights to common shareholders to buy one new share for each five held at a price of $5 a share, K. P. Taylor, president, announced Thursday at the annual meeting.

Mr. Taylor said that to help meet higher costs, general admission to Ontario tracks will be raised this year to $1.25 from $1.

He said there is a need to raise funds for construction of a harness racing track at Campbellville, Ont., additions to Woodbine stands and a clubhouse at Fort Erie now under construction. It is proposed to raise $5,000,000 partly by issuance of first mortgage bonds and partly by the offer of rights to shareholders.

A 20-per-cent increase in dividends was announced. Two cents will be paid quarterly April 1 and May 15 instead of five cents half-yearly.

Chairman Votes Against Bill By PC Member

TORONTO (CP)—Stanley Hall (C—Halton) Thursday accused Toronto members of trying to run the legislature's private bills committee.

The accusation came when a tie - breaking vote was cast against a bill sponsored by Mr. Hall.

The bill would permit Halton County to hold in trust property of residents of its home for the aged.

The committee had voted 9 to 9 on the bill.

Mr. Hall immediately rose to his feet and moved to the front of the room.

"A man who hasn't the guts to vote on the committee," he called hasn't the right to decide a tie vote," he said.

"It is just another attempt by the city of Toronto members to run the private bills committee. They tried it before but we put a stop to it then. I'm sure it's because they can't get their own way."

Trenton-Made Safety Film Given Premiere at Kiwanis

TRENTON — Back in the 30's a full-length movie, "Carry, On Sergeant" was filmed in Trenton, using local people as extras and with Trenton landscapes often used as backgrounds. Certain interior scenes were shot in the "old drill hall" which is now the Trenton Dyeing and Finishing Company plant.

Using the safety program of the Trenton Kiwanis Club as his theme, Arnold Meyers, secretary of the Trenton Movie Club, has written the story of "Carry On Trenton" and "Carry On Sergeant", Actually it is called "I'll Never Forget" and it was given its premiere at the Trenton Kiwanis Club last night.

At the start of the story, John, who in real life is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Ken Bellejoy, First Ave., Trenton, has a fine disregard for Elmer's safety rules. He has been cut out of his way to break every rule in the book as he drives his bicycle to school. Then when John spends one period, ignoring safety rules by Sergeant Gordon Steenburg, Trenton's safety officer. On his way to school John knocks down off on his bike for the benefit of his "girl friend", Margie Patterson.

At home, John is confronted by his father, Glen (Jim Brown) who has heard about his day's mischief, John is sent to bed without his supper.

Well-meaning "mother", (E. Ireland), brings him a snack, which John gets rid of. Then asleep, John has a series of nightmares, each point out to him the necessity for adherence to safety rules.

John learns his lesson and starts out the very next day, to observe all rules and teach his school chums to do the same.

Need More Men If Shorter Week Allowed

TRENTON — Fire Chief Cecil Ellis said yesterday that he felt there was a certain amount of misunderstanding about his reported request that the fire department be put on a 56-hour week basis and that two additional men be added to the permanent force.

The fire chief said that the firemen, members of Local 1328 of the Fire Fighters' Association, had asked for a 56-hour work week, and that while he had not been asked for two new men initially, he had made this request to council later, because the shorter work week could not be implemented without the addition.

No firemen have been working a 56 hour week.

Last week, town council said it had no objection to the shorter work week but was directed to try to work this out without hiring more men.

Yesterday, Chief Ellis said that he would be next to impossible, because it would mean putting one man on night duty and fill one man was forced to answer a call, the fire hall would be empty until someone else arrived. If another fire broke out, no one would be in the hall to answer the phone, and the response to the second fire would be delayed, until relief showed up.

The chief said that his main concern was that the citizens of Trenton were adequately protected against loss of life and property through fire.

Membership May Reach All-Time High

TRENTON — The decision of the Ontario Command of the Royal Canadian Legion to present a brief to the federal government protesting a $10 reduction in war veterans' allowance to compensate for a $10 rise in the old age pension, is receiving support in Trenton business executive to say, "When an organization of ex-service men and women present a brief to the government it is time it must listen. I urge every ex-serviceman and woman to join the Trenton branch of the Legion."

Kenneth Craddock, 1962 branch president and his executive expect that membership in 1962, will reach an all-time high.

RECEIVES RUDE JOLT.

Miss Annette Cumming of R.R. 1 Havelock, received a rude jolt as she was driving along the second concession road north of Brighton yesterday. She hit a horse, the horse, stepped nimbly out onto the road as Miss Cumming's car came over a slight rise of ground. Wheeee!

Miss Cumming's car was damaged to the extent of $100. Miss Cumming was shaken up but otherwise unhurt. The horse, at last report, was seen walking away from the scene of the impact, shaking his head. These new-fangled motor cars!

sales to non-Commonwealth countries overseas showed a year-to-year gain of 22.6 per cent.

Last year's imports totalled $5,794,000 or 3.5 per cent from $5,682,500,000 in 1960 and well over the previous record of $5,547,000,000 in 1956.

For the year as a whole, exports to the U.S. rose 5.3 per cent. Exports to non-Commonwealth overseas countries jumped sharply by 31.1 per cent. The bureau said this was due mainly to increased shipments to Communist China, Japan and European countries, but detailed figures by countries are not yet available.

Shipments to Britain declined fractionally and exports to other Commonwealth countries decreased 1.7 per cent.

Part of the increased value in last year's trade is attributed to the drop in the Canadian dollar's exchange value. The dollar's discount in May was below the U.S. dollar made imports more expensive and thus boosted the Canadian dollar value of exports sold for foreign currencies.

Trade figures by major areas for 1961 and 1960, in millions of dollars:

Labor Leader Says Warrender Should Resign

TORONTO (CP) — Douglas Hamilton, secretary-treasurer of the Ontario Federation of Labor, called Thursday night for the resignation of Ontario Labor Minister W. K. Warrender. He said Mr. Warrender has lost the confidence of organized labor.

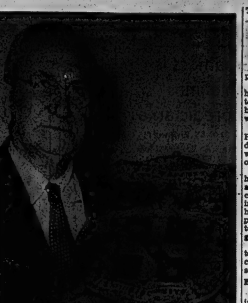
Speaking at a meeting of the Toronto and District Labor Council, Mr. Hamilton specifically criticized comments on the Royal York Hotel strike made by the minister Wednesday.

The minister had predicted the strike, now 10 months old, would "peter out" in the face of the financial resources of the Canadian Pacific Railway. He also criticized union leaders, who he said had influenced the membership against accepting a compromise settlement he had suggested.

Accused Given 5½ Years for Bank Robbery

WALKERTON, Ont. (CP) — Allan Owen Sound undertaker Thursday was sentenced to 5½ years in penitentiary following conviction on two charges of armed robbery.

George Coutts, 39, was sentenced to three years by judge P. S. MacKenzie Jr. for the armed robbery of $23,000 last Jan. 4 from the Bank of Montreal branch in this town 30 miles southwest of Owen Sound.



He was sentenced to 2½ years for a $4,000 robbery last year at Harkaway, Ont.

Coutts faces one more charge of armed robbery, in connection with a holdup in 1956 at St. George, near Brantford.

The two sentences will be served consecutively at Kingston Penitentiary.

Dr. J. Seldon Demorest Can Trace Family Lineage Back To Time of Crusades in 1096

Possibly fewer than one person in a dozen is interested in genealogy, but when the bug strikes, true dedication is likely to be the result.

At least that is the case with Dr. J. Sheldon Demorest, Belleville and Foxboro medical practitioner, who since early in life has taken a deep interest in tracing his family history.

And for him the search has been rewarding. He can trace his family lineage back to the time of the first crusades in 1096. Members of the Demorest family proudly marched with the crusaders to the Holy Land nearly 900 years ago.

But in his quest of family history, Dr. Demorest has come up with some interesting facts regarding the early history of the village of Foxboro.

For instance he knows that Foxboro was originally called Smithville after his great grandfather Smith Demorest, who built the first house in the village. That was back in 1800.

Another member of the Demorest family, Gillian Deane, is credited as founding the village of Demorestville in Prince Edward county.

LIVED IN FRANCE

The original Demorests lived in France, but for some inter-mixed with the Dutch and eventually moved to Holland as early colonists to New Amsterdam (now the New York and New Jersey area). Still later the family members made their way to the Carolinas in the days of the United Empire Loyalist movement.

And just for the record, the inter-mixture of Dutch, French, and English in the ancestry of the Demorest name which now appears in approximately 35 different spellings. There are also 35 of the way from Demorest and Demarist to Demeray, Demerces and Demerest.

Dr. Demorest's branch of the family came to Canada from Manchester, Vermont.

One of his grandmother's links is a land certificate in his den which shows him to be a member of the Belleville Society of New York. He is the first and only Canadian to have the honor.

Dr. Demorest has been developing his family research since he was a bit of a lad on his father's farm just west of Foxboro on the Belleville road of Sidney. Currently he is working on a synopsis of the "Demarest" family history with Voorhis Demarist of Hackensack, New Jersey.

HAS COAT OF ARMS

Like many other families of the era, Dr. Demorest family had its own coat of arms back through the years of time. That coat of arms was carried by volunteer family members who joined with the first crusades to fight for the liberation of the Holy Land.

Dr. Demorest has a replica of that original coat of arms; with its motto "Ex Vide Vivo" the translation of which is "By Faith I Live."

The coat of arms is the Christian cross of Hope with a diagonal black band as the mark of knighthood. Escallop shells on the black band signify pilgrimages to the graves of Christ.

Dr. Demorest's great grandfather Smith Demorest came to the Belleville area from about 1797 to "look the area over" and apparently liking what he saw moved his family a few years later. He built the first house where Foxboro now stands.

STILL STANDING

That small Foxboro house is still standing on the northwest corner at the intersection of No. 14 Highway and the Frankford Road (5th concession of Sidney).

Smith Demorest apparently wasn't eligible for a free land grant so he bought his first 100 acres (now the John Herbertson farm) and a few years later purchased another on the 5th concession of Sidney, paying 200 pounds for the 200 acres. Dr. Demorest has the original deed.

It was on this farm (now known as the Harry Lott farm) that Mr. Smith Demorest built the first brewery in 1813. This house also still stands.

The Demorest house seems to have been a first of its kind in the area in that it was covered with clapboards, seemingly the most unheard of at the time.

The reason for the scarcity of clapboard houses back around 1812 was that clapboards required nails and nails were scarce in those pioneer days.

Dr. Demorest had an advantage over his fellow pioneers, however, in that he owned and was able to make his own nails.

AN EXAMPLE OF NAILS

It was in this house that Dr. Demorest was born in 1880. As a young man he had occasion to remove the clapboards and replace them on in reverse position as the "wrong" side would be to the weather.

Dr. Demorest worked the homestead until he was 20, when Simcoe Smith allowed him to enter medical school to train as a doctor. He entered the Medical College at Kingston, graduating in 1914. During the summer holidays he worked on board on the Great Lakes.

He did his internship at Winnipeg General Hospital; then practiced for three years in Saskatchewan and for two years in Alberta before returning to Ontario in 1931 when he set up practice in Stirling. He returned to his native Foxboro 10 years ago.

He recalls that when he was a boy three hotels still did a thriving liquor business in Foxboro, and also remembers the old Grand Trunk Works where the latest in carriages and buggies were manufactured.

HAD HEART ATTACK

A coronary last summer forced him to give up his doctor's practice but it didn't deter him from further delving into family history and now that he is retired he feels he will have more time than ever for his hobby.

Throughout his life that hobby has taken him into cemeteries and record offices in New York and the New England states in search of names and other family data.

But genealogy hasn't been Dr. Demorest's only hobby. He is also a collector of antique items in furniture, china and glassware and at one time collected paintings.

"I collected paintings until I had no room to hang them", he says.

During his younger years in Belleville Dr. Demorest was an active Mason and is Past member of Fidelity Lodge, A.F. and A.M. No. 76 at Sheffburn, Ont. He now seldom attends lodge meetings.

TRIPLE MURDER

ported stating European cars. Setif-el-Kebir is the site of a huge French naval base. The town near the base has long been free of violence connected with the Algerian rebellion.

The European woman, Mme. Rosette Orriga, was battered to death with an axe as she washed clothes in the backyard of her home.

Her son, Andre, 4, then was hit over the head with an axe and stabbed. Her daughter, Josette, 5, who had been out picking wildflowers, tried to flee, but was caught within 10 yards, picked up by the feet and battered to death against the ground.

Three Moslems were reported to have been shot by French security forces as they fled the scene.

BASE WORKERS STRIKE

When news of the Ortega killings reached the naval base where Mme. Ortega's husband works, the 8,000 base workers went on strike, Club-wielding European police on the rampage through the streets of Moslem districts, reportedly beating and beating up Moslems, shouting "Algeria Francaise" and yelling for the death of French President de Gaulle.

The Ortega killings and the subsequent European rioting followed the first major cracking of the anti-terrorist drive which have shown in the face of provocations by Moslem terrorist Secret Army Organization elements set gunning for an end to violence and thus jeopardizing the imminent cease-fire in the Algerian war.

Moslems Thursday began shooting military patrols and were greeted by fire from French troops after the Moslems had gone on the rampage through the streets of Oran. This almost ended the cessation of bomb near the Moslem and Jewish districts.

The bomb explosions occurred near a street where two timebombs had exploded earlier and killed an estimated 30 Moslem men, women and children.

No details were available on casualties when the French troops fired into the crowd. Ten crowds but military sources said that throughout Algeria Thursday 32 persons were killed and 36 wounded in acts of violence.

Meanwhile, plans continued for a final peace conference to end Algerian war and a French government official said the final talks will begin by early next week.

Human Rights Code Given House Approval

TORONTO (CP)—The legislature gave clause-by-clause approval Thursday to Ontario's new code of human rights, but not without a concerted drive by opposition members to have dis crimination on the basis of age outlawed by the code.

The Government majority outvoted Northwest Liberal New Democratic opposition after Premier Roberts said an opposition amendment fell "very wide of the mark" of eliminating discrimination solely because of age and would "create a completely impossible administrative problem."

Backed by members of both opposition groups, James Thornter (L-Toronto Parkdale) urged that the word "age" be included —with such others as creed, race, place of origin and ancestry—among the grounds upon which the code forbids discrimination in employment.

Mr. Roberts agreed: "I'm in sympathy with the objectives of the amendment, but I believe it will not do what its sponsor intended. . . . My own opinion is that the matter of age will have to be the subject of a separate statute.

NOTES PC BILL

Elmer Sopha (L — Sudbury) noted that Allen Grossman (PC —Toronto St. Andrew), minister without portfolio, had introduced a measure aimed at ending such discrimination two years ago, only to have it die on the order paper.

"It is unreasonable, perverse or obstinate on our part, two years after a government memorandum was offered a bill, to expect some legislation from the government?" he asked.

In the end, the amendment went down 48 to 32.

Encouraging News

Perhaps the most stimulating news regarding international affairs, if a country's internal problem can be termed international in content as well as in interest, is the mutual agreement of the French government and the insurgent Algerian parliament on the terms of a ceasefire.

It is now expected that open negotiations will begin between the Moslems and the French in Paris to settle the Algerian problem. There can be little doubt that there will be little problem in a successful and mutually satisfactory agreement being reached between Premier de Gaulle of France and Ben Youssef Ben Khedda, the insurgent provisional president of Algeria. Both of these gentlemen have achieved the present status of success in spite of overwhelming odds to the contrary created by an irresponsible and murderous group of whites.

These conditions serve only to enhance the success of de Gaulle and Ben Youssef Ben Khedda. That a feeling of trust between two peoples has been achieved in spite of the widespread terrorism and murder created by the Secret Army Organization is most commendable.

It is to be hoped an effective campaign can be conducted by the French authorities to weed out the OAS and its leaders who believe that wholesale murder is the answer to their problem of maintaining their rights in Algeria.

This might be the answer to the problem but not in the manner in which they might interpret it. There is a case to be made where those who live by the sword appear to have wholeheartedly earned the right to die by it.

If their reign of terror is not stopped and the OAS members punished any peace in Algeria will be without honour. It is to be hoped that the best interests of France, Algeria and humanity will be served by effective action in this direction as quickly as possible.

A Good Idea

The Ontario Department of Education has stated that this year any Grade 13 student who has not received a teacher's recommendation to write any of his final examinations, which are set and marked by the department, shall have to pay a five-dollar fee for each subject which he wishes to write.

In 1961, the department states, about 10,000 papers were written by students who did not have a teacher's recommendation and, thusly, little chance of passing the examinations. Besides causing the department around $40,000 to mark these papers this extra work delayed the marking and publication of papers written by other students, who had qualified to write them.

Since the minimum mark for a teacher's recommendation is 35 per cent, apparently based on the student's work throughout the school term, we can see no cause for alarm that some students are going to suffer in their educational development by this action.

Indeed we fail to see why a person who has only obtained a mark of 35 per cent for his entire year's work should be recommended. It might serve as an incentive to students in the marginal area between 35 and 50 per cent, the latter being the minimal pass mark, to recognize that a student who has not achieved a grading of 50 per cent on his year's work to pay the five-dollar fee for each subject in which he wishes to write.

We are all for free education but do not think it is at all proper to spend public funds on students who have misused this advantage and have proven themselves unable to take advantage of such an opportunity even to the extent of maintaining the minimum standard.

Curious Fellow

Curiosity, while it may have killed the cat, makes the reporter.

We have, therefore, the greatest admiration for the reporter at an Ottawa press conference, who, upon being told that 11,000 persons of the gentle sex had been each measured in 59 places, asked: "How can you find 59 different places to measure on a woman?"

Admittedly, this query displayed a lamentable lack of knowledge of women's anatomy and mathematics. One does not need to be an expert on the subject to grasp the fact that the number of possible measurements is infinite.

The question should have been: "What 59 places were measured?"

It seems that to find the impetus to spring from one phase in his development to the next, man often finds it necessary to stamp very heavily upon the phase he is leaving.—Margery Fetham in her 1961 Reith Lectures.

Strictly Personal

Greatness Is Sometimes Unpredictable

By SYDNEY J. HARRIS

I have been looking through the newly discovered papers of Don Marquis, that fine philosophical humorist of a generation ago, and was struck with the arrival of the first Marquis of Lansdowne from northern Ireland in 1750.

It has always struck me that biographies should be a much finer time on the lineage of the ancestor. Something about a man's parents can tell us a good deal about him — but going back further is generally a waste of time and space, if the man himself is extraordinary.

In fact, one might say that the greater the man, the less consequential his background. Ordinary persons belong to their background — they are a natural, logical product of their environment — this is what makes them ordinary.

But the truly great may be impossible for the operation of the environment to explain. Genius is a mystery, and will be resistant to all attempts at dissection.

But what accounts for a Beethoven, a Napoleon or an Einstein? Even the attempt to biologically call "sports." Their peculiar greatness cannot be derived from their backgrounds they represent, indeed, a sharp break in the continuity of their families' lives.

In a sense every great man is a rebel. Some rebel against the established social order, others against the artistic or intellectual order.

In our time, perhaps the preeminent rebel was Freud, who created a profound revolution in psychology. But even although Ernest Jones' massive three volume biography of Freud, one can find no "explanation" in the background for his monumental questioning of traditional beliefs. In externals, Freud's life differed little from the average family.

It helps us, in understanding Mozart, to know what his father was like, for his father's early training of the boy had a permanent influence on the essential meaning of Mozart's music. His incomparable superiority to the music of all his contemporaries — has nothing to do with his environments, his place of origin or his early schooling.

All the absolute facts at our command about the greatest writer the world has ever known could be placed on single sheet of paper — even though thousands of pages have been written on the "life of Shake speare." Of two of the a hundred times more about him, in a literal sense, this would not illuminate his genius.

Greatness is unpredictable; it cannot be extrapolated from any previous knowledge. Before 1900, who could know that Einstein, working obscurely in the patent office, turned into something of a golden tide.

Figures known to the U.S. Great Lakes Commission show that U.S. ore take ports last year shipped 1,300,000 net tons of iron and steel to foreign countries, more than double the 1960 figure. The total placed scrap moved only to ports in the Great Lakes.

Low lake freights on scrap last year were partly responsible for the increase in exports. Another reason was the Seaway itself, which provided a big new outlet for scrap metal along the Great Lakes.

War Can Grow In Vietnam

New York Times

The question of how to portray the growing American military role in South Vietnam is facing the Administration with a delicate problem.

There are now, news reports say, some 4,000 uniformed Americans in South Vietnam. They are engaged in such activities as training Vietnamese — often in combat situations — transporting troops into and out of combat and outposts, aerial reconnaissance and other dangerous missions. Moreover, the United States strength is increasing while the Vietcong are not against military reinforcement, by sea from North to South Vietnam. If Americans are shot at during the course of these activities they are shooting back, and there is already one known American combat casualty. Then, Paul D. Harkins has been appointed to command the expanding American military operations in South Vietnam.

The Administration has been trying to depict the scope of this extension of American involvement in South Vietnam as small as possible. Some curbs have been put on news coverage of American role in the fighting, which is still primarily confined to Vietnamese units. Vietnamese are maintaining the entire non-Communist engaged in combat. The public impact of these steps belittle the American role beyond its size, and this could compromise Washington efforts to keep the South Vietnam war on a limited war.

There should, however, be no misunderstanding of the possibility that what is now a limited South Vietnam may escalate into a larger conflict. Neither Hanoi will depend on just how much help and openly Communist North Vietnam gives its supporters, Communist China and Russia, to intervene in South Vietnam. The United States would find it difficult, if not impossible, to withdraw from the fight if they do decide to commit major forces. There is reason to believe they will not do this, that they are also interested in keeping the conflict a limited one. But the possibility of a major war is still there, and the administration is not about which American officials ought to be candid.

Belleville players showed the highest kind of courage, in never giving up fighting for a moment and finally they were rewarded by goals enough to decide the fight in their favor. The following composed the Belleville team: Boland, Nolway, Green, Arnott, Whalen, Weir, Goyer and Hagerman. Six-Footer Torpedoed

Montreal Star

- If a paper prepared for next month's Canadian Conference on education here comes true, every housewife's budget is going to be torpedoed.

The paper suggests that Canada adopt the metric system in the fields of the inch, the ounce, the pint, and so forth. There are certain snags in this of which you can see the subtlest derives from the fact that the metric pound is 10 per cent heavier than the old pound. The difference in the look of a pound of butter is still enough to raise the price by 10 per cent.

The six-foot-tall six-footer, who at one metre, 93 centimetres, would lose all numerical distinction. You have to be just over six foot six to break into the two-metre mark, and that's too long a stretch for us.

Consider the motorist, pulled in for doing 56 in a 48-mile-an-hour zone, saying: "But, Officer, I swear that my current pre-metric old speedometer was only reading 50."

And, ultimate horror, imagine going into a bar and saying: "Gimme a shot, and mean 1.136 litres — of 30 centigrade, or rather, 40 degree, rye."

Doodlology Not Simple

Sherbrooke Record

Doodling has become big business for some people. Like the men who came up with that "Kilroy was here" and flowing what-chamacallit wasn't easy to "create," you know.

The same people specialists recently designed a similar new line for the large Canadian packaged food firm specializing in the intricacies of that operation given a thorough analysis of the development of the CN circle, and, what is more matter, the whole field of what might be called corporation doodleology.

The design is the result of "festive and stimulating appearance," impact, and last to consider the idea of "modern dynamic progress" More than 150 different designs were tried before the right one was achieved.

The final result looks, like the CNR design, as if it were produced by a junior office boy scribbling absently on the wall while he talked on the telephone with his girl friend.

Emotional Depression Yeilds to Medication

By JOSEPH G. MOLNER, M.D.

Reading Alton L. Blakeslee's medical column in "Today's Health," was interested by his report of how our emotions help or hinder our recovery from infections.

It seems that some psychiatrists at Johns Hopkins University gave psychological tests to a group of 600 people. Soon a serious form of depression developed.

Those who, in the psychological tests, had strong themselves to be emotionally depressed, complained of being tired and weak three weeks after the flu.

I don't care to hazard any guesses as to precisely why our emotions play such a part — but doctors see it happen every day, and others see it happen occasionally. Emotional depression does seem something to us.

How of course we can't just say to a depressed person, "Cheer up!" and expect him or her to do so by sheer will power.

We can, however, do quite a few things with medicine, in a short time ago. For instance, getting a person into thyroid pe-ed up. Sometimes, other chemical deficiencies can be readily treated. In a great many cases, to cite only one.

And sometimes there is, in varying degree, what we call a "depression" in the purely emotional sphere. Here, too, medicine yields to medication in a great many cases.

These depressions, at their most severe, can turn an average boy into a prison or a glum recluse. They can, and do lead in severe cases to suicide. It's that sort of thing — and that's why doctors work hard.

They have a head, and still are, extreme cases in which electroshock treatment is urged to snap a terribly depressed patient out of these dangerous feelings.

But short of that, we are find. And that drug called "psychic energizers" can effectively pick people up out of these depressions.

I'm not saying, of course, that if you have a day of depression you should rush off to see a doctor to give you a drug to fix it. We all have these sour days.

I do emphasize, however, that if you slide off into continuing darkness, are obsessed with fears of imagined illness, have faint interest in the ordinary affairs of life, habitually wake up excessively early in the morning — and then don't like the world, nothing in dress and in general "change personality," it's time to have the doctor take a look. It may be depression, and the recent years have given us some medical tools to deal with it.

Dear Dr. Molner: I have been taking sleeping pills now for over a year. Would it be impossible to break the habit, or is it just a matter of nerve power — Mrs. A.O.

Sleeping pills may become a habit, just as anything can become a habit. And, yet, it is possible to break the habit, if for one good reason or another your doctor has prescribed these pills then I suggest discussing the matter with him first. He'll doubtless be glad you want to shed the habit but he may have some good reason for wanting you to do so gradually. Or he may be able to substitute some milder medication.

Note to C.C.: Brain damage embraces such a lot of possibilities. A drooling twitch may or may not leave apparent paralysis of other (damage), intention, and memory are among the causes. Consequences may be partial or complete paralysis, personality changes, loss, dizziness, etc. Therefore I can only say that detail answer to a question about brain damage without knowing what type is involved.

Ewe Given False Teeth

BBC London Letter

Unusual news story reported in the BBC General Overseas Service bulletin of "New Ideas," was the case of Gertrude, a 10-year-old ewe belonging to a veterinary surgeon in England's Isle of Wight. Veterinary surgeon Peter Ewe, possessor of a set of false teeth, and is believed to be the only sheep in the world with such a distinction. When Gertrude lost her own teeth, Dr. Slaughtered consulted with a local dentist and after six months of experiments she successfully fitted out with dentures which she now has no problems eating.

She gained 20 pounds in the first two weeks after having them. Gertrude is luckier than many thousands of people who are slaughtered every year at the age of four or five because of "broken mouth" — the farmers' term for damaged teeth.

TODAY'S TALK

By GEORGE MATTHEW ADAMS

"EVERYBODY"

In the book "Ariel," which is a life of Shelley, written by Andre Maurois, in 1923, I recall coming across the start of one conversation. In speaking of Shelley, Mary — Shelley's wife — said "Everybody goes to them." Shelley, distressed, looked up at the sky. "Everybody! Who is this mythical everybody that you ever seen it, Mary?"

To him who aspires to be honest and true expression to his ideas. Everybody to his life, there can be no "Everybody" to anything. It must become Nobody, excepting as it becomes in himself Everybody.

It is so often hear the expression "Everybody thinks this and that." As a matter of fact, there is a blind to it a despise the desire upon the part of the one who uses such an expression, to speak as though he sees or understands the physical hypocrisy that is emphasized in deeds from those not expected to show it, but moral and spiritual worth's a rare asset.

We are too much for what's Everybody thinks and does. As a matter of fact, Everybody isn't interested to anywhere near the extent we all too often think.

A man rises or falls according to the value he places upon his personal Kingdom.

And who is there who doesn't fall victim to the temptation of talking to the employees of his Lesser Self? The God alone Who looks after and cares about the Greater Soul. He tries us and gives us place according to our bravery and our ability as ruler in that lower realm.

Everybody is Nobody so long as you are Somebody!

STRENGTH FOR THE DAY

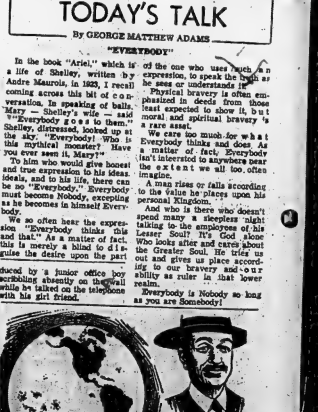
DR. EARL L. DOUGLASS

BEEHIVES AND BUMPERS

Some time ago, a beehive was brought into a television studio to be used in a program involving agricultural surroundings. Somebody tipped over the beehive. One can imagine the disorder and consternation as those startled bees began stinging about the studio, stinging everybody.

There are some people who have a genius — if it can be called that — for bumping against beehives and overturning them. They overturn them in the home, in the office, in the lodge. Wherever they are trouble is sure to arise. Everybody gets stung. Everybody is angry. Confusion takes the place of concord. Some people are like that because they are over-worked and tense. Others behave in this fashion because they have a mean streak through them. But others do it, I think, as it happens but put them in the vicinity of a beehive and they will have it broken open on the floor within a few minutes.

Individuals possessing free wills, and living in a country where the greatest of these will is permitted and encouraged, can stir up plenty of friction every day without even bumping any beehives. Christian righteousness is unique in its nature because Jesus tried to forestall evil by stopping all evil doing at its source, possessing the heart and you won't kill. Don't be fearful and malicious in thought and you will not commit adultery. Agree with thine adversary. Love your enemies. There is no other check. Go the second mile.



THE PACKSACK

By GREGORY CLARK

The next big struggle within the free world is the post industry — in which, of course the banks, the oil industry, the steel industry, the huge highway construction industry and many another powerful organization are to be included—is likely to be between the resort and hotel owners down in the north and scattered the civilized areas of Canada and those more aggressive resort owners and outfitters who are the fiercest pressing for admission for their enterprises into the last true wilderness, areas of the country.

The smaller resort owners, down in the pretty lake country, who are vastly in the majority in the tourist trade are fully aware that it is the lure of the wilderness that brings the bulk of the American traffic into Canada. These visitors don't actually want to suffer the hardships of the true wilderness. They still demand a bed at night, and feel they are in the wilds if they have to walk a few miles to a fishing lake.

But if the outfitters in the true wilds of Canada succeed in establishing the principle that genuine regions of wilderness in Canada becomes just another tourist industry itself to join with governments in a decision to preserve definite large areas of Canada's hinterland as inviolate. No planes, no guide service, no camp gas stoves, no gas, no roads, no accommodation. Just the wilderness, into which a man goes as an intruder, and comes out, leaving no mark.

Magistrate's Court

A Belleville man was placed on a one year suspended sentence by Magistrate R.C. Jackson in city magistrate's court Thursday afternoon when he appeared on a charge of assault.

The accused H. G. Cross, pleaded not guilty to the charge last week and was remanded on $500 cash bail. He was represented by Tom Lamy.

Evidence was that the accused became involved in an argument with Earl Redcliffe in a local hotel. Words were exchanged and the accused was said to have picked up a beverage glass and struck Mr. Redcliffe with it, cutting his forehead above the eye. The gash required some 20 stitches.

WRITES BAD CHEQUES

Allan E. Thrasher, of no fixed address, appearing on two charges of uttering forged documents, was sentenced to one year in jail on each charge by the magistrate.

The accused was charged with writing a cheque on a local bank, where he had no account, and further for writing a cheque on the same bank to which he signed his mother's name. One cheque was in the amount of $10 and the other in the amount of $25.

A charge of driving while intoxicated and of driving while his licence was under suspension, resulted in a sentence of 55 days in jail for Robert Stoughton, of Belleville.

Mr. Stoughton pleaded not guilty to both charges.

Const. W. Stephenson testified last week that while he was proceeding north on Pinnacle Street, he came upon a vehicle stopped crosways on the street. He said as he approached the car it started up and pulled away.

Const. Stephenson said he stopped the car across the upper bridge and when the accused got out of his car he was unsteady on his feet and he smelled strongly of alcohol.

When he asked Mr. Stoughton for his driver's licence, he produced a chauffeur's license with his name on it signed in ink.

The Const. said he later found out that this man's licence had been suspended. He then told police upon questioning that he had purchased the licence from another person.

ARKADYEV RESIGNS

UNITED NATIONS (AP)—George P. Arkadyev, Soviet national who has been United Nations undersecretary for political and security affairs since May, 1960, has resigned, the UN announced Thursday night. It said the resignation was due to the illness of Arkadyev's wife. No successor was announced.

Ronald Turini To Play Here

Among the most exciting personalities to arrive on the North American musical scene in recent seasons is the highly gifted pianist, Ronald Turini, who is scheduled to appear in Belleville Monday, March 6th, 8.30 p.m. at the Belleville Collegiate Auditorium under the auspices of the Community Concerts Subscription Series.

Mr. Turini, a Montreal-born pianist, made his debut in Carnegie Hall one year ago. The critics were most encouraging, with glowing reports of his performance.

Following this triumph, Turini appeared across Canada as soloist with the symphony orchestras of every principal city from Halifax to Vancouver. His coast-to-coast tour was arranged by the Canada Council in recognition of the pianist's most recent successes.

He returns to Europe for a second tour arranged by the Societe Philharmonique de Bruxelles. The itinerary will take him through Belgium, France, Holland and Germany. The artist was recently signed by R.C.A. Victor and his first disc was released late in 1960.

have had enough walking in the bush." Lalonde answered: "I can out-walk you in the bush. I walked for four days and four nights without any sleep."

Const. Blouin also overheard Lalonde say that the man known as George Wilson was his brother and that he had a bad heart.

Const. Courville said one of the men in his cell block said to Yvon Lalonde: "You should have been careful. Your footprints were found at the car." The man answered: "I was scared and in a hurry to get out of the car."

The five men were captured in thick brush country several days after the bank robbery, following an all-out manhunt. They were not all captured in the same place.

The trial is expected to conclude today.

The students of the grade 13 commercial classes at BCVS have been busy preparing a special present for the City of Belleville's 85th birthday as a city which occurs today.

The present consists of a special, limited edition, 51-page booklet titled "Know Your City." It is the result of three months' work undertaken by 30 students who handled the research, writing, printing and assembling of the project.

The booklet covers a broad range of subjects including public services, news media, transportation, industries, churches, schools, service organizations, the law courts, tourist facilities, sports, the Hastings and Prince Edward Regiment and the Chamber of Commerce.

Several of these subjects were subdivided. Churches, for instance, were classified according to the different faiths represented in the city. Each classification or individual entity was handled by one student who was responsible for the research on his own object and for interviewing at least one person connected with or active in the organization or firm concerned. He would then write his article, type it out on a stencil and have it reproduced for insertion in the final product.

The booklet is graced by a very attractive cover, featuring a drawing of the crest of the city, which was prepared by the school's art department.

The purpose of the project was to give students a practical exercise and training in interviewing, composition, duplicating and assembling. Mr. J. Snetsinger, head of the commercial department stated. The only assistance given by staff members was of a supervisory nature.

The end result is a most interesting and informative compilation of facts and figures presented in a very neat and attractive package, surely a very fitting birthday present for this city.

MONTREAL (CP) — You'd think a pretty young blonde in a 22-day cross-country tour of Canada would have nothing on her mind but fun.

However, this won't be the case when Mary Jane Gilmore, a personnel executive for a Montreal textile firm, leaves her office and sets off on just such a tour in May.

Miss Gilmore, one of the two women delegates to Prince Philip's Second Commonwealth Study Conference, will spend her first week studying an industrialized community. Then she'll travel west investigating transportation. After reaching the Prairies, she'll delve into organized labor, rural life and air travel.

On reaching Vancouver, she and the other 299 delegates to the conference will pool their knowledge of Canada which has been chosen as the guinea pig country for a study of "human consequences of the changing industrial environment in the Commonwealth and Empire."

VOLUNTEER WORKER

A member of the Junior League and a former board member of St. Andrew's and Youth Centre here, she has a specialized interest in work with youth groups and new Canadians.

Miss Gilmore feels part of the value of the conference to open in Montreal with an address by Prince Philip, lies in the citizenship training it will provide for delegates.

She claims it will make her "a better citizen."

She is also looking forward to meeting the delegates from other Commonwealth countries.

"It will bring the Commonwealth much closer," she says.

CONFERENCE STUDENT

Mary Jane Gilmore, a Montreal personnel executive, is one of two women delegated to Prince Philip's second Commonwealth study conference. There hundred delegates will attend the conference in Vancouver in May to discuss the "human consequences of the changing industrial environment in the Commonwealth and Empire." (CP Photo).

"It will be the next best thing to actually visiting Common wealth countries."

She is also worried about her wardrobe during the trip.

"I have packed a pair of walking shoes, will be the answer. We'll be visiting plants and factories and I'll be doing a lot of walking."

The conference is jointly sponsored by the Canadian industry, labor and delegates will have no expenses except getting to the meetings and getting home.

◆ DISTRICT WOMEN'S INSTITUTES ◆

MELROSE W.I.

MELROSE—A goodly number of members and visitors including the Lord Homemaker of the club attended the February meeting of Melrose W.I. which was held at the home of Mrs. Vincent Pascoe. The president, Mrs. K. Meridan welcomed all present.

Mrs. R. McLaren read the business correspondence. A substantial donation was made to the Scholarship Fund sponsored by F.W.I.O. It was decided to send the president to the Officers' Conference at Guelph on May 9 th and 10th.

Meirose Institute was represented at 45th anniversary of F.W.I.O. in Toronto on February 19 by the president and Mrs. R. Badgley, a life-member Both ladies gave brief reports of the gathering of 1400 members and summarized the addresses of the speakers which included Messrs. Hilliard and McNaughton and Mrs. Lynn-burner, Mrs. Haggerty and Mrs. Mavor Smith of Nebraska, vice-president of A.C.W.W.

The latter stressed the great responsibility of women of 1962 to carry on the great traditions of heroism, courage and faith of pioneer women who had blazed the trail. Never before in history have Christian people been faced with such a challenge as at the present time. "We have seeds of responsibility so let us cultivate them."

Mrs. D. McLaren and Mrs. B. Geigle gave reports of the "Girls Homemaking Club" took charge and gave a resume of the course just completed. Miss B. Scruby was commentator and described the many articles on exhibit which had been made by the girls, after which each participant displayed her handiwork completed during the course entitled, "Useful Accessories for Club Girls Bedroom".

CITIZENSHIP PROGRAM

Mrs. Bruce Sherman opened her part of the program with community singing which was enjoyed by all after which Mrs. A. Long gave a reading "People of the Northern Lights," which described the happy neighbors, the Eskimos who live along the rim of the Canadian Arctic in one of the wildest, most deserted regions on earth yet whose joy it is to wrestle with their stern environment.

Mrs. Gnaedinger followed with a humorous poem, "I'm Awfully Well For The Shape I'm in," and also a Limerick-provoking paper on "Citizenship". She reviewed the "Unveiling" ceremony in honor of W.I. founder, Mrs. Edwards, which took place at the Lee homestead at Stony Creek, last May.

Mrs. R. McLaren gave a short reading entitled, "The Talented Many" and Mrs. Sherman chose as her topic, "Everyday Citizenship" which outlined the various duties entailed in being a good citizen.

Following this, a Trait Parade with Miss Miracle as commentator for the various ladies who modelled hats made by themselves during the recent "Millinery Course." Many complimentary remarks were passed as the various creations appeared proving that this course was a complete success.

Sunday School Lesson

No Stealing

By ROY L. SMITH

Let it be said again, as it was explained in this column last week, that the original words of the Ten Commandments were, literally, words!

In two cryptic words, whose meaning was perfectly clear, Moses' Commandments issued the ultimatum:

No lying!
No Adultery!
No Stealing!

The ancients were just a bit fortunate in this respect, at least. They did not have any psychologists, semanticists, journalists, columnists or clergymen who made it their business to sandpaper the Commandments and make them smooth.

Instead, the demands upon men were blunt, direct, unmistakable, and inescapable. Such a one, for instance, as this week's Sunday School lesson—No Stealing!

LONG DISTANCE SINNERS

A famous sociologist of the Vance Packard type wrote a book a generation or more ago in which he gave the title "Modern Saints and Long Distance Sinners," to the lines of which was that modern stealing presented an altogether different picture than the old style.

"In the early days of America," the author said, "we all knew his victim by name. He probably lived in the same neighborhood with them. And when the thief robbed him of his property the chances were that he had to face him the next day.

"But the modern sinner sits behind a walnut desk in a beautifully appointed office and manipulates the market so that the man who sits behind him at church the next Sunday morning does not recognize him as the individual who is taking an extra two cents a cag out of his pocket."

And there was that outfit, described by a writer in the Wall Street Journal, which bought a certain machine from the Surplus Market for $250 and sold it abroad to a nation that was getting a big chunk of foreign aid for $7,200.

The Uniform Sunday School Lesson for March 4: "No Stealing." Exodus 20:15; Luke 19:1-27; Mark 11:15-19; John 7:1-9-28; Matthew 22:15-22.

Canadian Engineer Sure Man Will Get to Moon, Ready to Go on First Trip

By HAROLD MORRISON

LANGLEY AIR BASE, Va. (CP)—Canadian engineer Owen Maynard not only is convinced man will get to the moon, he also is willing to go on the first trip.

"Not that I'll be asked but that's how satisfied I am that we'll get there," says the blond wartime RCAF bomber pilot who is deeply immersed in space research for the U.S. National Aeronautical and Space Agency.

One of 28 A. V. Roe engineers picked up by NASA when the Arrow jet interceptor program folded, Maynard was moved into secret work on research and design of space vehicles of the distant future.

"We've almost completed research work on Apollo — the future moon shot," said the 37-year-old space expert from Sarnia, Ont.

"Now, in research, we're looking far beyond planets as such as Mercury, Venus and Mars. These would be trips of two or three years—a long time for any man to travel. But look at the years spent in travel by the early pioneers such as Christopher Columbus."

The charts, designs and plans to which Maynard and his group work "are almost all." But he offered some suggestions to indicate how advanced his group is in moon thinking.

The 240,000-mile trip to the moon would take between three and four days. Taking time for loading, the round trip might be about two weeks. Landing on the moon will be a problem.

Maynard visualizes the moon vehicle as being somewhat like a small submarine, containing three men and supplies. It might even have built - in artificial gravity to make it easier for the earthlings to operate.

The moon's surface is known to be dusty. In some places the dusty layer may be very thin; in others, it may be six-feet thick. The problem will be to get the vehicle to land amid the thinnest dust layer so that the astronauts' lives will be secured.

The fact that the Russians may get to the moon first doesn't bother us. We know we are doing our best. We are at the near - maximum effort."

Getting to the moon — President Kennedy hopes Americans will land there by 1970—involves not only intricate vehicle design but also navigational training for the astronauts.

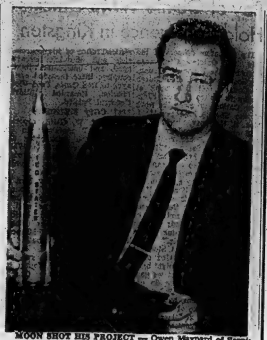
"That's where I come in," said 26-year-old Stanley Gelazowski of Toronto, another Canadian engineer with the NASA team.

SIMULATED FLIGHT

A mathematical whiz, Gelazowski directs a huge complex of electronic computers in which all the thousands of bits of information about travel to the moon are contained.

The computers are linked to a special chamber in which Gelazowski has inserted a space vehicle pilot seat and navigational panel. All the known problems of space and the moon can be fed into the panel as the astronaut sits in the chamber, attempting to direct his way through space debris, radiation belts, solar flares and other terrific hazards.

"It's like flying to the moon by computer," said the tall, blue-eyed engineer.



Getting to the moon may be one thing—coming back another. Scientists estimate that the moon vehicle would slip back into the earth's atmosphere at far higher speeds that the present Mercury space capsule.

HEAT PROBLEM

"The friction would be terrific," said Bryan Erb of Calgary. "The moon vehicle would be coming back to earth 45 per cent faster than the Mercury space capsule. The heat generated by friction might rise to 13,000 degrees Fahrenheit. This would vaporize the vehicle in 20 seconds."

So the 30-year-old Erb is working on ways of reducing the heat threat. He believes the way will be found through a special type of plastic cover on the vehicle. As this plastic decomposes, it sets up a chemical heat barrier.

A thin layer of this plastic is used on the present space capsule. To increase the thickness, as would be necessary in the moon vehicle, would create a new weight problem. Erb's job is to get maximum efficiency out of the plastic without any sharp increase in weight.

MOON SHOT HIS PROJECT — Owen Maynard of Sarnia, Ont., one of many Canadians working for the United States Space Agency, heads a branch which is planning the landing of a three-man space vehicle on the moon. Maynard says he's almost through with blueprint work on that project and now is researching possible space trips to Mercury, Venus and Mars. (CP Photo).

The "Romantic" World of Reporting

By JACK HUTTON

Last week the mailman deposited a letter which caused my heart to beat a little faster, caused black spots to swirl before my eyes —and sent me down to the cafeteria for a quick coffee.

A 16-year-old Halifax reader wanted some advice on a career: how to become a reporter.

Sharon McGrath wrote: "My English marks have always been good and I would like a life that is interesting and which will give me a chance to travel."

Because I get a similar letter once a month, I'd like to say a few words about the possibility for teen-agers in this profession. And we may clear away some wrong ideas.

To begin with, Sharon, reporting is far from being the glamor world of the TV reporter. And you'll go a long way before you find a reporter wearing a big PRESS card on his Chicago-block hat.

"Several of us were talking over what we'd like to do, and reporting seemed the best," wrote Sharon. "I like meeting people and I've tried several short stories that everyone liked."

UNIVERSITY

"How far should I go to school, do you think? My family want me to go on to university, but I don't know if I want to. Three or four more years seem a long time when I could be working on a newspaper.

"Secondly, is it more difficult for a girl to break into newspapers? I've heard that it is. And is it possible to start working part-time for a newspaper at my age?"

To begin with, Sharon—and others who have the same thought, it is becoming more difficult every day to get a job on a large newspaper without a university degree.

There are many excellent reporters, of course, who did not finish high school. But you will usually find that each one has gone through a self-education that might put a university graduate to shame.

Each one will agree, moreover, that the broad background of a liberal arts degree is an immense advantage when starting in this profession. Imagine interviewing a scientist if you didn't have the slightest idea of what he was talking about!

ROUTINE

As for this being an "interesting" life, Sharon, it certainly is. But in between the exciting times, you'll find great stretches of routine work—writing obituaries, covering club meetings and luncheon speakers.

What about girls in this profession? Yes, it is more difficult for a girl to enter reporting, Sharon. But some of the top reporters in Canada are women who survived a rough apprenticeship.

As for writing now, it's probably a bit early. But develop an interest in your school newspaper—and you may find your local paper is interested in the occasional bit of school news.

Personally, I think you shouldn't make a definite choice at your age, even though you're flattered. I'd suggest that your guidance teacher might invite a local newspaperman over to the school if you want to find out more.

Do well as you can in school—and we hope you'll think of us again in about five years!

NUMBER 9 AGAIN

Well, I knew some of you were budding mathematicians. But I had no idea how many until after our column investigating the mysteries of 9—a problem, by the way, that Einstein was never able to answer fully.

Mr. Martin Pettit, who described himself as a "teen-ager with a liking for mathematics," submitted this extension of the question:

"It can be proven that the sum of the digits of the difference of any number and its reverse is always 9. For instance, take the number 6073.

"Its reverse is 3706 and the difference of these two numbers is 2367. 2 plus 3 plus 6 plus 7 equals 18, and 1 plus 8 equals 9. This applies for powers to the number as well.

"For instance, 62 minus 26 equals 36 and 3 plus 6 equals 9. But 62 squared (3844) minus 26 squared (676) equals 3168, the sum of whose digits is 18. And once again 1 plus 8 equals 9."

As if that weren't enough, Marin Fettit had another example of the way in which 9 turns up again and again like a hex of the witchcraft days.

"Another interesting fact, easily proven," he said, "is that, if you subtract from any number of two or more digits the sum of its digits, the sum of the digits of the result equals 9."

"For example, the sum of the digits of 164 is 11, and 164 minus 11 equals 153, whose digits total 9."

Finally, Bob Jamieson, 15, of Vancouver, submitted this teaser: "Two coins in my hand add up to 51 cents, but one of them isn't a 50-cent piece. What are they?"

(The answer: a 50-cent coin and a penny. One of them wasn't a 50-cent piece, but the other WAS.)

AT LAST!

FLASH: someone has finally solved the mystery of getting 12, 9 and 7 to add up to 28 in nine X and O squares!

Frances Jones of Elora, Ont., said she spent "three frustrating hours working with impossible combinations of fractions before a simple solution dawned on me."

Why not, she asked, place 12 times 7 over 9 in each square? Each fraction will boil down to 28 over 3 or 9 and one-third. What's three times 9 and one-third—28.

Think you'd fit into this picture of a modern, Canadian newsroom? Jack Hutton discusses your chances of becoming a reporter.

Question: My 13-year-old daughter is pleading to wear lipstick because, she says, all the other girls in school are permitted to do so. I still think thirteen is too young for make-up. Could you tell me if there is a "proper" age for girls to start wearing lipstick and powder? — Mrs. V.C.S., New York City.

Answer: The age at which girls start using lipstick varies from one community to another, but, generally, it would seem they start experimenting as soon as they enter junior high, or around twelve or thirteen. If all the other girls in her class wear lipstick, naturally your daughter wants to join the ranks. Since it is the custom, you'll probably have to relent. Be sure she's made to feel "different." Teach her to apply lipstick correctly, and let her use a pale, pink shade. She certainly should be discouraged from using rouge or eye-make-up until she reaches college age.

Question: How should a wife introduce her husband? I've always identified him as "my husband, Mr. Jones." But I've been told by a friend that I should introduce him by his first name only. What is the correct form? — Mrs. P.S., New Haven, Conn.

Answer: A wife should introduce her spouse as "my husband, Bill," or simply as "my husband." It's incorrect to refer to him as "Mr. Jones" under any social conditions.

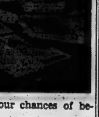
Tips for Wedding Reception

DEAR DORIS:



I—Should I invite the parents of my daughter's fiance to stay with us when they come to this city for the wedding? I haven't much sleeping accommodation.

2—Do you invite all the guests out to her parents' home after for a drink? Or just the close ones?

3—Am I expected to serve a lunch of some kind?

4—Is it proper to keep your gloves on while shaking hands with the guests?

5—Who, if anyone, has the dinner after the wedding rehearsal when the groom's parents are not here?—MRS. M.

DORIS CLARK

DEAR MRS. M.:—1—Move over and crowd them in. You'll always be glad you did.

2.—Just family and close friends.

3—A snack or sandwiches. Something light, with coffee or other beverage; especially if the wedding reception has included a full dinner.

4—Quite proper.

5—I'm afraid you pinch hit here, too, unless a close friend thinks of offering her home and hospitality after the rehearsal.

DEAR DORIS:—Last summer I had an operation for epileptic seizures. Now I go out to dances but never get up to dance because I am still afraid I might have a seizure when I am with someone. I am also just learning to dance and afraid of making a fool of myself.

The last friend I had was five years ago and one evening I had a seizure in her home. I have not asked anybody out since. I am a very lonely person and I have been hurt down deep inside several times because of my family being broken up.

Can you help me?—AFRAID.

DEAR AFRAID—Modern drugs and treatment have succeeded in bringing epilepsy under control in many cases.

If you don't know how you would behave on a dance floor, find out. The best way is to take a course in ball room dancing. Tell your teacher your fear and what to do for you if you should have a seizure.

Lessons will make your dancing something to attract the girls, too. Then take the plunge. Most Romeos start off by being afraid.

(There is helpful Canadian literature which may shed light on your problem. Ask Doris about it.)

Hull Gets 41, 42; Hawks Nip Bruins

Needs Eight To Tie Mark

By THE CANADIAN PRESS

Bobby Hull is hot and may prove difficult to stop in his bid to become the National Hockey League's third 50-goal man.

The powerful Chicago left winger potted two more goals — his 41st and 42nd of the season — Thursday night as the Black Hawks rallied to edge the league's Boston Bruins 5-4 in the league's only game at Boston.

He now has scored 37 times in 23 games and needs to get eight more in Chicago's remaining eight games to tie the 50-goal record set by Maurice (Rocket) Richard of Montreal Canadiens in 1944-45 and equalled by Bernie Geoffrion, also of Canadiens, last season.

By winning, the Hawks remained in contention for a second - place finish. They now are three points behind Toronto Maple Leafs, but have played three more games.

Boston's winless streak, meanwhile, was extended to 16 games — 13 loses and three ties. The Bruins are deep in the cellar and out of the running for a playoff berth.

BRUINS STARTED WELL

For a while, the Bruins looked as though they might snap out of their lethargy Thursday night. They led 2-0 after the first period, but Chicago bounced back for four in the second to their one. The last period was scoreless.

Bill Hay and Murray Balfour, Hull's line - mates, also played a big role in the victory. Hay scored his 19th goal and drew an assist while Balfour had two assists.

Murphy's tally, with just seven seconds left in the second period, broke a 4-4 tie and turned out to be the winner. Andre Pronovost scored both goals for the Bruins, whose other goals came from Johnny Bucyk and Wayne Connelly.

Hull scored his first goal with just 32 seconds gone in the first period and hit for the other at 11:21 of the second.

MIKITA HURT AGAIN

The win might turn out to be costly to the Hawks. Centre Stan Mikita, who is third in the scoring race, aggravated an old knee injury and had to leave the game.

Boston defencemen Leo Boivin hurt a ligament in his left knee and was also forced out of the contest.

It was a sloppy, hard-hitting game marked by 17 penalties, 10 minors. Chicago drew nine of the infractions.

Chicago goalie Glenn Hall, who has played every game this season, allowed fewer shots than Boston's Bruce Gamble, did not have the same fine support he has received in recent games. He had to turn in three standout individual efforts to keep the Bruins in check in the last two minutes he could take over.

There are no games in the league until Saturday night when Detroit Red Wings play at Montreal and New York goes to Toronto.

RARE, MEDIUM, WELL-DONE

By GEO. H. CARVER, Sports Editor

Someone suggested the other day that the "mahbest" of the forthcoming world amateur hockey championships at Colorado Springs, should feature Bob Lebel and one J. B. "Bunny" Ahearne.

"BUNNY" AHEARNE
Live. He doesn't mince words or actions.

With the Russians, and their satellites' hockey clubs playing home because of world politics — gimmicks, the Colorado Springs puck carpet promises to be as colorful as a shot of vodka tainted with ice water. The suggested Le Bel - Ahearne verbal clash might liven up matters and halt the flow of seat - emptiers.

It would be a duel between a rapier-flicking cavalier and a husky squire with a direct broadsword style of attack. Ahearne is a master of the polished word. LeBel is no novice. His is the straightaway frontal

In Prague, Czechoslovakia, in 1959, LeBel marched into a committee room and broke up a feud to juggle world hockey tickets to suit their convenience.

As host club the Czechs were scheduled to play the last game of the tournament with Canada. The Russians demanded and told their satellites that the schedule should be changed so that Canada met Russia on the day preceding the final battle. The strategy stuck out like a dowager's bustle.

Canada's manager Drury Denyes argued against the move. So the committee decided to go into camera excluding Denyes. LeBel stormed into action — and Denyes was admitted.

LeBel was adamant in his demands for a change of schedule. He talked the western delegates into his way of thinking. He won. The final vote was 5-4. The Czechs had three votes. So Russians one. LeBel was not through. He charged the Czech delegate with being influenced by the Soviets. This drew a Czech to his feet. Grim-faced he said, "Nobody influences the Czechs."

And in this corner:

Suave, smiling, immaculate in an expensive Savile Row suit, Mr. Ahearne greeted newspapermen in his plush suite in the Hotel Carlton, in Bratislava.

Dinner-jacketed waiters hovered in the background. Imported whiskies, brandies, liquers and famous brands of wine stood in shining bottles from a corner bar. (And this was 10.30 a.m., yet.) Czech beauties added a rather nice touch to the scenery.

The "Bandit from Britain" as his non-admirers labbed him, spoke in figures. Dollars and cents, that is. He did not mention the "take" the Ahearne Travel Bureau derives from touring hockey clubs.

Rubbing his hands in a distinct Shylockian gesture, the short, stocky hockey impresario said the 1959 hockey tournament would bring in nearly a million dollars.

Asked for a breakdown, he suggested a touch of silverchix, perhaps a bottle of Pilsener, or an eleven o'clock martini might be acceptable.

"Bunny" made no bones as to whom was running the tournament. Of course at the moment he was not only the European boss but the president of the International Ice Hockey Federation. He admitted the 1959 tourney had been given the Czechs, because their country was the hockey hotspot, attendance-wise, of the world at the time.

Someone asked him (this was before the Rangers-Bruins tussle), why he did not promote Canadian National Hockey League annual tours.

He made the remark of the year. . . "Why," he said, "give them dollar hockey when they will pay so much for the ten-cent variety."

Later "Bunny" master-minded the Rangers-Bruins junket. He even gift-talked other promoters into giving him the ticket.

As you probably read, Ahearne was punched in the nose, literally, by a Canadian delegate to an IHF conference in Oslo, Norway. But he came up off the deck, sailed for Canada the next year and talked delegates into re-election.

Now he is at loggerheads with M'sieu LeBel, and the pair will meet in Colorado Springs. Dirty looks at thirty paces and no verbal holds barred?

As Canadian Press sports editor Jack Sullivan said, Put them in centre ice — and let them go. It should be quite an attraction.

APPLY FOR VISAS

MOSCOW (AP) — Vasily Nikpamikov, president of the Soviet Hockey League, and Ernest Adminsky, also with the league, have applied for visas to attend a meeting of the International Hockey Association in Colorado Springs, Colo., next Tuesday, the American consulate said Thursday. The Russian hockey team is boycotting the world tournament, there because the East Germans team was refused a travel permit. It is expected the visas will be granted the officials.

This Should Be A Thriller!

The Kingston Frontenacs and Belleville McFarlands will both be trying to assure themselves of a spot in the OHA Eastern Junior "B" hockey league group finals when they clash here tonight at nine o'clock.

The Macs, after winning the first two games of the round-robin series, lost a 7-5 overtime decision in Peterborough Monday. Kingston then defeated Peterborough on Wednesday by a 6-2 score.

And of course, the Frontenacs have not forgotten that it was the Macs who snapped their 12-game winning streak with a 3-2 overtime win in the Limestone City a couple of weeks ago.

Tonight's game is classed as a "must" for both clubs and as such promises to be one of the top attractions of the year for hockey fans here.

These two clubs have battled each other tooth and nail throughout the season. They are as evenly - matched as two clubs can be. Both won 17 games and lost five during schedule play, tying for the loop's top spot. The Macs got the first-place nod on the basis of scorfer goals average. Any ties in the round-robin final standings will also be settled by this method.

The round-robin series will wind up when Kingston visits Peterborough Monday night. Shortly after that the two top teams will square off in a best-of-seven series for the group title and the right to advance into further playdowns.

The Pepsi Booster Club will be on hand with their bingo tickets tonight, too.

Following is the round-robin standing, including all games played to date.

Women's Curling Championship

BC 'Housewives' Capture Crown

By SCOTT SCHELL

REGINA (CP) — A pleasant housewife from Kimberley, in southeastern British Columbia Thursday at 36 a.m. won curling career Thursday night by winning the Canadian women's curling championship.

Mrs. Ina Hansen directed her rink through the nine - game round - robin championship for nine straight wins.

The Hansen rink won the Dominion D1 a n d D trophy, clinching the title with a 13-6 win over Nova Scotia's Pearl Carter Thursday night.

Mrs. Hansen, 41, has three other housewives on her rink. Third is Ada Calles, 41, second is Isabell Leith, 40, and lead is May Shaw, 41, the smallest member of the rink.

The rink's toughest games came against Alberta in the first round, Mrs. Hansen, down against Alberta 4-1 after four ends, scored a five - ender and took a 9-5 win. Against Saskatchewan's Joyce McKee, Mrs. Hansen won a narrow 11-10 victory after taking an early 9-2 lead.

Miss McKee, who won the championships in Ottawa last year with a 9-8 record, finished second this year with eight wins and the single loss.

QUEBEC SHOWS POWER

It was only her rink's third or fourth loss in more than 150 games of curling provincial, western and Dominion games.

Miss McKee's surprising Anne Philips, who suffered only two losses, 7-6 to Saskatchewan and 8-5 to Alberta.

Lightly regarded at the start, Miss Philips nearly upset the McKee rink Thursday night when her final rock fell off and failed to take out a Saskatchewan counter.

In final round games, Saskatchewan had a 10 - 8 win over Prince Edward Island, Quebec stopped Newfoundland 10-4, Alberta won 12-7 over Ontario and New Brunswick beat Manitoba 9-8.

Alberta, losing its first three games, then winning six straight, finished fourth in the standings. Ontario and New Brunswick had 4-5 records. Manitoba had a 3-6 record, Newfoundland two and three and Nova Scotia and Prince Edward Island won only single games.

Attendance at the second annual championship was low, averaging 500 to 600 until the last Thursday draw, when about 1,200 were present. Officials blamed the bitter cold. The first temperature during the week was 15 below zero and lowest, 40 below. A wind made temperatures even more bitter.

The Big Seven

All You Need Is 4-5 Million

Wanna Major Loop Team?

By TED SMITH

ST. PETERSBURG, Fla. (AP)—Would you like to start a new major league baseball club as a hobby?

You can do it for $4,000,000 to $5,000,000 cash laid on the line before a cent of revenue comes in.

The Mets have done it first class from the start, hiring George Weiss, long with New York Yankees, as general manager, and bringing back to baseball Casey Stengel, another ex-Yankee, as manager at a reputed $50,000 yearly.

The Mets spent $1,500,000 in the National League draft, and are credited with also paying $100,000 for Charley Neal, veteran infielder.

Acquiring outfielders Richie Ashburn and Frank Thomas probably cost $150,000.

Add about $100,000 paid to young bonus players.

OFFER EXPANDS

The front office was established March 1, 1960, with three employees. Now there are at least 90 on the non-playing payroll.

Then $100,000 had to be paid to the Yankees for territorial rights.

An efficient training camp costs about $125,000, and the Polo Grounds have been refurbished for $750,000. Camps also have been set up for four farm teams.

Now for the credit side of the ledger.

Advance ticket sales have been strong.)

There was brisk bidding for the television rights to the Mets. The brewery that won out is reputed to have paid more than $1,000,000.

The Mets conservatively hope for a total attendance of 805,000 in 1962. That would bring in about $1,600,000 at the gate plus $150,000 in concessions. Not counted, of course, is the 27½ cents each items team must pay each visiting team for each ticket sold.

The Mets hope to get into the black in three to four years but it won't be easy.

Letter To The Sports Editor

MINOR HOCKEY

Sports Editor,
Ontario Intelligencer:

On reading the article of February 27, Re: "Time for Minor Shake-up", and player control preceded re: juvenile and midget hockey players, and the game Bantist Kingston the past weekend, I agree, But —

There are some things you may not have thought of or brought to light.

No boy likes to get beat like Belleville has been in the past OMHA playdowns against Kingston.

The main reason: Ice time. Period. Which the Belleville Arena Commission cannot supply.

How can a team with three hours practice (as a team) compete with a team which has been together as a team for a whole season or possibly longer?

It is only natural for youths who are outclassed to lose their heads — which Belleville players did. I was a witness to this and also had a boy of my own in the bantam playdowns.

One answer to this is another arena. To my mind, an outside artificial rink to take the strain off the present arena.

I would also suggest the Belleville bantam, midget and juvenile teams be picked at the first of the season by the previous years coaches to play in the league ahead. Example: Bantam to midget league, midget to juvenile, etc., to play as a team but still to play at their own positions in the different teams they play for in their own league.

Some day sir, you may have a boy in these leagues and I hope you have a better answer than I heard last week by minor officials that, "I knew it", as Belleville were being clobbered.

If these men who are bamped wet by no ice time to train teams have this attitude, how can you expect the players to do better? Kingston has three four arenas. Trenton has two (Community Centre and 6 RD). How can we compete?

A. E. White,
11 4th Street,
Belleville.

(Ed. Note — We agree that Belleville minor hockey teams do not get sufficient ice time for training purposes, but believe this nor the fact they are being "clobbered" is any excuse for the disgraceful exhibition witnessed in Memorial Arena last Saturday. Other minor teams have been defeated by similar or larger scores, but they behaved like gentlemen.)

Says Offer to Fight Champ Ridiculous

Liston Rejects Six-Figure Payday

NEW YORK (AP) — Sonny Liston of Philadelphia, pegging for a shot at world heavyweight boxing champion Floyd Patterson, for months, has rejected a chance to clash with the champion and a payday ranging from $200,000 to about $700,000.

"Ridiculous," the challenger snorted of promoter Tom Bolan's offer Thursday. The offer included a $200,000 minimum guarantee, which Bolan called the highest ever offered a challenger.

Later, however, a source close to Liston said Sonny's refusal came from difficulties surrounding a return - bout clause in the agreement.

"The percentage isn't the point," said the source, who asked that his name not be used. "That's not where the difference is. Liston wants to say where and for whom he will fight in the return bout if he should win. He is entitled to do this under the National Boxing Association ruling made at Hershey, Pa., last year."

GIVES OBJECTION

Liston said he objects to Patterson's right, under Bolan's offer, to call the shots in a second fight.

"I don't mind a 30-30 split (for the second fight) with Bolan getting 40 per cent," Sonny said. "But they want to control the return fight in the same way as the first. They want to name the site, promoter, everything."

"It appears they are trying to rob me blind," said Liston, who once said he would fight Patterson for nothing.

His refusal fostered speculation that Liston may lose the opportunity for a title fight with Patterson. Liston has publicly charged that the champion is "afraid" to make the fight.

CAN BE DEMOTED

"A challenger cannot be permitted to price himself out of the market," Charles P. Larsen, president of the NBA, said in Tacoma, Wash. He said that by refusing the fight, Liston could be removed as the leading contender.

"Terms should not be unfair to the challenger, but he cannot dictate to the champion."

Patterson and his manager, Cus D'Amato, were not available for comment.

But the champion's lawyer, Julius Novemker, said Liston could be bypassed for another contender if he doesn't accept the terms.

City S.S. Teams Seek Hoop Titles

By PETER CARVER

Quinte COSSA senior "A" basketball champions from Belleville Collegiate Institute with their runner-up rivals from Quinte Secondary, journey to Oshawa tomorrow to quest the COSSA title. BCI are the defending champions.

Teams from Oshawa and Peterborough secondary schools are entered in the tournament.

The Quinte Secondary senior "A" teams is the only Bay of Quinte entry in the COSSA girls tournament also played in Oshawa tomorrow.

All the boys' games are being played in the gymnasium of Oshawa Central Collegiate Institute.

The Quinte senior girls team plays against Oshawa O'Neill Collegiate at three o'clock in the Oshawa Donevon Collegiate gymnasium. Port Hope High and Napanee High are playing in the other senior girls' bracket.

Will Use 17 Players

Terriers Announce Team

COLORADO SPRINGS, Colo. (CP) — Cal. Terriers will use 17 players in their quest of the world amateur hockey championship for Canada starting next week.

The roster was announced Thursday by manager Leo Gaudette and coach Lloyd Roubell, who made it known that they expect to walk away with the title without suffering a defeat.

"We do not think we will lose another game," said Gaudette.

We reached top form with that 3-1 win over Trail Smoke Eaters, the defending world champs, earlier in the week."

Roubell said simply: "We will win the world championship."

The 17 - man roster is made up of 10 forwards, five defencemen and two goalies — Harold (Bout) Hurley of the Terriers and John Sofiak of Saskatoon.

Defencemen are Ted Maki and Bob Robertico of Galt and reinforcements Bill Mitchell of Windsor, Ont., Jack Douglas of Chatham and Harry Smith of Trail, B.C.

Martin and Malo played with Galt last year when the Terriers won the Allan Cup.

At the moment Mader is figured as the utility forward. During Galt's tour of Western Canada Mader sat out one game with the flu and now is sidelined temporarily with bronchitis.

Galt's task in retaining the world amateur championship for Canada should be considerably easier than Trail's last year. Four Iron Curtain countries that took part in 1961 — the Soviet Union, Czechoslovakia, Romania and Yugoslavia — withdrew after East German team members were refused visas to enter the U.S.

Ontario Teams Favored

Peterborough and the Toronto Little Hockey League entry are the only teams left in the category, for cities with a population of more than 35,000.

They play off today.

Peterborough went into the finals with an upset 5-2 victory over Montreal-Maisonneuve, last year's champion of the Montreal series.

Toronto whipped St. Ambroise, a Quebec City club, 7-2 in the other semi-final.

The championship in other categories also will be decided today in preparation for the playoffs and grand climax Saturday.

Thursday Don Mills meets St. Jerome, Que., and Pointe Claire meets Simcoe in the semi-finals in Class C.

Class C is also in the semi-final stage. Amos, Que., meets Rockland, Ont., in one match and Ste. Agathe-Quebec's hard-skating pro, Michel Bodin, team meets Richmond, Que., in the other.

The category is reserved for teams from small towns.

More than 46,000 fans have paid to see the kids, all under 12, since the 34 teams started playing last Saturday.

Ginger Rogers Will Host NBC Show to Irving Berlin

By CYNTHIA LOWRY

NEW YORK (AP) — Ginger Rogers, after worrying over the problem for several seasons and asking questions, confessed she is stumped. She doesn't know what shows are such a hard time in television.

"It seems to me that television is like automobiles," she said. "Designed by men, and mostly for men.

"By next season there probably won't be a single series starring a woman, and as far as I can find out very, very few women behind the scenes have any say about programs."

Miss Rogers admits she doesn't understand this attitude.

"After all, women are the biggest buyers, so the sponsors should be interested in showing women especially like. And women are big TV viewers. It just doesn't make much sense."

SHE'S SATISFIED

Ginger, however, does not find this a personal problem. The vivacious, incredibly youthful looking star is satisfied with occasional TV guest-starring appearances, including her Monday night show on tonight's salute to Irving Berlin on NBC's Television Hour, band - picked motion picture roles and some stage appearances.

A couple of season's back, she was talked into making a pilot film for a series, in which she played twins.

"Sponsors liked the idea of a Ginger Rogers show," she said. "But nothing happened to that series. There's interest in other ideas, but they want to see pilots and a performer can't spend endless time making free samples — not when there are other things on the fire."

Tonight Miss Rogers will dance and sing. She's a natural choice as actress, for she appeared in many Berlin shows over the years.

ALL COMEDY SHOW IN TODAY

"Call Me Genius," in which Tony Hancock, Britain's top television comedian makes his screen debut, showing today and Saturday at the Park Theatre following the current attraction.

Directed by Robert Day in Technicolor, "Call Me Genius" depicts the adventures of a typical, bowler-hatted London clerk who suddenly rebels against his conventional existence and decides to express himself a la Gauguin: Quitting his job, he takes off for the Left Bank in Paris, full of the great artist's dedication but devoid of his talent.

George Sanders, Paul Massie and Irene Handl are co-starred in "Call Me Genius," which is a Continental Distributing, Inc. release.

"SANDS OF THE DESERT"

On the same program "Sands of the Desert" in Technicolor is a laugh tonic for old and young starring Charlie Drake, the lovable little comedian who taverts through his many adventures with a smile to charm even his worst enemies.

Hollywood's Biggest Names Offer to Get Hit With Pie

By BOB THOMAS

HOLLYWOOD (AP) — Ever get hit in the face with a pie? I tried it once, back in my giddy youth while covering a cornball picture with Jack Carson. He slapped me right in the kisser with a chocolate cream, whipped - cream topped, so I could see what it felt like.

It felt lousy. All that goo clogging your pores and gluing your eyes shut.

Despite this obvious discomfort, some of Hollywood's biggest names are eagerly offering themselves as targets for hurled custard (actually shaving cream) every Friday night.

"I can't understand it," he says with amazement. "Imagine a guy like Sinatra coming on my show. He gets $20,000 for doing something like that; from me he gets $75, and he paid his own plane!!"

Sales is that Soupy records for Sinatra's label. Firm may have been a factor.

ADDICTS OF SOUPY

They may add light to the mystery: All of the noted names have children, and large numbers of Los Angeles children are addicts of Soupy Sales. Pies large enough to feed their parents.

Soupy, who used to have a daily slapstick show in Detroit, grew up assurance of $150,000 a year to crack the bigtime in Hollywood.

He has cracked it. He went on a local show last March, playing against tough afternoon competition—Popeye.

The teen-agers took Soupy to their hearts. The sub-teens always loved him, and the adults got with it.

ABC saw the light and gave him a nighttime berth on the network. His show — a weekly offering of guests and pratfalls — confounded the critics but appears to be catching on.

"The critics don't understand it," said Soupy, who is not known to be dour, either. "It's the kind of a show that people either like or hate; there's no middle ground. But once you do catch on to it, you're hooked."

The win was the second in the series for Woodstock against one loss and one tie.

The Athletics led 1-0 at the end of the first period and 3-1 after the second.

Bud Diedrich, Woodstock's sub-goaltender, replaced regular Al Cullen in the nets and turned in a standout performance, stopping 31 shots.

Chuck Revell, a standout all series for the Tigers, was hot again. The former St. Marys Junior B defender stopped 41 shots.

The fifth game of the series is in Woodstock Saturday night with the sixth in Waterloo Monday.

Y Basketball

The Steelers lead the race for the YMCA Youth Basketball Senior League Championship following a 66-60 defeat of the Celtics Wednesday evening at the "Y" gym. The Celtics were not far behind, however, with Wayne Clare turning in a fine 26-point effort followed by Jack Jury, who accounted for 21 points.

The second game of the series will be played next Tuesday evening at the "Y".

Astrological Forecast

For March 3

By SYDNEY OMARR

Aries (Mar. 21 to Apr. 19): Friendship is two-way street. Realize this and make it work. Aspirations must be practical—or they can't be realized. Others may guide up to pace you can set.

Taurus (Apr. 20 to May 20): Don't say "yes" in connection with community project or extra work at office — unless you are prepared to sacrifice much time. Ponder — then, if your heart is in project — go to it.

Gemini (May 21 to June 21): Aim for the sky — "peewee" shots apt to miss. Seek the best —give your utmost attention to anything you undertake. Time to make plans for future, especially those involving romance.

Cancer (June 22 to July 21): Cycle, in past days, has not been up to par. But now, with sincere effort on your part, it begins to rise. Today study budget matters. Show loved one you care — with token of affection.

Leo (July 22 to Aug. 21): If you can avoid public appearance, debate — do so. Today and tonight best for meditation —for honest talk with one you respect. Avoid hasty action — play waiting game.

Virgo (Aug. 22 to Sept. 22): You could "run yourself down" emotionally, physically by trying to entertain and be helpful. Take time to sit back and watch, observe; listen, lest your sincere efforts be misinterpreted.

Libra (Sept. 23 to Oct. 23): Romance brings with it responsibility. Know this . . . for it is very likely to apply to you, especially tonight. More than one indication that you succeed best by practising self-control.

Scorpio (Oct. 23 to Nov. 21): Inspirational words available before day is over — if you will but stop and listen. The germ of an idea could be planted — one which may prove valuable to your future.

Sagittarius (Nov. 22 to Dec. 21): If you have choice between journey . . . or staying close to home — choose latter course. Strength, vitality should be preserved. There is only so much you can do — relax and take it easy.

Capricorn (Dec. 22 to Jan. 20): Gap between what you possess —and what you feel you require —not as wide as you might imagine. Utilize assets, abilities instead of bemoaning fate. Avoid temptation to rush, push.

Aquarius (Jan. 21 to Feb. 19): Possibility of advancement, adventure presents itself. Do you know all of facts? If answer is not positive — better delay committing yourself. Keep standards high.

Pisces (Feb. 20 to Mar. 20): Chapter out of past could repeat itself. Since you have learned from experience—don't repeat errors. Accentuate the positive. Stress charm, humor—willingness to concede points.

If today is your birthday — this month should find you completing projects, getting house in order, striving for harmony with family members. You are sensitive, versatile. You often sacrifice — in order that loved ones can advance.

General Tendencies — Those who appear irresponsible will be bypassed. Today "shakers" are shown up — each sign urged to stress sincerity. If you don't know the answer — admit it!

John Bassett, Publisher, Out Ringing Doorbells to Win Spadina Riding for PCs

By JOHN LeBLANC

TORONTO (CP) — Parliament is going to get a young man rushing places—most of the time in several directions at once—if John Bassett can hold unpredictable Toronto Spadina for the Progressive Conservatives.

Mr. Bassett heads two daily newspapers — including one of Canada's largest—and Toronto's private TV station besides carving large chunks of Toronto's hockey Maple Leafs and Argos of football's Eastern Conference.

As if all this were not enough to keep the 46-year-old dynamo occupied, he's now running hard for the House of Commons with the same industry he puts into his other enterprises.

The publisher - broadcaster-sportsman has been nominated for Spadina, perhaps the most polyglot of all federal ridings with its representation of just about every ethnic group in the country.

And, with the date of the next general election still a matter of uncertainty, he was out in the frost ringing doorbells for votes.

Chances are he's in for the kind of tough fight he enjoys. Middleaged, he's built up the happy hunting ground of the Liberals. The Conservatives cracked it by just 664 votes when MP Dave Croll, who had lit in the guts of his last for three elections, went to the Senate in 1955. The margin went to about 4,000 in 1958 but this was in the Diefenbaker landslide.

To clear the decks for politics, Mr. Bassett has begun divesting himself of most of his business responsibilities and he promises, if elected, he'll shake off further ones not connected with publication of his lusty Toronto Telegram.

In an interview, Mr. Bassett—an unsuccessful soldier candidate in Sherbrooke, Que., in 1945—was asked why a man who has since piled up a multiplicity of large-scale interests wants again to face the time-consuming hurly burly of parliamentary politics.

BUSINESSMEN NEEDED

"I think," he replied, relaxing his six-foot-four frame with feet on his TV desk, "that ideally the House of Commons should represent all facets of Canadian life.

"I believe that people who are actively engaged in business and tend to become engrossed in business also are inclined to believe they have time for nothing else. So I feel that not too many people tend to represent what I call an enlightened business viewpoint."

"From the basis of practical experience, I can contribute something."

Mr. Bassett has been piling up the practical experience at a head long rate.

Son of the late publisher of the Montreal Gazette, he started life as a hard-running cub reporter on the Toronto Globe and Mail. Then he went overseas in the Second World War, returning home as a major when he received the Sherbrooke Conservative nomination.

Acquiring The Record there from his father, he had settled down as its publisher when the friend George McCullagh bought The Telegram in 1946 and installed him as its advertising director. He was general manager when Mr. McCullagh died in 1952, and he and associates bought the Tely for a reported $4,000,000.

RELIGIOUS CAUSES

Since then, he and the growing Telegram have campaigned in a variety of crusades, notably for better relations among races and religions, a circumstance that will do him no harm in multi-race Spadina. Once a leader of Orange Protestantism, the Tely, for instance, now runs a weekly article by James Cardinal McGuigan, Rabbi Reuben Slonim is its editorial writer.

Anglican Mr. Bassett has stumped personally for the appointment of a Canadian ambassador to the Vatican, a heresy that would have rattled the rafters—now 85 years—Tely to its foundation some years ago.

Part of this outlook stems from his father, an Ulsterman who had Ottawa-born John educated at a Catholic Christian Brothers school because he believed in more understanding between Catholics and Protestants.

Results of this attitude have included for the son:

The 1957 Canadian B'nai B'rith humanitarian award for work in leading the way toward more favorable climate for new Canadians and minority races.

JOINED JEWISH CLUB

The 1960 award of the Gottheil medal of the Zeta Beta Tau fraternity in the United States for the individual who did most to foster better understanding among peoples in 1959. Recipients have included the late president Franklin D. Roosevelt, Mrs. Eleanor Roosevelt and Bernard Baruch, financier and presidential adviser.

He also became a member of Toronto's Primrose Club, up to the time of his entry a strictly Jewish organization.

The field of human relations, Mr. Bassett said, "is of tremendous importance to me. It has also been an area of great importance to Prime Minister Diefenbaker."

At his nominating convention, Mr. Bassett said new immigration regulations opening Canada's doors wider are "the greatest step forward in this field since Confederation."

The Progressive Conservative Bill of rights, he said, had "put into words what we all feel in our hearts."

While he has been a Diefenbaker supporter, he steers away back—going back to when he was Young Conservative in Quebec—he said the prime minister had not initiated the idea of his trying for office again.

"I reached the decision on my own. I have always felt that politics and journalism are closely allied." However, the prime minister had said to him that he approved.

He will not be looking particularly for help, he said, from the high-gear organization of Allister Grosart, national director of the party. He plans mainly a comprehensive campaign of doorbell-ringing and meetings with small groups at which the contenders for the party leadership will be present.

Mr. Bassett had been asked also to run in Liberal - held Toronto Trinity but said he chose the melting pot of Spadina because it is an "exciting" riding.

In addition, his home is in that constituency, and so is a new $5,000,000 plant the Tely is to construct.

When he was nominated by Mrs. Charles Rea, wife of the ailing and retiring Conservative member for Spadina, she said: "We could be starting the political career of the man who could very well become Canada's prime minister."

Asked about that, Mr. Bassett just commented:

"We have a perfectly good prime minister now."

To free himself for an active role in politics, he has started in by resigning, effective in April, as vice-president and director of The Canadian Press, national news co-operative.

"If elected, he said, "there are other areas in which I would reduce responsibilities not related to publication of The Telegram."

He declined to specify these, but they might be related to ways at all of CFTO-TV here, which he heads, Maple Leaf or Argonauts.

For athletic Mr. Bassett—tennis, sailing and squash-shaking loose from participation in the management of the two teams undoubtedly would be a wrench.

Already, he is predicting that this year the second-place Leafs will win the Stanley Cup since 1951. As for Argos' chances for the championship Grey Cup this year "Better ask me about that some time later."

PRIZE THAT POISONED

One of its nation's famous lunch clubs had organized a tour, chartered a boat, and set off on a holiday at sea.

The captain of the ship, in an effort to provide entertainment, set up a game of shuffleboard, and offered a beautiful prize — a lovely silk scarf from Japan — to the woman who could survive a tournament composed of all the women of the ship.

As the tournament came to its climax two women of about equal ability were pitted against one another, and their score was a tie. Then, in an extremely close matching of the goals, the prize was awarded to one of them, whereas she burst into tears of joy, and all the others congratulated her with shouts of hearty praise.

But there was one woman on the boat who had seen the winner move her quoit half an inch by seeming to step too closely to it, but she "had a good loser" and said nothing.

Two years later a luncheon club held its annual meeting. For the first time since the awarding of the silk scarf the two women met each other. Not a word was said, but eyes met. An hour later a package was delivered at the room of the loser which was found to contain the scarf and a single lined note: "Both of us know who really won it."

That was all, but at least one woman slept better that night then she had slept in two years!

BILL TO REDUCE VOTING AGE TALKED OUT

Extend Franchise To Arctic Area

OTTAWA (CP) — Should 18-year-olds be allowed to vote for members of Parliament?

Six MPs argued in the Commons Friday that they should—that these young people who can get married, pay taxes, teach children and even be drafted in wartime are mature enough to vote.

But in an hour-long debate the Commons came to no conclusion on a bill sponsored by Frank Howard (CCF—Skeena) to reduce the federal voting age to 18 from 21.

The measure was talked out until adjournment time, and stands little chance of coming up again for a vote this session. There was more practical outcome for a bill sponsored by Erik Nielsen (PC — Yukon) to extend the franchise to some 4,000 adults—mostly Eskimos—in the north districts of Keewatin and Franklin.

The measure includes these districts in the federal riding of Mackenzie River, was passed without a recorded vote.

CONTINUES DEBATE

For most of the Friday sitting, however, the House continued for the second day its general debate on the record budget of the public works department with arguments over the level of borrowing building in Canada and the need for public works to provide jobs for the unemployed.

Although discussion of Mr. Howard's bill was on civic involved potential voters, the debate was devoid of political partisanship.

The only hint of it came from Hyacinthe Simard (PC — Beauce) son (PC — Caribou) who declared: "I believe that when I was 18 years old I was just as good a man as I am now, and I was just as good Conservative."

Members were more concerned with whether Canadians aged 18 to 21 are politically mature enough to cast a ballot.

Erik Nielsen said that before the Yukon three young people got to go to jail in Canada but not to the polling booths. "I said much at the time to anyone ever heard of the department of national revenue insisting that I should come tax return because it was signed by an 18-year-old!"

CNR SIGNS NEW CONTRACT WITH 3,000 FIREMEN

Retroactive to Mar. 31 Last Year

By KEN SMITH

MONTREAL (CP) — The CNR signed a new labor contract with its 3,000 firemen Friday night, providing the first break in a series of deadlocked negotiations between the CNR and the CPR and their running trades.

The three - year contract, signed only two hours after negotiating teams for both parties hammered out the last detail, provides for a 6½-per-cent wage increase for firemen on passenger trains and a four-per-cent boost for those operating freight and yard tains.

The signing immediately raised speculation that further agreements will be forthcoming shortly in the case of other parallel negotiations going on between the CNR and the CPR and the various running-trades unions.

Some sources warned, however, against any quick optimism, since the wage settlement accepted by the firemen already has been rejected by the engineers in their negotiations with the two railways.

TALK SEPARATELY

The CNR and the CPR conduct separate negotiations with the unions representing the three big groups in the running trades—the engineers, firemen and trainmen.

Here is the situation in the other series of talks:

The engineers, represented by the Brotherhood of Locomotive Engineers (BLE), have asked for more than 90 per cent to go on strike if necessary to back demands for increases in the 97 per cent plus technical work rule change. No strike date has been set, however, against either railway pending the outcome of further talks.

The trainmen, represented by the Brotherhood of Railway Trainmen (CLC), are continuing to bargain with both the CPR and the CNR.

Firemen employed by the privately-owned CPR still are negotiating. The CNR agreement does not involve those talks.

The new agreement introduce to last March 31, when the previous contract expired and negotiations began in wrangling.

"Were we to stand still while the Soviets surpassed us — or even appeared to surpass us — we would lose our ability to deter, to survive and to respond to an all-out attack. We could be seriously weakened."

Will Fire Shots Unless Russia Signs Test Ban

Kennedy Orders Testing In Air in Mid-Pacific

By HAROLD MORRISON

WASHINGTON (CP) — President Kennedy has ordered a resumption of nuclear atmospheric tests in the mid-Pacific in late April unless Russia signs a foolproof test ban treaty before then.

In an announcement that found strong political support at home and brought a mixed response abroad, Kennedy told the American public Friday night that Russia made substantial military gains in her test series around last fall.

For the sake of the security of the free world, the U.S. cannot afford to fall behind, he said, adding:

It is our hope and prayer that these grim, unwelcome tests will never have to be made—that these deadly weapons will never have to be fired — that preparation for war will bring us the preservation of peace."

Kennedy made his long-anticipated announcement in a radio and television broadcast that touched briefly on American disarmament problems at the 18-country negotiations opening at Geneva March 14 and more shortly in the U.S. senate atmospheric blast after a 2½-year halt.

SUPPORT U.S. STAND

Britain and France immediately came to Kennedy's support, saying Democratic and Republican leaders at home.

Any indecision on the part of the U.S., Kennedy said, would be interpreted by the Kremlin as a sign of weakness. If Russia wants to prevent the new declarations all she has to do is accept the Western test ban proposals. If this is done, he said, no test would be assured. Kennedy said he and Prime Minister Macmillan would immediately meet with Premier Khrushchev at Geneva to sign the treaty.

The explosion of more than 40 bombs last fall didn't give Russia any nuclear superiority, Kennedy said, but they did result in "highly significant technology" and "some substantial gains in weaponry."

"We are going ahead while the Soviets surpassed us — or even appeared to surpass us — we would lose our ability to deter, to survive and to respond to an all-out attack. We could be seriously weakened."

Hees, Fleming Attacked by Judy La Marsh

Miss La Marsh, speaking to a meeting of Liberal supporters, referred to the Canadian government's attempts to obstruct Britain's entry into the European Common Market.

She said Canada's attempt to stop entry of Britain into ECM was climaxed in the "disgraceful exhibition of those screaming children Fleming and Hees at Accra" when, at a Commonwealth conference, they "thumbed their noses" with the declaration of the Commonwealth.

Canada has no right to try to direct the United Kingdom as to what it should or should not do, Marsh said. The entry of Britain into the ECM is the best move in the West's war to win the economic struggle.

She said she is suspicious that the government has not tabled its agreement to sell wheat to China in the House of Commons because it would disclose that payment is to be made partly in barter, contrary to the spirit of the International Monetary Fund in which Canada is a member.

Miss La Marsh said this, together with the "disgraceful performance" of former Bank of Canada governor James Coyne) has led to remarkable "loss of face" by Canada internationally.

She said this is serious since without a good reputation this country will not attract the investment it needs to expand and create jobs—or to expand the work force.

Miss La Marsh accused the government of ignoring the fact that unemployment is a problem that is going away by itself and we don't need to worry about it. Yet Canada under Conservative rule has had the highest unemployment in its history, she said.

'Piece-Meal Fooling Around' By Britain Annoys Welensky

SALISBURY (Reuters) — Federal Minister Sir Roy Welensky of the Rhodesian Federation today accused British of "piece-meal fooling around" with the constitutions of the federation's members and declared: "We want to arrive at something final."

Welensky made his statement as he returned by air from a hectic three-day visit to London to voice his opposition to new British constitutional proposals for the protectorate of Northern Rhodesia which would give a bigger political voice to Negroes.

The prime minister said that as a result of his "blunt speaking" while in London there might now be the beginning of an appreciation of the need for such a settlement.

He denied that he had gone to London to get Britain to alter its plans for Northern Rhodesia, which with the protectorate of Nyasaland and the white-dominated, self-governing colony of Southern Rhodesia constitutes the federation.

However, Welensky accused Britain of failing to let him state his view on the plan first and said that this was the second time he had made such a request and "on neither occasion have I had the courtesy of a reply."

Steel Labor Talks Have Collapsed

PITTSBURGH (AP) — Steel labor talks have collapsed in a stalemate of optimism continued today that a strike will be avoided.

Negotiators broke off more than two weeks of bargaining Friday night but not mitted in statements they had swapped offers without reaching a middle ground.

The facts seemed to indicate the vast steel industry and the steelworkers union, representing some 330,000 workers in basic steel mills, had made a good deal of progress while failing to nail down a final deal.

It was reliably reported the industry had offered wage and other benefits worth six to eight cents an hour, but the union held out for a settlement package more in the neighborhood of 10 cents an hour.

This augured a faster resumption of negotiations than the May 1 day mentioned by Union President David J. McDonald. It was also believed likely the government will prod the parties toward a quicker get-together.

Red Chinese Pilot Lands In Formosa

TAIPEI, Formosa (Reuters) — Chinese Communist pilot today landed his Soviet-built MIG-15 jet fighter at Tao Yuan air base, 20 miles south of here, and surrendered it, Chinese Nationalist air force headquarters announced.

President Chiang Kai-shek immediately went to the base to personally welcome the pilot, identified as 2nd Lieut. Liu Chen-sze. He was the first Communist pilot to land safely in Formosa.

According to a standing Nationalist policy, Liu will get a reward of 1,000 ounces of gold.

U-2 Plane Lost In California

LOS ANGELES (AP) — A Lockheed U-2 "spy" plane is missing in southern California, the fate of its pilot unknown.

The U-2—similar to the one that went down in Russia in 1960 — disappeared Thursday night on what was described as a "specialized training flight" in a 75-mile north of here.

At the Ontario base was Capt. John Campbell, 36, of Blasdell, N.Y. His plane was last sighted at 10:30 p.m. Thursday, another U-2 pilot over the air base.

Duce's Son Weds Loren's Sister As Cameramen Push, Bride Weeps

PREDAPPIO, Italy (Reuters) — Benito Mussolini's son married the sister of actress Sophia Loren today in a ceremony marked by tears, the calling of a doctor and threats to eject photographers.

As 2,000 persons packed the little church and 5,000 wailed outside, jazzman Romano Mussolini, 35, and 23-year-old Maria Scicolone were wed while dozens of photographers jostled around the altar.

The bride and groom arranged to place flowers on the grave of "Il Duce," killed by partisans in 1945, after the ceremony in this village in central Italy.

As excitement mounted in the church, the photographers were warned they would be ejected if they didn't behave.

Then Loren and her mother both broke down in tears during the ceremony and just before the ceremony a doctor attended Romano, who was looking pale and overwrought.

The church was packed for the climax and space had to be cleared for Romano's mother, Rachele Mussolini, widow of the dictator.

PRESIDENT SPEAKS — President Kennedy speaks from the White House. He announced that the United States will resume tests in the air by the latter part of April, unless "a firm agreement" with the Soviets to halt nuclear blasts has been reached by then. (AP Wirephoto).

Russia Calls Kennedy Plan 'Reminiscent of Blackmail'

LONDON (CP)—Russia today accused President Kennedy of using "manoeuvres strongly reminiscent of blackmail" in offering to call off planned tests if Russia agrees to a test ban treaty within the next two months.

The accusation was made in a statement by the official Soviet news agency Tass which said the president's offer Friday night to call off planned tests over the Pacific was "a clumsy attempt to justify himself before the world."

In Japan, the only country against which atomic bombs have been used, the foreign ministry issued the text of a letter from Premier Hayato Ikeda urging President Kennedy to "reconsider your present decision to resume testing."

Kennedy's announcement set off a small demonstration at the U.S. Embassy in Tokyo.

Ikeda sent his letter to the president in reply to one from Kennedy March 1 notifying Japan of the U.S. intention to resume atmospheric tests.

Whom he received the letter Ikeda was reported to have told United States Ambassador Edwin Reischauer that Japan opposed all forms of nuclear tests and would protest.

The following day he wrote to Kennedy saying he understood that the U.S. felt compelled to make its decision "because the Soviet Union, in complete defiance of the hopes of mankind, unilaterally broke the moratorium on nuclear weapons testing and vigorously conducted a series of some 50 such tests."

In the West, meantime, Britain and France, which were consulted in advance of the American decision, formally announced support.

In Ottawa, Commons Speaker Roland Michener said the Canadian members of the Canada-U.S. interparliamentary group, which ended a two-day meeting Friday, fully supported the U.S. view that atmospheric tests have become vital from the standpoint of scientific and military point of view. Canada's official position has been to oppose all nuclear testing.

Officials in Australia and New Zealand voiced regret about tests over the Pacific while expressing understanding of the American position.

Octogenarian Visits Female Centenarians of Family

KINGSTON (CP)—Saskatoon octogenarian, William Ferguson has a hobby of collecting chronological statistics on the female members of his family who live past the century mark.

Although he doesn't have to go far from his family tree to find centenarians, it sometimes requires considerable travelling to the parties which mark their birthdays.

This week the widower is in Kingston attending the 102nd birthday party of his cousin, Alice Dewitt.

It's an annual trip he has made "for I can't remember when it began."

Miss Dewitta is the first of Ferguson's paternal relatives to exceed the 100-year life span. Four members of the family on his mother's side have lived past the century mark.

He has been seven women.

Mr. Ferguson says he is "going to do my level best" to change that.

"I'm pretty well myself," the octogenarian said Friday. "I live a good clean life and feel fit as a fiddle. I can't say for sure I am going to make it to 100, but I'm going to try. The women have it all over us when it comes to things like that."

Miss Dewitta's party Friday was a quiet affair, although a number of friends came to visit her at St. Mary's on the Lake Hospital where she has been a resident for 12 years since the death of her son.

His mother and grandmother both lived to the age of 102, and a great - grandmother was 104 when she died. An aunt died only a few months before her 107th birthday.

"I've live got a lot of living to do," the westerner said.

Mr. Ferguson tomorrow he must have between 40 and 50 relatives living in the Kingston area.

There are branches of the family in Montreal, London, Hamilton, Granby, Que., Regina and Vancouver.

He has actually come from the Kingston area, "but I was the family outcast. I didn't have any money, so I went west."

"Now I wouldn't life anywhere, else except Saskatoon.

Mr. Ferguson retired in 1946 when his kind of job also retired.

From 1900 when he went west, he was with boiler gangs, maintaining the boilers on railway steam-engines for the Canadian National Railways.

Now he works as superintendent of an apartment building in Saskatoon.

Fallout Hazards of New U.S. Tests To Be 'Remote and Infinitesimal'

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Kennedy says the fallout hazards that would come from U.S. nuclear testing in the atmosphere are considered "remote and infinitesimal."

And he promised that "these tests will be conducted under conditions which restrict the radioactive fallout to an absolute minimum, far less than the contamination created by last fall's Soviet series."

Thus Kennedy Friday night tried to allay concern over the emotion - charged byproduct of atmospheric nuclear tests which the United States will resume in April if the Soviet Union does not agree to an effective test ban.

Kennedy said the amount of radiation from the tests will be "well within the guides for general population exposure." It is the safety, as set by the Federal Radiation Council.

Kennedy added, I find it deeply regrettable that any radioactive material must be added to the atmosphere—that even one additional individual's health may be risked in the forseeable future. And however remote and infinitesimal those hazards, and judged to be, I still exceedingly regret the necessity of balance

Fires Shots Unless Russia Signs Test Ban

By HAROLD MORRISON

WASHINGTON (CP) — President Kennedy has ordered a resumption of nuclear atmospheric tests in the mid-Pacific in late April unless Russia signs a foolproof test ban treaty before then.

In an announcement that found strong political support at home and brought a mixed response abroad, Kennedy told the American public Friday night that Russia made substantial military gains in her test series around last fall.

For the sake of the security of the free world, the U.S. cannot afford to fall behind, he said, adding:

It is our hope and prayer that these grim, unwelcome tests will never have to be made—that these deadly weapons will never have to be fired — that preparation for war will bring us the preservation of peace."

Kennedy made his long-anticipated announcement in a radio and television broadcast that touched briefly on American disarmament problems at the 18-country negotiations opening at Geneva March 14 and more shortly in the U.S. senate atmospheric blasts after a 2½-year halt.

SUPPORT U.S. STAND

Britain and France immediately came to Kennedy's support, saying Democratic and Republican leaders at home.

Any indecision on the part of the U.S., Kennedy said, would be interpreted by the Kremlin as a sign of weakness. If Russia wants to prevent the new declarations all she has to do is accept the Western test ban proposals. If this is done, he said, no test would be assured. Kennedy said he and Prime Minister Macmillan would immediately meet with Premier Khrushchev at Geneva to sign the treaty.

The explosion of more than 40 bombs last fall didn't give Russia any nuclear superiority, Kennedy said, but they did result in "highly significant technology" and "some substantial gains in weaponry."

"We are going ahead while the Soviets surpassed us — or even appeared to surpass us — we would lose our ability to deter, to survive and to respond to an all-out attack. We could be seriously weakened."

Kennedy denied air tests

Hees, Fleming Attacked by Judy La Marsh

Miss La Marsh, speaking to a meeting of Liberal supporters, referred to the Canadian government's attempts to obstruct Britain's entry into the European Common Market.

She said Canada's attempt to stop entry of Britain into ECM was climaxed in the "disgraceful exhibition of those screaming children Fleming and Hees at Accra" when, at a Commonwealth conference, they "thumbed their noses" with the declaration of the Commonwealth.

Canada has no right to try to direct the United Kingdom as to what it should or should not do, Marsh said. The entry of Britain into the ECM is the best move in the West's war to win the economic struggle.

She said she is suspicious that the government has not tabled its agreement to sell wheat to China in the House of Commons because it would disclose that payment is to be made partly in barter, contrary to the spirit of the International Monetary Fund in which Canada is a member.

Miss La Marsh said this, together with the "disgraceful performance" of former Bank of Canada governor James Coyne) has led to remarkable "loss of face" by Canada internationally.

She said this is serious since without a good reputation this country will not attract the investment it needs to expand and create jobs—or to expand the work force.

Miss La Marsh accused the government of ignoring the fact that unemployment is a problem that is going away by itself and we don't need to worry about it. Yet Canada under Conservative rule has had the highest unemployment in its history, she said.

THE GOLDEN YEARS

Building New Life as a Widow Calls for Planning and Care

By THOMAS COLLINS

"Would it be possible for you, on, maybe 20 years beyond the husband's death. She will find no friend and confidant who is dear enough for her she can't do better than to devote her life to volunteer for church, civic and charitable chores. It is also a satisfying life. Nor does it produce many new friends.

"Whether she needs the money or not a widow will usually find that a commercial job with a ready-made staff, or a small commercial business of her own will give her more purpose in life and more satisfying friends than anything else she can do. And she will be amazed at the drab part of her life-style that is behind gone, she should seriously consider an evening job.

OTHER FAMILY TIES

A widow should keep as close by her children as she can. Live with them if she can avoid it. Be as helpful and discreetly keep in contact with them. Remember that they may be many longer for what money she will remain the dearest people she has.

A widow should live in quiet and neighborhood in order that she may get away from the day or night. If she has her own home she should not sell it to have a family living there, or some roomers, in order to have company. Such companionship they offer, often she doesn't need it at rent.

A widow should make an effort to meet and know a lawyer, preferably on a social level. She will need one for many little things and, in time, for serious advice. If she knows him socially he will not charge her much. Nor will she be afraid to ask.

A widow should set up a regular medical check with a doctor. Above all she should fight against becoming an invalid.

A widow, even up to the age of 70, must keep reminding her self that she is not dead. She still could become an author, a public speaker, a musician or the creator of something new for society. And she could marry again. Widowhood can be a beginning as well as an end.

'Quinte' Cadets Take Theoretical Cruise on Lake

Twenty cadets and officers of Royal Canadian Sea Cadet Corps "Quinte" are currently on the "high seas" somewhere on Lake Ontario, their good ship left Belleville harbor yesterday evening following a brief refit which included the installation of many short wave radio equipment and a helm trainer which works with gyro compass repeater and an electrical "weather" system which simulates various operating conditions which a helmsman might meet at sea.

The cruise is, of course, a theoretical exercise but the activity certainly is not. Cadets stand regular watches, four hours on and six hours off, throughout the cruise. Besides the regular chores which the ship's company expected to maintain, such as a brick a day wheel, engine room activities and the matelocker system, there are wave radio operation, there are training which are a regular part of Sea Cadet activities.

The cadets are under the orderly duty and sports also form a part of the weekend activity. The unexpected can occur at any time, such as a break down in the machinery which affected. This unexpected harbor time will be put to good use in other ways. A full program of drill and training equipment was made and the ship was outfitted with depth charge racks.

Also on board for the cruise will be Lt.-Cdr. (SCC) Ken Hall, RCSCC "Hallowell" of Picton, who are guests of the local Corps.

The cruise is to finish up tomorrow evening with the ship's hands tied up in Belleville harbor in time for a church parade to Bridge Street United Church at which time it is expected that the Sea Cadet Officer Sea, Cadets, Lt. Commander (P) Shaver, RCN, of Toronto is expected to be on board.

The final activity of the cruise will be Sunday dinner on ship before the Cadets return home.

would be a war provocation. On the contrary, it was his hope that peace prospects would be strengthened by this declaration that the West was not willing that the West will no longer talk and, negotiating in good faith, while the test ban negotiation and are free to prepare for resumption.

While the president laid heavy and repeated stress on his call for a test ban treaty in his statement with Russia to make testing unnecessary, there was little or no optimism in official quarters here about Soviet acceptance of the President's challenge to make a "break-through" on this issue.

The projected test series will be conducted by the Atomic Energy Commission and the Department of defence. Preparations for the tests were started last November on Kennedy's order, pending a complete study of the results of the Soviet tests of U.S. nuclear weapons resumption, in the light of those results.

Kennedy said the experimental blasts will be held in the atmosphere are the minimum necessary to develop new or improved weapons for which he said he could not be ready by underground tests since last fall.

WILL SOON END

The number of U.S. air tests will be less than the total of Soviet explosions in the last Soviet series and will be completed soon, Kennedy said.

He declared that the explosions will be set off over the open sea. It was subsequently learned from other sources that tests that the plan is to explode the nuclear devices high in the air, either by dropping them from airplanes or by putting them aloft with missiles.

The president said he recognized that there would be disturbance through the world over resumed U.S. atmospheric testing.

"But I trust the peoples who value their freedom and their security and who look to our relative strength to shield them from danger; those who know of our good faith in seeking an end to testing and an end to the arms race—will have confidence," said the United States to do what ever it must do to deter the threat of aggression."

Fire Caused By Leakage Says Chief

TRENTON — Fire Chief Cecil Ellis said yesterday that following three days' intensive investigation by detectives from the Ontario Fire Marshal's office, the cause of Tuesday morning's explosion in a house on Sidney Street which damaged the house to the extent of $2,000 has been reached.

Chief Ellis said that it is now thought that gas had seeped into a septic tank adjacent to the house and when the furnace in the home, which is operated by the fire in the furnace.

The town of Trenton has been issued with a writ by the Trenton Memorial Hospital claiming damages amounting to more than $80,000.

The statement alleges that when the street was being widened and reconstructed last year, a service station, owned by the estate and located at the corner of Division and Dundas Streets, suffered a loss of business while the street was closed and the road level at his point was changed.

There are other cases in dispute, according to report.

Defence Claims Robbers May Have Escaped

PETERBOROUGH (CP)—The men who fled from the scene of a last summer's Havelock bank robbery in a Buick possibly met with another car and made good their escape, defence counsel John Mirsky suggested Friday.

Mr. Mirsky was concluding his summing up of evidence on behalf of brothers Jean-Claude and Yvon Lalonde, two of the four Montreal men charged with the Aug. 31 robbery.

Mr. Mirsky pointed out that if was several hours before police were blocks were in position and there was no evidence to contradict his theory that the bandits may have escaped. He said none of the accused was found with any loot, guns or clothing that would connect them to the robbery scene.

Besides Jean-Claude, 23, and Yvon 31, the others charged with armed robbery in the $22,000 holdup are Roger Poirier, 31, and Roger Marisi, 41.

COULD HAVE SHOT

Dealing with charge of resisting arrest by shooting, a charge facing all but Yvon Lalonde, Mr. Mirsky said the men clearly had an opportunity to shoot police with an automatic rifle at a distance of 40 feet, but this was not done.

The officers, he said, had agreed in evidence that the shots were wild and it had not been established that the person with the rifle had intended to shoot the officer.

Judge A. R. Wilmott interrupted at one point to ask why the accused was appeared to be running away if they were only on a fishing trip or were merely lost in the bush.

Mr. Mirsky recalled that there had been several cottage breakins in the area and said it was possible the accused were trying to evade arrest as a result of these breakins.

Judge Wilmott commented that he could not accept the theory that the accused were merely on a fishing trip. He could not see any reason for breaking into cottages unless there was some other motive.

The case continues.

BILL TO REDUCE

Opposition to the bill came from Marcel Lambert, parliamentary secretary to Revenue Minister Nowlan, and from J. M. Macdonnell (PC—Toronto Greenwood) who at 77 is the oldest member of the Commons.

Mr. Lambert noted that members of the armed forces can vote, regardless of age. He also argued that it hadn't been proved that the change would be for the better.

"We must have a dividing line somewhere," he said.

CHARGES EXPLOITATION

The public works debate brought a charge by Murdo Martin (CCF — Timmins) that there is "shameless" exploitation of immigrant workers on housing projects under the National Housing Act.

He said the federal government bears some responsibility to correct such conditions "because they houses are being built with the taxpayers' money."

John R. Matheson (L—Leeds) said public works should be expanded in areas of serious unemployment. There also should be federal loans to municipalities to permit them to carry out many useful public works and provide jobs.

Chief Party Whip Predicts Conservatives Will Return With Greater House Majority

Standing on the record of fulfilled promises and on its accomplishments of increasing world trade and development of the nation's natural resources, Prime Minister John Diefenbaker's Progressive Conservative government will be returned to power with a greater House majority than is now enjoyed.

This was the prophesy of Mr. John Pallett, M.P. for Peel county, chief party whip, and parliamentary secretary for the Prime Minister as he spoke last night to members of the South Hastings Progressive Conservative Association at their annual meeting at the Kiwanis Centre.

Mr. Pallett did not say when the election would be but promised it would be before March, 1963.

The speaker listed a long line of reasons why the voters at the next election would return the Progressive Conservative party with a greater than ever majority.

NO COMPARISON

Foremost of these was that there was no comparison in the leaders of the two major parties.

He said the Liberals could not match Prime Minister Diefenbaker whose concern for the ordinary small man applied today as it did when as a young lawyer he championed the cause of the under dog.

"He touches humanity as a parliamentarian as he did when he was a lawyer," the speaker said. The Liberals are doing the best with what they have had, but they cannot help what they have not got."

Another reason given by Mr. Pallett for his predicted return of the Conservatives, was that the electors will not forget the "who will sign up" attitude of the Liberals prior to 1957. Neither will they forget the pipeline debate and the Liberal action in cutting off Parliamentary debate on the issue.

'SAME OLD GANG'

The Liberals, he said, were still the "same old gang" and would again do the "same old thing" if they got the chance.

Another reason for the predicted return of the Conservatives was that party members were true representatives of their constituents.

"Men like Lee Grills are not merely rubber stamps in parliament," Mr. Pallett said. "They are invited to speak their minds by the Prime Minister who wants members to be the voice of the people."

But the promises kept and the accomplishments of the Diefenbaker government since 1957 would also be important reasons for Conservative victory at the polls.

Conservatives were not supermen but they have accomplished many things which the Liberals said were impossible.

"What have we done for agriculture?" asked the speaker.

SURPLUS REDUCED

Mr. Pallett went on to say that tremendous wheat surpluses had been reduced through immense sales to China; the cheese industry had been revitalized and 23 agricultural products were now under price support.

Great accomplishments had been achieved in the nation's export trade with last year being the first time since 1932 that Canada had a favorable trade balance.

In 1956 Canada bought $714,000,000 worth more goods than she had sold to other countries.

"But with Conservative trade policies last year Canada sold $87,000,000 worth more than she bought," the speaker said.

In addition there have been great advances in social justice with increased old age pensions, increased old age assistance, blind pensions and war veterans' allowances.

"All this because these people were deserving and the other party said it could not give it to them."

On the federal-provincial level, increased contributions had been made to the provinces, these being increased this year to over 70 per cent that which was being paid by the Liberals.

PULL UP ECONOMY

Power projects and other assistance had been given to help pull up the Maritimes economy and the Saskatchewan Dam would be completed in 1963.

"The Liberals said it could not be done".

Vast sums had been thrown in so aid in the development of resources in the north with 4,200 miles of access roads and 2,400 miles of resource roads being provided.

The Liberals had strongly criticized Conservative deficits but Mr. Pallett claimed the overall Conservative deficit was balanced exactly by increased payments to the provinces.

"If we had not increased payments to the provinces, we would have balanced our budget every year", he said.

Since 1957 income taxes had been cut by 20 per cent on Canadian taxpayers and "I don't have any sympathy for other 80 per cent in the higher brackets".

The speaker asked that a more positive viewpoint be taken on the government's question. Since 1956 half a million new jobs had been provided and if Liberal policies had not been reversed unemployment would now be three times greater than it is.

ASSIST YOUTH

With its program of re-training and retention of technical schools, the government was now looking after the youth of the country to fill their for the highly trained jobs of the future.

"There is nothing remarkable about this — as said we would do it. — this's Conservatives.

Tribute was paid to Hon. Howard Green and his external affairs department policy of peace, while credit was given to Prime Minister Diefenbaker's bill of rights which the government would go down in history as one of his greatest achievements.

A Department of Forests had been established with a program of research instituted which would double tree production in the next half century. The government had also recognized that research was the answer to give Canadian manufacturers to compete on world markets.

But among the government's greatest achievements was restoration of the dignity and rights of parliament and restoration of the supremacy of parliament.

Thanks to the speaker were expressed by Association vice president Arthur McCarey.

Four Arrested For Cheating At Bingo Game

SUDBURY (CP) — Five persons were arrested here Thursday night after Lion's Club officials became suspicious at the number of times bingo jackpots were won with 22 to 34 numbers left to call.

The five, one a United States resident, were arrested on charges of cheating by falsifying bingo cards and conspiring to cheat.

Remanded for a week in a court appearance today were John Foxley, 56, of Roseville, Mich., Mrs. Jacoba Desmoker, 36, and her husband Jan, Desmoker, 38, both of Whitefish Dist., Douglas Smith, 39, of Whitefish and Laura Rice of Worthington, Ont.

The women were released on $500 personal bail. Bail was set at $2,000 each for the men.

Deputy Police Chief Bert Bullet said the suspicion was disclosed at a secret meeting among the police, Lions Club President Lu Marien, member Burn Welsh and Guy Lemieux, manager of the Sudbury Arena.

Plans were made for five plainclothes policemen and a policewoman to attend the game. The arrests were made after one of the suspects claimed the nightly $1,000 jackpot.

SEIZE MACHINES

Two printing machines and a number of blank bingo cards were seized.

Ald. Jack Ireland Chosen President South Hastings Conservative Association

Belleville Alderman Jack Ireland, who managed successfully all election campaigns in the past two elections for member Lee Grills, was named president of the South Hastings Progressive Conservative Association as party members held their annual meeting Friday evening at the Kiwanis Centre.

Mr. Ireland won the post over Dr. John Stock, who was also nominated for the position. It was the only election for executive posts as the association executive posts were filled by acclamation.

Close to 200 party members crowded into the Kiwanis Centre for the annual meeting and to hear Mr. John Pallet, MP for Peel County, and chief party whip and parliamentary secretary to Prime Minister John Diefenbaker, who as guest speaker prophesied a Conservative victory in the next Federal election with an even bigger house majority than at present.

Other speakers heard at the meeting, included Rodney Webb, MP for Hastings-Frontenac; W. E. Sandercock, MPP for Hastings West; Clarke T. Rollins, MPP for Hastings East, and Hastings county Warden Harold Hardy.

TRIBUTES PAID

Past president Ray Grant was chairman for the meeting and called for a moment's silence in honor of Association president Sam Curry of Tweed and two former riding M.P.'s, Ernest Tummon and George Hees, who had recently died since the last general meeting of the party organization.

Mr. Grant called for the election of a strong executive "united for unity of purpose within the local party ranks. He said a strong party organization was necessary to win the next Federal election, which he promised would be hotly contested.

"Don't underestimate the opposition", was his warning.

Mr. Grills in introducing the guest speaker referred to Mr. Pallett as a willing worker for the party and riding association and a great and true friend.

Mr. Grills congratulated the newly elected executive and introduced the visiting political dignitaries.

Entertainment during the evening was provided by Miss Sheila Canning, who favored with several solo numbers and led in community singing. Mrs. Shirley Warner accompanied her on the piano.

Following the business meeting, the ladies served refreshments.

FIRST SINCE 1958

It was the first "annual" meeting of the South Hastings Conservative Association since March, 1958, and the infrequent meetings was questioned by Charles Keeble of Parkdale, who claimed general meetings should be called every year.

The report of the nominating committee, with suggestions for the new executive, was read by Mr. Grant, who assured members that nominations would still be entertained from the floor.

Mr. Ray Zufelt took the evening's chairman at his word and promptly nominated Dr. John Stock for the association president's role. The election by ballot returned Mr. Ireland, the nominating committee's recommendation.

Harry Morrow of Sidney township, was re-elected treasurer and Ray Gunsolus, Belleville, secretary.

Auditors are: T. L. McCullough, Deseronto, and C. L. Jewell, Belleville.

U.S. Anxious To Put Nuclear Heads in Canada

WASHINGTON (CP)—United States authorities said Friday the lack of an arrangement with Canada on the storage of American nuclear warheads in Canada "inhibits our joint defence capabilities."

Owen Ketcheson, Popular Moira Junior Farmer, Wins Most of Awards in Judging

It was a repeat performance for Owen as last year he also won the Bishop Trophy and the H. R. Tompkins award.

The judging competition saw the Juniors including two girls, judge coarse grains small seeds, forage plants and seeds and answer a questionnaire.

Kennedy said that "by paying close attention to location, wind and weather conditions, and by holding these tests over open sea, we intend to rule out the problem of fallout in the immediate area of testing."

Also, he added, the increase in radiation in the northern hemisphere "... will be small, such fallout occurs—will be kept to a low level.

U.S. officials said this is a virtue of testing in the Pacific near the Equator — at Christmas Island, for instance, where the United States may run off some of its series.

Nuclear bursts, conducted in the equatorial latitudes distribute their fallout more generally throughout the world. The Soviet test tests in the polar latitudes tend to concentrate their fallout in the northern hemisphere where 80 per cent of the world's population is located.

The president said that by conservative estimate "the total effects from this test series will be roughly equal to only one per cent of those due to natural radiation—which he noted, "has always been part of the air around us."

Webster's Under Fire

The English language changes.
Meanings of words and phrases alter.

One of the familiar phrases which may lose its former significance is: "According to Webster - - - -."

That used to settle a lot of arguments. Now it is in danger of becoming little more than an invitation to widen the area of dispute.

Webster's third international dictionary is the centre of a fierce controversy.

Critics allege that Webster's has abrogated its authority and accepted words and word usages merely because they are commonly so used.

Dr. Phillip B. Gove, the editor-in-chief of Webster's, replies that the purpose of a dictionary is to describe objectively the meanings and values of words as educated persons use them today.

It is exasperating to find oneself in the midst of a controversy of this nature, touching one's own field of work, without being qualified to comment—but we have not even had the opportunity to read the new edition and would be little less prepared to judge between experts had we seen it.

It does strike us, though, that the root of the dispute may lie in circumstances which have been completely changed since Webster's first dictionary.

Dr. Gove says that the duty of a dictionary is to describe the meanings and values of words as educated persons use them. There was a day when educated persons were few in number, and when the particular field in which they were educated was most likely to be the correct use of their native tongue. Today almost everybody is educated after a fashion, a great many are very thoroughly educated in some specialty and only a comparatively few of these educated persons specialize in the correct use of their own language.

This seems to us to require some reservations about accepting the meanings and values placed on words by some educated persons. Educated persons say "finalize" and "price-wise." These words ought to be in a dictionary so that others may ascertain just what these educated people mean. But there ought to be some means by which the publisher of a dictionary can seek to protect from debasement the currency in which he deals.

There are dozens of new words which are good words and which deserve ready acceptance by all—gobbledygook, aputnik, moon-shot. But not, please, "chaired" for presiding as chairman, or, that horror of horrors from the sport pages, "defence" as a verb. We cannot bring ourselves to believe that the new Webster's accepts the atrocities listed, but if it is to avoid degenerating to this level at some future date its editors ought to consider the advisability of requiring that the educated persons from whom they take their standards of word usage should be persons specifically educated in the use of English.

Senators Differ

Senator David Croll has introduced a private bill which would require persons engaged in providing consumer credit to furnish the borrower with certain information, including the amount of finance charges expressed as a rate of simple annual interest.

Senator Croll's fellow-Liberal, Senator Salter Hayden, says that the bill is unworkable.

The calculation of interest in transactions where there are instalment payments is very difficult, he argues, and different people come up with different results.

This may make Senator Croll's bill unworkable in its present form. But Senator Hayden's objection, far from being an acceptable reason why the bill, in an amended form, should not be passed, is a compelling reason why it should be placed on the statute books.

All that Senator Croll is seeking is to assure that purchasers of credit know its cost, in the same manner that purchasers of almost anything else are informed of the cost of what they buy.

All that needs to be done is to include in Senator Croll's bill an approved formula for determining the simple annual interest rate. If this formula is applied to all credit charges, it will be possible for the purchaser to compare their costs. Senator Hayden, in objecting to the bill, has for all practical purposes admitted that it is virtually impossible for the average citizen to make such a comparison today, because different people come up with different results. What is needed is one yardstick, by which all credit plans must be measured. It is as simple as that.

Justice without wisdom is impossible.—James Froude.

Fighter Fleming Feared By Opposition in Commons

By RICHARD JACKSON
(from The Ontario Intelligencer's Ottawa Bureau).

OTTAWA — Happen to have noticed how in recent weeks the Opposition, Liberal and New Democratic sides, has been leaving Finance Minister Fleming pretty much alone?

They have left even such people as Associate Defence Minister Pierre Sevigny over some of speeches on defence, Trade and Commerce Minister Green about reliable Washington, bothering Defence Minister Harkness over the to-be-or-not-to-be of nuclear weapons . . . even getting under happy, handsome Trade Minister Mees' skin with pointed questions about trade with Cuba . . . but, doughty Donald Fleming they have been keeping hands and hand hogged off.

It isn't out of love or even admiration for the man — because, let's face it, Fleming is hardly a man who inspires affection, either as an individual or as Finance Minister.

Treasury boards, finance ministers — because they are the kind that levies if not collects the taxes — are unloved, sometimes even reviled.

But with Donald Fleming love is involved, but hatred long ago.

He can't quite show how he learned, that to do otherwise, is to invite a verbal thumping.

He is a fighter.

The question gives Prime Minister Diefenbaker something of the same kid gloves treatment, out of both fear of reprisal and a certain respect for the exalted office of the man who leads the nation.

Over the years, long before he became Prime Minister, John Diefenbaker demonstrated to all concerned — and his word passes along from Parliament to Parliament through the succeeding Session — that he was more than able to take care of himself in any company, including that of former Prime Minister Mackenzie King, perhaps the wiliest political foeman of them all.

For while the Prime Minister can wound with the rapier of swift wit and deadly sarcasm, the Finance Minister simply employs the bludgeon or broadsword of tactful abuse.

He has turned out to be the best Bare Knuckles Tough Guy of the Federal Cabinet and the Opposition makes a point of steering clear of him in the fist clash and clatter of the Commons for fear of getting a verbal punch on the nose.

Could be that for a Finance Minister he has a disarming smile.

For next to a Prime Minister no member of the Cabinet is in under the gun as the Finance Minister.

And if a finance minister can't be loved as was the remarkable phenomenon of Federal Finance Minister Charles Foster Abbott, now a pillar of the Supreme Court of Canada, then maybe he better had be respected, or even feared.

YOUR CHOICE

It wasn't always like this for Fleming.

For months, an aggressive Liberal Opposition, and the political front page combined to give him a rough time.

He took a mauling in the "Battle of the Bands" and the "mis-firing" of Governor James Coyne . . . was pushed around in the debate on Canada-United States Common Market issue . . . and finally got himself into that mysterious mix-up with the Prime Minister that ended in that baffling journey-Pilgrimage by the Cabinet to Quebec.

Through it all, he stoutly stood and fought back.

This was unlikeable, for he was never a man to give an inch when he could stab it out toe-to-toe.

But with the Session of 1958 he began to change his tactics.

Speaker chasing him, in Parliamentary diagrams, from the Commons for a day of pondering.

But this past year has been different. For the past months, "two-at-once" political thought he might be, it looked as if Donald Fleming just might crack.

Then it was he that blew his Parliamentary stack.

In a fine and fancy fury he lit into his critics with charges, shouted at them on top of his lungs, of "distortion . . . half-truths . . . and [illegible] anti-Canadian quotations . . . besmirching empty charges . . . fairy tales . . . malevolent misrepresentation . . . malevolent nonsenses . . . ."

CRASH BANG

The fighting Fleming was in his form physically as well as verbally.

He slammed his bare knuckles down on his wooden desk light smacking thirst . . . shook . . . lightly clenched fist at the Liberal three times . . . and four times charged out into the centre aisle to speak the Opposition on his favorite flagstaff with indignation.

Ball-cracking to be followed down any attempts at interruption . . . answering question with insult . . . inquiry with abuse.

It was a great performance, and when the dust had settled, the Opposition had come to a unanimous decision not to stir him up again.

And that's the way it has been . . . with the Opposition on the fuss and political fury that usually even traditionally, involves, the Prime Minister particularly at this pre-budget time of the year . . . Session . . . on the eve of election . . . Parliament in peace and comparative quiet.

In any event, they seem to have done with baiting him, and all now is strategy.

Could be, that the Opposition has come to the conclusion, as the saying goes, magnificent, that Donald Fleming is too tough a nut to be really cracked either by foe or fate, and that they'd save their shafts and nurse their energies for less personally invulnerable targets.

Fleming, they've found, has the hide of a rhinoceros and a thumping fist to a half-Nelson men and the heart of a rusty railway diesel horn — a valuable equipment for any Minister of Finance.

STRENGTH for the DAY

DR. EARL L. DOUGLASS

IT CAN BECOME DANGEROUS

The word "maximum" has a long form previously reached. come to have an important place in modern civilization. It means "the greatest quantity or value attainable in a given case." Get the maximum mileage out of your tires or your gasoline. Deposit in the bank which pays higher interest on savings than any other bank. Eat this breakfast food or that and get the maximum of vitamins.

This emphasis on the advantage of having everything maximum in quantity and quality has both a good and bad effect on living. The good effect arises from the stimulation it gives one to do his best and in his seeking to get the best possible. It encourages thrift—a reprudence in buying. It keeps pointing one always to attainments never previously reached.

The disadvantageous aspect of such an emphasis is that it tends to make us quantitative in our thinking, rather than qualitative. The biggest tends to become the best. Power assumes the position of being a factor in life. People who are successful are those in terms of maximum and growing maximum. As a nation, the maximum seems to be in terms of maximum and growing maximum. As a nation, the maximum seems to be in terms of armaments and the size of armies. As a nation, the maximum seems to be in terms of armaments and the size of armies. As a nation, the maximum seems to be in terms of armaments and the size of armies.

So watch out about that word "maximum." It can help or it can hurt — promote or undermine.

In Most Cases, Impaired Hearing Can Be Improved

By JOSEPH G. MOLNER, M.D.

Dear Dr. Molner: What can be done to retard loss of hearing which is becoming more annoying in my case. I am in my middle 60's. Please use only my first two initials because some friends reported my trouble to hearing aid companies and I have had five solicitors call on me already. — R.P.

In fairness to the salesmen, they were invited to call on you, even though you didn't do the inviting. Your friends, it seems to me, should let you decide when and whom to invite.

Now, what to do about your problem? As we grow older, loss of hearing is more likely to be progressive, although this is not always the case. It depends, on the cause.

In any event, it is important to ascertain some fundamental facts. Is the auditory nerve affected? Or is the defect confined to the middle ear, the sound waves are not reaching it?

This is something that a physician can't going to be able to tell you. It requires tests by an ear specialist. After that, various possibilities present.

The worst is to be told that nothing can be done — and, unfortunately, this is often the case.

Fitting an ear phone, you'll find a lot of material in my booklet, Hints to Those Headaches. A copy is available in return for a long, stamped, self-addressed envelope and 10 cents to coin to cover handling costs. Address your request to Dr. Molner in care of this publication.

TODAY'S TALK

By GEORGE MATTHEW ADAMS

ON COMPETITION

The efficient mind and character really never competes with anybody or anything.

The stalwart person goes long strides and doesn't study them at all. He knows whither he is bound, and he has no doubt in relation with a sure step. He knows where he is, the pace of the man behind or the man ahead. And that is why all competition is wasteful and unnecessary.

You can't compete with the man who does his work better than anyone else has ever done that same work.

If you put too much attention to what the other fellow is doing, you are losing your grip on some day and view your future miles ahead of you.

In competition there is always friction. And friction wears and tears and brings on wrinkles.

The man who knows that he is doing a better job than anyone else has ever done and who feels that he is transforming himself into what he does, doesn't have to mind what some one else is doing, or how fast he knows that.

The best always has the edge on everything else of a similar nature, for the limitations in the world can't get the best together with the genuine article.

There are more failures in business caused by watching the wasteful work of the other fellow than anything else. Watch your own work and let the other fellow — watch yourself!

Don't be scrambling for original and unique, then you too are [illegible] That is to be expected. But never mind. Keep going.

North always takes the right road. It doesn't get confused at the cross-roads.

Success isn't a product of competition but the result of the application of truth to the application of pride that is the right out of the heart.

THE PACKSACK

By GREGORY CLARK

A doctor of my acquaintance, who, like most modern physicians, has had to study psychiatry, tells me that an important factor in the cure of aiding is the unconscious mind of the illness.

"There is an unconscious revulsion," he says, "in an [illegible] group of city dwellers, especially young people, against filth of cities. When the average person in town looks out on the familiar scene around his home and finds it repulsive and pure after a few fall of a few hours, he experiences a sharp emotional reaction. It is a conscious reaction. But when, in a day or two, he sees the snow all soiled and black, and the streets converted into filthy channels of brown slush, there is an unconscious response to what I may say to himself — 'Do I breathe this stuff? If he is not strong enough, and vigorous enough, he will become victim to a desire to get out into a world that is still pure and undefiled. This accounts for the sight of those cars speeding away each week-end with skis on top of them. Sure it is fun. Sure it is athletic activity such as most young people are attracted to. But there is aesthetics in it too. These weekend migrants are hungry for a sight and feel of cleanliness."

A Lift for Living

Leaving Vital Part of Living

By DR. RALPH W. SOCKMAN

Some friends were calling on a physician who was in his terminal illness. One said to him, "Doctor, you have lived a long and useful life in this community. Haven't you some message or counsel you would like to leave with your neighbors and friends?" The doctor modestly answered: "No, I guess not, except that you might tell them that I have always tried to close the gate behind me."

We are so eager to get ahead that we are ever looking for doors of opportunity to open. But how about closing the doors behind us? Have we learned how to leave experiences and situations? Have we learned how to pass from a great thrill or deep sorrow without suffering a paralyzing aftereffect? And do we think we have learned how to leave this earth? Eventually we shall all have to face the final departure. The art of leaving is a very vital part of living.

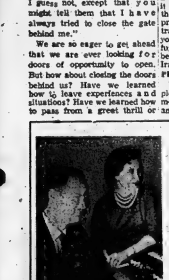
Before me is a bit of inspired counsel given by the prophet Isaiah to a people whom he was calling to leave the city of Babylon. I should like to place it before you as a formula for the art of leaving. This is the prophets' advice, as Moffat's translation put it, "Nor need you hurry forth, flying like fugitives, for the Lord will go before you, and the God of Israel will be your rear guard."

PLEASANT EXPERIENCES

Have we learned to leave our pleasant experiences? Does the memory of them go with us as an inspiration to enrich our future days, or does it leave us with a nostalgia that spoils the good times ahead?

Our ever-child have His followers enter fully into the experience of the moment, unclouded by regret and unhurried by impatience. Through memory we should preserve the past in such a way that it enriches the present and prepares us for the future.

LEAVING SAD EXPERIENCES



Let us now ask: Have we learned how to leave our sad experiences? Some seek escape from sad memories by a change of scene. To get away from the environmental reminders of our sorrow may place some of the nettles from our wounded spirits.

Some try to get away from their sorrows by throwing themselves into their work. Viscount Grey wrote in 1917 "The occupation of work is the best cure for anyone who has to bear a great sorrow. If they have work in hand and strength to do it, and if they can sleep, the problem of how to endure life is solved for the present moment. Looking forward to the months and years that are to come is very dreary and depressing, but we do not live life in the lump, but day by day, and each day brings its own work and some expedient to help us."

But diversion, travel and work are not adequate escapes from sad or bad situations. Hear the prophet's promise: "The Lord will go before you and the God of Israel will be your rear guard." When we go with God, He keeps the good from being left behind and He prevents the bad from overtaking us.

Scout Auxiliaries Have Busy Season, Plan Future Events

By ANNE M. MCDONALD

16TH BELLEVILLE BOY SCOUT AUXILIARY (Parkdale)

The February meeting of the 16th Boy Scout Auxiliary was held at the home of Mrs. Thompson. The new executive for 1952 was installed by Mrs. P. Gelthorpe, president of the District Committee for Ladies' Auxiliaries. Members holding office include: Mrs. A. Hyatt as President, Mrs. V. Mason as vice-president; Mrs. E. Brooks as treasurer; Mrs. J. Gordon, social convener, and Mrs. J. Weagant, as secretary.

A business meeting was given by the secretary, and also one of the last group committee meetings.

The skating party held in January was a great success and Mrs. Hyatt expressed appreciation to all who helped to make it such a happy evening.

A bazaar may be held in the early autumn but as yet no project is still in the discussion stage.

QUIZZY SPEAKER

Mrs. Gannon introduced the guest speaker for the evening, Scout Master Vanderick, who gave a talk on the Sea Scouts, and their activities. At first the members were surprised to hear that the 12th group is the only Sea Scout unit in Belleville. They are the proud owners of a boat which can accommodate a hold 30 people. A great deal of work has been done on it by the group, but by next year it is hoped to be acquired is a sail. The boys are now busily engaged in money-making projects, and have so far managed to raise one third of the amount required to purchase this canvas.

Mr. Vanderick stated that the boys has progressed favorably with their proficiency badges, but could not qualify for the permanent assistant scouter could be found. Mrs. Fred Gerricks has sole charge of 36 boys. He is grateful to the men who assist him periodically, but a permanent assistant would solve many problems.

Mrs. Hyatt extended a vote of thanks to Scoutmaster Vanderick at the conclusion of his interesting talk.

The remainder of the evening was turned over to the social convener, Mrs. Gannon, who conducted a series of the most humorous games in which the Auxiliary ever participated. The evening came to its peak when something a hapless lady top to get into a pair of stocking, while blindfolded, and wearing oven mitts while trying to keep a straight face. This has to be seen to be appreciated.

The evening was brought to a close with a light lunch served by Mrs. Brooks and Mrs. Thompson.

APPRECIATION EXPRESSED

Appreciation was expressed by Mrs. Thompson for courtesies at her home to the Auxiliary. The next meeting set for March 11 will be held at the home of Mrs. Hyatt, Parkdale Drive.

In the January report of the Parkdale Scouting Activities, it was stated that the Scouts were assembled on the Saturday before Christmas to help Santa Claus. Each Scout should have read Mr. H. Bent.

The Ladies' Auxiliary of the 16th Belleville Cubs and Scouts' Association held a Valentine coffee party and candy sale at College Hill United Church on February 14th.

The guests were warmly welcomed by the president, Mrs. Reynolds, who was assisted by the treasurer, Mrs. McDonald. Guests were ushered into a beautifully decorated room and were served steaming hot coffee and many varieties of pies and cakes.

Leaders who assisted in the serving were Mrs. Shorey, Mrs. Graham, Mrs. Reeves, Mrs. Parkhill, Mrs. Wilson and Mrs. Fitzgerald.

The guests capably conveyed the candy table which held a bountiful supply of delicious home made sweets.

16th BELLEVILLE SEA SCOUT AUXILIARY

The February meeting of the 16th Belleville Sea Scout Auxiliary was held at Sir Winston Churchill School with a good attendance.

The meeting opened with the Mother's Promise and the Laws were given by the Auxiliary members.

The meeting was devoted to the "Father and Son" banquet which is slated for a Tuesday evening, early in March at 6:15 p.m., to be held at Tabernacle Church.

The ladies, all having their various jobs assigned to them for the forthcoming banquet, all the business at hand for the meeting of the evening, ending a satisfactory evening.

16 BELLEVILLE SCOUT AUXILIARY

With Mrs. R. Rainbird presiding, the monthly meeting of the 2nd Belleville Boy Scout Auxiliary opened with the Mother's Promise. There were 22 members present.

The business followed. Mrs. Rainbird thanked Mrs. O. Grey, as social convener for her efforts in assuring success of the "Coffee Break", and members contributed their time or talents to this very purpose.

Mrs. Alexa Kemp sent a special thanks to all members of the Auxiliary for the gift of the "Blue Mountain" pottery. Flowers sent to her during her illness. Mrs. V. Mason in hopes "Alexa will be up and around again real soon.

The date for the "Father and Son" banquet was set for April. The menu was discussed and decided on.

GAMES

Mrs. G. Fisher was in charge of several games and Mrs. Rogers won in a tie in Kim's Game, when she remembered the number of a certain card. Mrs. R. Dafoe won in a word game, by using how many words could be derived from "Boy Scout". She had 24 words. In a third game, Pig-em guessing we're strewn over tables and Mrs. Dafoe by far assembled. Mesdames H. McMullen, Lowther and E. Green won the prizes.

In the fourth game, pencils and pictures were distributed, the lights were turned out and all ladies asked to draw a picture of a "Cub". It was generally agreed that not many artists were present, as a result of the sketches. However, they brought forth much laughter, due to the funny marks which certainly added to the originality of the drawing. Mrs. T. Cole was chosen as winner of the evening.

SUMPTUOUS REPAST

The executive was in charge of the lunch. Mrs. Rainbird, Mrs. J. Gordon, Mrs. Parson, and Mrs. G. Fisher were in charge of teases for the evening. Mrs. E. Green, who had the longest standing, was asked to cut the colorful cake, decorated in green and yellow, in honor of Lord Baden-Powell's birthday.

Everyone agreed that having a dessert in mid lunch was a most enjoyable evening. Let all remember the more meetings of this calibre.

Medical Auxiliary Sponsors Delightful 'Fashion Fantasy'

Just about this time of year, when winter's icy clutch keeps nodding Mediterranean beaches, it is delightful to dream about those sunny summer climes. On Wednesday night, the Medical Auxiliary of Hastings and Prince Edward Counties did just that, as they basked in a magic, make dreams come true fashion show with the delightful "Fantasy in Fashions," which magically turned the Collegiate stage into the deck of a luxurious ship, complete with rail, chairs, flying pennants and deck chairs.

The "Captain," commentator was Mrs. Jas. M. Bell, whose skilful commentary and the various costumes created a delightful adjunct to the "Fantasy," which opened with the models, Mesdames R. S. Morgan, A. G. Allen; A. W. Ellis, Jas. M. Bell, Jas. Empringer, J. W. Hartt; J. Stock; A. N. Rose and Miss Karen Bateman completed the "Fantasy" group from Lesile's Shoe Store.

The "Fantasy" also displayed coats, suits and travel dresses in shades from palest neutrals to gay, bright colors which are so popular this spring. The models also showed a few dresses which with the new shingle straw and floral hats, combined to make a most colorful picture.

STRAPLESS-PIECE WASHABLE BODICE

One white dress — piece bodice, of per cent cotton and rayon, with strapless, boned moral, Scotland, an exclusive model, constituted of a short-sleeved pullover, cardigan and skirt, completely washable. A similar creation is also obtainable in pink and mint shades.

"Daytime Playtime," displayed lovely summery cruise casuals for the afternoon and for dinner at the Captain's table. Navy, white, formal and semi-formals. An eminently practical dress, wrinkle free, which could be worn with a white pocket, was of pure silk jersey in Nautical navy, with white deep blue, cognac and white.

Sporty clothes included stretch slacks, with matching ankle tops of vivid vibrant colors and cotton and rayon slacks in the tropical sun. A cardigan dress was of 100 per cent Arnel Surah in a plain dress, a print blue, dragon green and poppy red, worn with a matching shirt of Ming blue. Athens Hotel Openly Displays Near-Priceless Art Collection

By SHIRLEY and BOB SLOANE

Athens, Greece — Perhaps the bravest man in Greece is Dr. Basil Calcanis.

Dr. Calcanis is a hotel man, hardly a hero's role by accepted standards. What distinguishes him is his nerve. He, the King George, which houses a huge and near-priceless collection of art in a gallery on the sixth floor and, of all places, is the guest and public rooms. All of it is unguarded, and the place has the aspect of the Louvre with the key thrown away.

Dr. Calcanis built his hotel before the war and had it occupied by a succession of Italian, German, British and American armies. The smoke didn't clear until a few years ago when Dr. Calcanis continued to realize the long dream of running a true 1st class hotel where the furnishings are in keeping with the surroundings.

There are no synthetics or cheap. The bathroom was paved with Italian marble, since expensively papered bedroom doors hang with brass and the door dripping with crystal chandeliers beneath which chairs covered with 100 guests and carpet early, we spotted a huge, marble silver vase with the crest of Napoleon Bonaparte.

Other decorative symbolics the strides George the Great made since the war. Fifteen years ago Athens was a sleepy town where they fell off the trees. Today it is a whistle-stop metropolis with the rush and dazzling array of glittering people that one would find in any capital. Dr. Calcanis has presided over by cops in white helmets, and its own elite Riviera on the coast where villas and Miami-style hotels are springing up to handle the prospering Athenians can afford.

A COLORFUL ASSORTMENT

Athens also has about the most colorful assortment of street hawkers in the world. Europe, Constitution Square is a large open area, about the size of a ball park, with a vast, sidewalk cafe in a setting that resembles San Francisco's Market Street. It is a favorite congregating ground for tourists. In season on them for peddlers of sponges, chestnuts, color transparencies, shoeshine boys, sellers of cheap lottery tickets, as well as more ambitious diversions offered to men alone after dark.

Except for the age-old ruins rising from the city like massive stone outcroppings, and the Greek architect's ability to make the business streets look like fraternity rows, the analogy to San Francisco ends there. There is the same hyper-clear light on a sunny day, the border of hills with the city's mother suburban streets and hodge-podge of architecture, the same breeze with white accessories, and the Greek's love of flowers. Even the groom's mother, who wore an aqua dress with white sheath with brown accessories.

Readers' Saturday Column

by Mary Moore

Question: We had a small tart back home (England) saying - I believe - ground rice, almond essence, first putting in a little jam before the cake-like mixture, which were very tasty. Would you have a recipe for this? - Jean B.

Answer: I think these may be the tarts to which you are referring.

SATURDAY

Dinner Menu

Baked Ham Slice; English Mustard; Baked Bananas; with Lemon Butter; Broccoli; Mashed Turnip; Tossed Greens; Garlic Dressing Chocolate Parfait with Mint Syrup; Tea.

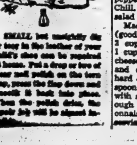
ALMOND TARTS

1¼ cups half and half milk and cream; ¼ cup icing sugar; 2 tablespoons rice flour or ground rice; 2 tablespoons fresh soft butter; 3 eggs; ½ teaspoon almond flavoring raspberry jam.

Mix together the soft butter, sugar and rice flour and beat in eggs. Add remaining ingredients except jam. Line tart tins with tender (or puff) pastry and put 1 teaspoon raspberry jam in each. Spoon in enough of the filling to fill 2/3 full. Bake at 425 deg. Fahr. about 10-12 minutes. Time depends on size of tarts.

Question: My husband and I have taken up golf. I am a diabetic. I was served omelette when I was in hospital, which is so high and nice so I asked how to make it. I was told to beat the egg whites stiff and fold in yolks, well I do and it raises as nice and high but when I take it from the oven down it goes flat. Is it I can have no fried food. I am sure you could tell me what is wrong or point in your cookbook a recipe for omelette - Mrs. R McAf.

Answer: Before I give you the recipe for Baked Omelette I would like to tell you that there are now on the market frying pans treated so that you do not need to add any fat to pan-fry food. You must use a thin wooden spatula, which comes with the pan, so that the pan is never scratched with a metal turner. The pan works very well for those on non-fat diets.



BAKED OMELETTE

This omelette, calls for 4 eggs to serve 2 people as the main protein dish for dinner.

Separate the yolks and whites of 4 eggs. Beat the whites stiff in large bowl, to which add ½ teaspoon salt and beat until stiff. Without washing beater transfer it to the yolks and beat them until thick and pale. Add ¼ cup water or milk (cream is rich) and 1 teaspoon liquid to each egg) and stir in, then fold into whites until incorporated. Preheat a pottery or glass baking dish which has been barely coated with oil (if so allowed by diet) until very hot. Pour prepared omelette in and bake at 425 deg. Fahr. until well puffed and dry on top - then reduce heat to 350 deg. Fahr. and bake 10 minutes longer - about 30 minutes in all. Serve from baking dish or cut across centre and fold over before turning out on hot platter.

NOTE: If you are allowed skim milk cheese it makes a lovely addition or variation to the above omelette. Add ¼ to ½ cup grated skim milk cheese when you add the liquid and sprinkle more over top.

Mother's Helper

A SMALL but unsightly dip or tear in the leather of your child's shoes can be repaired at home. Put a drop or two of clear nail polish on the torn place, press the flap down and smooth it into place. When the polish dries, the repair job will be almost invisible.

"CATHY, BOUQUET: A COLLECTOR"—A. W. Bahr

"Flicker add to the house, virtues to the rose"—Ol Chinese saying.

Here chance. That's all it was

We refer to a day during World War II, when we went to the McGill University Library, in Montreal, for a book, to find an exhibition being shown of botanical drawings from all over the world.

This chance visit opened a door on a new horizon: Old Cathay and its gifts to the world at large: painting, jade, silk, lacquer, floral writing, wisdom tea — as an assorted bouquet. For it was our good fortune to meet and chat with the exhibitor the late A. W. Bahr. A man, at that time, in his late sixties, who declared:

"Exhibitions are a boon to mankind."

"But why?" we asked.

"Exhibitions are a boon to mankind, because they reveal the best of human endeavor."

"How did you happen to become a collector?"

"It just sort of grew, but once you become a collector always a collector. It just sort of gets you. If anyone should ask me for a recipe for 'keeping young' in spirit, I recommend a hobby. You've just time to think about anything else, let alone yourself."

We were entirely unaware that Mr. Bahr was world famous as a collector, when interests had won him friendship in Paris, that late Queen Mary was a very close friend and famous men alike, such as his friend Mr. Chinese painting and jade collections, and W.

His interest was endless however. Part of his W.S.I. month in his own home, was filled with collections of snuff-boxes, papier-mache cigar and tea caddies, the rage a century ago, when cigars were called segars, been-and-stained-glass, early American paintings, iron 'cut-outs', wine-bottle heads, birds of birdlore: "I've five Volumes on hummning birds, of which there are about 300 species of varieties alone.

Our collections of Chinese bank-notes, the first ever printed, and on soft velvet paper, the second being lined with priceless brocades Small groups of feather-work fight wooden panels with white like perforations, which the Chinese people use to tie caged pidgeon's tails, to make flight musical.

Yet, when Mr. Bahr was asked which of all his possessions he prized the most, he replied a) his parting gift from a friend of many years standing It is a gold-pencil-sketch of a painting which is written the unusual "With esteem of friendship, Augustus John."

Though secondary to our theme, we were reminded of this again, just recently, upon hearing of the death of Augustus John and quote in part an a commentary in The New York Times, Nov. 3, 1961.: "Augustus John died last Tuesday at his home in Fordingbridge, Hampshire (Eng.) He was 83 years old, but he came carried with it the first shock that comes with the unexpected death of a young man in mid-career.

"He dominishes the energy of some paintings as new schools and shifting standards passed them by. Nevertheless, Augustus John's have been impressive figures in a changing fiece. His personal legend also has flair for elegant-bohemianism and wit remained undiminished throughout his life and needed superlatives when that he is dead.

"He will be gone this same immortality to the people who were fortunate enough to be with him . . . he became a tality not of remembrance through word, but of personal vigor."

Believe-quotes: "We were out outside Zero Beach Thursday morning and saw the great gold sun and vapor trail left by Col. Glenn.

The traffic around Cocoa was so heavy so many people had come down to see.

It really is quite wonderful and he is such a modest man . . . " a Belleville friend writes in part, who with her husband is vacationing at Key Biscayne, Miami, Florida. Farfull of a life, surely, to have witnessed such a history-making sight!

SPEAKING of MANNERS

A READER WRITES

Question: My daughter is nineteen, and received her engagement ring at Christmas. Since I now must plan a wedding, would you list in your column the steps that she should be taken in preparation? Do the bride's parents pay all the expenses? — Mrs. J.E.R., Pottstown, Pa.

Answer: The first step in planning a wedding is to set the date. If you're planning a church ceremony, the clergyman should be consulted and a specific day and time reserved.

Next, you should plan your budget. How many guests will be present? Should the reception be held in your home or at a hotel? Will it be a luncheon or dinner, or will it be a small informal gathering, a party? These are some of the problems that should be settled immediately.

If you plan to have the reception at home, then you should get estimates from several catering firms before making a decision. Before the reception, the banquet manager can give you a blanket price per person, depending on you expect and the kind of service you desire. If you'll be dancing, he also can suggest an orchestra and quote you a fee.

The bride's mother should be consulted about the guest list, and the number of you can afford to invite. Also, such as canopy and carpeting. You might want to include these in your budget, too.

Your daughter should choose her attendants as soon as the date and the type of ceremony and reception are decided upon. A bridal consultant is a marvelous help in planning gowns and color schemes. You should order your outfit at the same time, so it can be coordinated in color and design with those of the bride and her attendants.

Invitations and announcements should be ordered about six weeks in advance of the ceremony. Engraved ones can be sent out three or four weeks ahead of time. Announcements are mailed on the day of the wedding. Envelopes for both may be addressed from the printer on the day you order the invitations, or they can be addressed early.

Flowers for the church and reception should be ordered as soon as a general color scheme has been worked out. A reputable florist should be sought out, preferably one who has served in the community. If you tell him what your budget is, he can suggest arrangements that will fit the bill.

Depending on local custom, either the bride's family or the groom pays for the bridesmaids' bouquets. This is something you have to investigate delicately.

Naturally, though, the groom pays for the bride's bouquet and corsage, boutonnieres for all the attendants and both fathers and corsages for both mothers. He also takes care of the clergyman's fee.

The bride's parents pay for the invitations and announcements, wedding pictures, a) course, the clergyman's fee), floral decorations and music for both church and reception, and the full cost of the reception.

News About Toppers

By TRACY ADRIAN

Something new in spring coats is this model that is light in weight and tailored with a classic collar, three-button closing and flap pockets.

The coat is particularly in the fabric, which is a richly-colored batik-type printed cotton that has been laminated to retain warmth, prevent wrinkling and sagging and to hold its shape. A water-repellent treatment also gives the coat protection against rain.

So, though the coat is as light as a dress, it is sturdy enough to stand up well even on nippy spring days.

THE FAMILY COUNCIL

Sadie G. — He's a gambling fool. We're always in debt.

Nathan G. — I can't help myself, dad, when I win she doesn't kick.

Sadie G. — We have been married nine years and have a 9-year-old daughter. I've spent precious little time with my child because I've had to go out to work at anything I could get to pull us out of the emergencies. Nat gets us into. You wouldn't think the wife of a man making $200 a week has a money problem. Well she does. If her husband is a compulsive gambler like mine.

To make things worse, his mother bawls me out for nagging him about money. She doesn't understand why I take jobs. That's because he only asks her if his winnings. He never works hard. You're not starving. Let him enjoy himself," she says.

The sad part is that he does work hard. He's had two or three jobs. But the horses get the best of him. I'm afraid that he won just made him bet more than ever. If he doesn't quit gambling, I'm leave or kill him.

Nathan G. — Gambling is an automatic habit with me. It's in my blood. If I see two pigeons headed in the same road, I'll lay odd, on which one will get there first!

Of course, it's cost me some heavy losses, but I chalk them up to learning. I've got a little little tricks, the systems. Things will get better. My past experience should help me. Every time I smiles last year when a wild shot put I made a good end. I'll paid for a nice summer vacation for all of us, including my mother.

To me, it's all good honest money. When I play poker, I try to make an extra dollar here and there, to make my earnings go further. I've got a good card game going on. It's like a club. Each week it up, and for bookies, I smell them a mile off.

Sadie, should be patient. I'm on my way to the winning combination. I'm sure. I'll give back the profits to salt away, and end her worry. . .

The Council: As with the additional cases mentioned, Nathan is lost unless he wants to or forced to want) deliverance. Once that desire is there, he turned to gambling as a means of realizing money problems. Beside himself, he may be willing to consider help. Now to find a sympathetic, especially since this one is so inevitably a dead end.

Innocent risk-taking is all right, as when a man bets his best mount that the 3:30 will be run minutes late. But succumbing to th temptation to make a profit on the horses is the symptom of a personality defect. Only those who have such strong inactivation? What great miseries assail him, the fear, the anxiety, the expensive escape.

Authorities have written learned tracts on the impossibility of beating the game, the infinitely small chance a gambler has with the law of probability. But the gambler realizes who really wins out overpeople like him — the loan concessions, the bookies, the croupiers and the gambling-joints.

Most of the poor suckers who gamble with money they have a right to spend have big holes in their shoes while they struggle to pay on car time payments, barg y, celebrate through Sadie's loyal soul, Nat has avoided the first. Listening to Sadie's warning, he was clear clear of the second.

The next word to Nat, then, is quit. Take our further word for it, you can't win. Most important, track down the source of this fever which is debilitating you. To succeed, you may need a few exploratory talks with a guidance counselor.

There's one other recourse, hailed and approved by mental health authorities, called Gamblers Anonymous. Founded in 1957 in Los Angeles, there are now 25 groups in 19 cities, comprising 3000 members.

Your Car

Thorough Check Your Best Bet For Safety

By EUGENE B. MILMOE

Anytime you safety check your own car, the brakes, steering system and all lights are unquestionably the top tric on your list. But, don't let it end there. Good glass all around is most important, particularly the windshield area. If it's etched or scored, clean it off or faulty wiper blades, you may be driving a potential hazard, especially at night or when rain or snow smear and streak it badly.

And, of course, wet weather driving is also the moment of truth for wiper blades. Unfortunately, the driver with defective blades thinks like mad the homeowner with a leaky roof—out of sight, out of mind—and work on it, and on a sunny day. It's as good as any man's roof.

Oh yes, don't forget that in the car horn, a safety device which deserves full attention. You never realize how vital this little warning system is until you have to use it—and it won't work.

H.T. writes: "How can engine overheating be caused by too little fluid in the automatic transmission?"

(A) Low fluid will cause transmission slippage, giving an abnormal burden on the engine.

From D.O.: "When adjusting the carburetor idle mixture, what way is the screw turned to lean the mixture a little?"

(A) Turn the screw clockwise to get a leaner fuel mixture — but let a serviceman do it because there's more to the job than knowing which direction to turn.

W.G. asks: "My dealer found that my tire pressure was too low and the front wheels were out of alignment. He says I should get much better gas mileage now that everything has been corrected. Will I?"

(A) Let's put it this way. Underinflated tires plus front end misalignment can penalize you between two and four miles per gallon.

S.I. writes: "When I first start out these mornings, the automatic transmission lever will not seem to be shifting correctly and the car — 1960 — lumbers along like a worn-out heap. After several miles, though, everything seems right again. Is it the cold weather?"

(A) Yes — a cold transmission and cold engine need a little time to get perking.

Ask Henry

Henry welcomes letters from readers, and awards each week a best-selling book for the most interesting letter he receives. This week's winner is Mrs. M. Katsung of Owensboro, Minn., who receives a copy of "How Life Goes On," published by Prentice Hall, Inc.

Dear Henry—What is a noble duty? My son told me that he wouldn't mind doing his duties, if they were noble duties! What does that mean?—MOTHER OF A LAZY NOBLE.

Dear Noble's Mother—A noble duty is a duty that has responsibility and some sort of sacrifice. You could let your son do a grown child collect money for some good cause like to help orphan kids or sick and poor kids.

Or he can do something for the community, or church he belongs to. A noble duty is to give something away without getting anything back. Once your boy gets used to this he may also help around the house.—HENRY.

Dear Henry—I am 13 and have a problem. I'm always getting into fights. But I always get blamed for it. What can I do?—FRAMED.

I get the picture:

You are framed.
And you get blamed.
For things you didn't do.
You are a boy,
That's not true;
You make brother mad,
So he makes you sad.
Then, there were bees and brands you.
B.B.B.—Big Boy Bad.

The moral is: Parents aren't as stupid as you think. You wouldn't have to cut for nothing.—HENRY.

Dear Henry—My name is Danny and I have a brother named Michael and he does WRONG things. What should I do?—D. M. S.

Dear D. M. S.—Don't worry about your brother doing wrong things. Just make sure you do the RIGHT things.—HENRY.

Dear Henry—Can you give me some advice how to win my boy friend back. I like him very much, but he seems to be more interested in my girl friends than in me. Should I go out with some other fellows to make him jealous?

My girl friend lost her boy friend when I lost mine, but her boy friend came back.—LOST.

Dear Lost—Don't try to make your boy friend jealous. That would just make it tougher for him to come back to you. Don't go with any other boy for a month. When in your self-interest you will come back to him of your own accord. Interesting letters which I think will be published and I will comment on them.—HENRY.

What Did You Do Last Week?

By ROBERT RICE

OTTAWA (CP)—What did you do mostly last week?

Your answer is called once a month in about 33,000 house-holds across Canada — in big cities, small towns and in rural areas.

For every person 14 years and older in each of those households, an answer is given to DBS.

Whether they worked, looked for work, had a job but were not at work, were permanently unable to work, kept house, went to school, were retired or voluntarily idle, or did something else.

The answers end up in Ottawa as cold but meaningful statistics that tell how many employment and unemployment is going up or down.

These questions and the answers are, in essence, how the monthly labor force report is tabulated by the Dominion Bureau of Statistics.

SAMPLES NATION

Rather than ask the 12,123,000 or so people who are 14 years old or older in Canada whether they worked or not, the bureau samples the nation, designing its survey to produce a small-scale replica of the entire population.

The survey is set up so that everyone in the adult population has a specific known chance of being included in the sample. The average chance is about one in 100.

The sample is a miniature statistical model of all Canada—covering big and small families, poor and rich people, city-dwellers, farmers and so on.

To achieve this, the inhabited area of Canada is divided into districts, which are divided into smaller sections, which are divided into even smaller segments. In a city, an average segment is about a block in size.

By a process of impartial selection, certain segments across Canada are designated for sampling. This process is designed to distribute segments with widely varying characteristics across the country typical of the whole population. It is based on scientific principles of random selection.

PICK DWELLINGS

Certain dwellings in the various segments are picked for inclusion in the monthly survey—again by a process of impartial selection.

The selected households—one could be next door to you—are sent an introductory letter explaining the purpose of the labor force survey. Then an interviewer calls, gives further explanation about the survey and obtains basic information on age, sex and marital status for each household member.

For the next six months, the particular household is one of the 35,000 checked monthly. In each month, about 5,800 new households are added to replace those dropped after being in the survey for six months.

The information, collected on a continuing basis, is tabulated and projected to apply to the whole population. About 30 days or so after the questions were asked, the information is complete and is made public in Ottawa in the monthly labor force report.

BORDER PACT

The pact that established the boundary between Canada and the United States was the Rush, Bagot treaty of 1817.

Successful Living

(A Canadian Social Worker, Helps with Human Problems)

Boy Friend Is Getting Bald

DEAR DORIS:—I am 24 and going with a man ten years older. Is ten years too great a difference in age?

He is getting bald and wears glasses. He has a pretty good job and drives a car. I think he is getting a little forgetful. One night he forgot where he parked his car.

He is good company but I am wondering if I could marry a man who is so much older than myself.—WONDERING.

DORIS CLARK

DEAR WONDERING: — It's not that bad. Lots of people start getting bald and wear glasses before they are thirty. Better marry him and help him keep his car located.

DEAR DORIS:—My daughter-in-law swears something terrible and has a vile temper. Last week she kicked the little boy on the head and threw the little girl on the floor.

The neighbor up the road about four acres away can hear her swearing at the top of her voice at the children. She takes anything she has in her hand and lets them have it.

Six months ago my son was going to leave her for another woman, but she begged us to try and get him back. My husband and I prayed he would return and prayed to say the right words.

He came back and everything was different for a time. Now she is back like she was, swearing, beating and throwing things.

Would I tell her if anything happens again she will have to fight it out herself, alone? But we are afraid, too, of what she might do.—MOTHER OF FIVE.

DEAR MOTHER:—When she was little, she screamed and yelled for what she wanted, and got it. This pattern stuck.

Since she is still like an undisciplined child, she will never grow up unless someone undertakes to control her, whatever this may involve. Her husband must be the boss—for the sake of his home.

If this make-up makes this impossible, the child care agency should be consulted. You could call on them first. The telephone it is the Children's Aid Society, 68 West Moira Street.

DEAR DORIS:—I have a puzzle for you, not a problem. My father's brother's wife was known to me as Aunt Mary. The brother died, and Mary has remarried again, to a stranger to me.

Now, is Mary or her new husband any relation to me?—JUST ME.

DEAR ME:—No. Never was, except by marriage. Now even that link is gone.

• • •

TO SANDRA—You are right not to "take the food off the table" to have luxuries. Malnutrition could follow unemployment, where there is unwise scrimping of food. "Canada's Food Rules," available from the Department of National Health and Welfare, Ottawa, is a useful guide about this.

DEAR DORIS:—I thoroughly agree with you that 13-year-olds should not be dating.

Parents and adults who read the column should follow the advise given, then there wouldn't be so many girls and boys in trouble.

I've followed the advice my parents give me, and found it help a great deal.—SIXTEEN.

DEAR SIXTEEN:—My congratulations to your parents. They have made you feel you are receiving advice rather than obeying orders (which leaves you some discretion in the matter).

The advice I give is intended to help people in thinking through their dilemmas to an answer which is right for them. There is no black and white in human relations. But some understanding of ourselves and others helps.

DORIS CLARK

DEAR DORIS:—My husband is an invalid and I am raising my two girls on the government allowance.

In a few years I'll be required to support my girls and myself. What work would be the most remunerative? I have grade 13 education and a total of about three years' experience as a clerk in the Civil Service during World War Two.—WILLING TO WORK.

DEAR WILLING:—Orchids to you for looking ahead. You can't beat a going concern.

Grade 13 is nice basic equipment. Fortify yourself with a business course—by easy stages—and help reduce the shortage of stenographers.

If you'd like a little counselling to be sure where your best strength lies and what the market offers where you are, talk to the girls at your local National Employment Service.

(Doris can help you take another look at what's bothering you. Write to her in care of this paper, enclosing a stamped, self-addressed envelope.)

Melrose

MELROSE — Mrs. John Asmussen and baby Susan, of Denmark, are visiting with the home of her mother, Mrs. Arthur English, for a few days this weekend with Mr. and Mrs. Fred English, Bannerville.

Mrs. Roy Baldwin and Mrs. Ken MacKechnie, with Mrs. John Kimmett of Roslin, attended the 45th anniversary of the founding of the Women's Institute, in Toronto, on February 19th. This was a pleasant experience for them and they gave highlights of the day's program at the monthly meeting of Melrose W.I., held at the home of Mrs. Vincent Pascoe on the evening of the 22nd.

The ladies who recently attended the hat-making course sponsored by the W.I. were pleased to display their hats at the regular W.I. meeting last Thursday night. Favorable comments were heard regarding the success of the project.

The Club girls too, were pleased to show what they had accomplished in their course on bedroom Accessories, with Miss Beryl Scrutby as commentator.

Leaders Mrs. Don McLaren and Mrs. Greig, attended the school for Leaders, held last week, and are prepared to direct the girls in the next course on "Fruits."

Congratulations are extended to the newlyweds, Mr. and Mrs. Joseph Forestell (nee Patricia Doyle), who were married here to support a sturdy top growth. Coleus, begonia and impatiens root very quickly.

The old geranium plants can be cut back to six or eight inches, repotted and fed. Put in a warm south window and they will be ready for bedding in May with a fine new compact top. They do not need much heat but they do need light.

Garden Notes

Take Geranium Cuttings Now

By FLORA M. RAVILLE

Have you taken cuttings from those geraniums you bought in last fall? This is a good time to do it. You can also take cuttings from coleus, fibrerous rooted begonias and impatiens, plants.

Try rooting them in sponge peat moss or fill the pots three-fourths full of this mix: one part sand, one part sterile soil and two parts moss. You can add one part of perlite or vermiperlite for the medium. It also helps to dip the cuttings in rooting hormone powder.

Make the cuttings four or five inches long taken just below a node (leaf joint). Cut off a leaf or two to give you an inch and a half of stock to be buried. Leave the cuttings for an hour to allow the cut surface to dry off.

Dip in rooting powder, shake off excess powder and plant. A six inch pot will take four to six cuttings. Firm the soil around the stems, see that the soil is moist and cover with a plastic bag. This helps to keep in the temperature even and the air humid. Set in a bright, not too warm, moisture and light to begin growth.

Geraniums take three weeks or more to start to make roots but begonias, being slower to root, require enough feeder roots to support a sturdy top growth. Coleus, begonias and impatiens root very quickly.

The old geranium plants can be cut back to six or eight inches, repotted and fed. Put in a warm south window and they will be ready for bedding in May with a fine new compact top. They do not need much heat but they do need light.

Hate-Ravaged Capital Of Algeria 'Ugliest' City In World Says Announcer

By ALAN HARVEY
Canadian Press Staff Writer

"This is the ugliest city in the world."

Announcer Alan Whicker was talking on British television about Algiers, the hate - ravaged capital of Algeria.

His comments reflect growing revulsion at the sickening and senseless terror in France's North African colony. Another commentator, Brian Inglis, spoke almost wearily of "this horror."

Everything now is in suspense. After 23 years of non-stop fighting in Europe, Indochina and Algeria, France stands palpitating on the verge of a peace that millions of Moslems await with incredible self-control, peace that seems almost sure to come, finally, within the next few days or weeks.

NERVES STRAINED

The last days of waiting are hard on the nerves. Even as the final details of agreement are prepared, diehard supporters of a doomed "French Algeria" seek desperately to delay or frustrate the accord by indiscriminate killing of any Arab-in sight, man, woman or child.

Published reports describe the improvised shooting of harmless Arab flower - sellers on the main street of Algiers.

Time bombs exploding in Oran kill at least 30 persons. Correspondent Clare Hollingworth reports in The Manchester Guardian that the "torn remains of men, women and children litter the pavement in a lake of blood."

It is hard to see what the OAS — Secret Army Organization—hopes to gain by piling horror on horror. It appears to have no future. Recent mass demonstrations in Paris showed that it can have little to expect from France.

In Algeria, its capacity for spoiling confusion and terror remains great but it can hardly hope for victory over the Arab men who have already endured seven years of war for their goal of independence.

Much depends on the French army. Though it seems unlikely that any large groups will rally to the cause of ex-General Raoul Salan, circumstances could arise in which the army's loyalty to French President de Gaulle would be sorely tried.

The OAS, for instance, is believed to hold large stocks of stolen French army uniforms. By adopting one of these they might succeed in provoking Moslems against the "army."

Premier Michel Debre, who has sometimes seemed half-hearted in action against the OAS, has ordered the army to get tougher with it. So far, however, French troops seem more adept at coping with Moslems than with the OAS.

Salan and his supporters stand condemned by world opinion. In a typical comment, The Edinburgh Scotsman says the human community must feel shame at their actions.

"Unless France performs a cleansing operation and brings these killers to justice, she will forfeit the respect of other nations, as Germany once did for similar reasons."

Czechs Won't Play In World Tourney

Did Not Seek Team Visas

WASHINGTON (CP) — The world ice hockey championships will be held in their familiar state, not Canadian today.

The big question? Will the Communist country's representative?

The question was believed partially answered Friday when it was reported here that Czechoslovakia's national team, which once threatened to boycott the championships opening in Colorado Springs, Colo., next week, had applied for travel visas to come to the United States.

The U.S. state department said the visas would be granted soon. Tournament officials were hopeful that Russia, Rumania and Yugoslavia would also reconsider their decision to withdraw from the championships.

The four Communist countries pulled out of the tournament, to run from March 7 to 18, because of the refusal of Allied travel commission in Berlin to issue permits for the East German team to travel to the West.

DENIES WILL ATTEND

A few hours after tournament officials voiced their optimism, the official Czech news agency Ceteka denied that the Czech team would attend the championships.

The agency said Czechoslovakia has only requested visas for Czech delegates planning to take in the international Ice Hockey Federation congress to be held in Colorado Springs.

The denial came in a message sent to Ceteka by the Associated Press in Frankfurt, Germany.

State department officials were not immediately available for comment on the latest development.

The Allied travel office in Berlin has refused to issue travel permits to official East German delegations as long as private citizens are not allowed to leave East Germany.

ELATED—FOR A TIME

Thayer Tutt, chairman of the tournament organizing committee, was elated over the Washington report Friday.

"There's a definite possibility that Russians will come," he said, "in view of the Czechoslovakian change of mind. It's out of breaks the ice."

In—1961 the Czechs finished second to Canada, winner of the championship.

After the Communist withdrawal, organizers drew up a new schedule which put Canada, the U.S., Britain, West Germany, Finland, Norway and Sweden in Group A. Austria and Switzerland will play off for the eighth spot in the event. Teams in Group B are Holland, Japan, Denmark, Australia and France.

Blues Play Crucial Series

Harvey Injury May Hurt Rangers

By THE CANADIAN PRESS

New York Rangers, battling for the National Hockey League playoff berth, kicked off spot, may get little ice help from playing-coach Doug Harvey during their next couple of games.

Harvey expects to be in the lineup when the Rangers face the Maple Leafs at Toronto tonight and open a crucial home-and-home series against Detroit Red Wings, the team they must beat to make the playoffs, at New York Sunday night.

But he may play only part time or not at all, depending on the condition of his injured left wrist.

Harvey hurt the wrist while stopping a shot during the first period of Wednesday night's 3-3 tie between Rangers and Boston Bruins.

He made only one appearance after the ice fracas and left that game and Friday wasn't able to handle his stick properly or with force during practice.

The Rangers now lead the Red Wings by four points, 55 to 51, but they have played three more games. After the Sunday night meeting in New York, the team will travel to Detroit for a Tuesday night contest.

The Red Wings play the league - leading Canadiens at Montreal tonight's only other game. Elsewhere Sunday night, Toronto will be at Boston and Montreal at Chicago.

Harvey, meanwhile, confirmed reports he may quit as player - coach after coming to the Rangers as a trade with Montreal last summer.

"The Rangers knew I might decide to quit playing after one season when they hired me," he said.

NOT HOMESICK

"I haven't decided one way or another yet. But I want something understood. If I quit it won't be because I'm homesick."

Harvey 37, signed a three-year contract after coming to the Rangers as a trade with Montreal last summer.

During the last 10 years of his 14-season career with Canadiens, he was named to the NHL's first all-star team five times and won the James Norris Memorial Trophy as the league's top defenceman five times. He could wind up with both awards again this season.

The Canadiens holding a comfortable 26-point lead over second-place Toronto, will likely be without defenceman Lou Fontinato and centre Jean Beliveau for their weekend games.

Both players practised with the Canadiens Friday, but were unable to operate at full speed under the strain of their injuries.

'Tommy McNevin Memorial Trophy'

Donated by two prominent citizens the handsome trophy will be presented to its first winner by Floorball Wilson with the Police-Firemen's hockey game Tuesday night. It is awarded to the "Squirt" player judged tops in hockey, education and music appreciation.

Breaks Own Game Record

'Stilt' Pots 100 Points

HERSHEY, Pa. (AP) — The amazing Wilt (The Stilt) Chamberlain potted 100 points for Philadelphia Warriors Friday night to smash his own one-game record in the National Basketball Association. He set the old mark of 78 earlier this year.

Chamberlain's astonishing performance came as the Warriors defeated New York Tickerbockers 169-147.

The 316 points scored in the game by the standout is a big night just made, for rewriting the record columns. The previous high was 312 scored by Boston (173) and Minneapolis (139).

When Chamberlain scored the 78 earlier this year, in a triple overtime game with Los Angeles, coach Frank McGuire predicted that "some day he will hit 100."

Chamberlain came within one up to the prophecy as he scored 36 field goals and 36 of 32 foul shots. Both records were also 31 points in the final quarter and 59 points in the first half. The 36 goals were made on 63 tries.

BY GREATEST

"I wasn't even thinking of hitting a 100, but after putting in 31 points in the third quarter, I was thinking about a foul - shooting record," he said. "It was my greatest game."

Chamberlain scored again and again on his favorite shot as the crowd of 4,124 shrieked: "Give it to Wilt, give it to Wilt." His teammates, complied.

"The team made 68 the difference," Wilt said. "It would have been impossible to score this many if they hadn't kept feeding me."

Canadian Leads P.R. Golf

SAN JUAN, Puerto Rico (AP) — Peter Hildrop, a 24-year-old Canadian who has never won a major professional golf tournament, blasted into a two-stroke lead Friday in the $10,000 Puerto Rico Open.

The pro from Mount Hope, Ont., carded strokes off the pace going into Friday's second round and rushed into the lead with a solid, four-under-par 67 over the par-36 course. It gave him a total of 136 at the halfway mark.

Frank Whibley of Kitchener, Ont., recorded the first hole in one in the nine-year history of the tournament and finished the round with a 70. He's still far back with a 146 for the two rounds. Whibley got his ace on the 140-yard seventh hole.

Of the three Hockey leaders, only Don Whitt of Morrer Springs, Calif., stayed in con tention. He had a 74 Friday to go with Thursday's 67 for 141 and a share of third place.

Henry Williams of Fleetwood, Pa., shot a 69 to go with Thursday's par round for 142 and second place.

Kingston Nips Macs 6-5

By GARRY ALEXANDER
Staff Writer

The Kingston Junior Frontenacs who signed a first period lead, scored a goal at 14.20 of the third period here last night to give them a 6-5 win over the Belleville Macs.

Kingston's victory let the round-robin series as tight as possible. The Frenchmen have won two and lost one, Belleville has a two-and-one record and Peterborough has one win and two setbacks. The series will end when Kingston visits Peterborough Monday night.

A Kingston victory Monday will pit the Fronts and Macs against each other in the group finals while a Peterborough win will leave all three teams with equal won-lost records. In this case the team with the greatest goal average will be eliminated.

A big factor was when the Frontenacs commanded plays completely. They built up a 4-1 lead, proved the Macs' downfall. They battled back to tie it 4-4 with 2:45 of the second, fell behind again 5-4 by the period's end, tied it 5-5 early in the third, only to drop the tight 6-5 decision.

Chuck Convery, a two-goal man for Kingston, scored the winning goal when he took Gary Lavallee's pass in front of the side of the Mac net and lifted a high, backhander past Gord Parker.

Belleville went all out over the remainder of the game, hitting Parker in favor of a sixth attacker at 19.35, but could not get the equalizer against the Fronts' Kurt Demmler and his teammates.

Kingston outshot the Macs 16-10 in the first period and 38-26 overall but it was anybody's game after the Macs came out flying in the second period.

Back in the first, Rawson slipped home Chabman's rebound at 5.49 and Pete Weston tied it 1-1 with a high 30-footer at 11.30. Convery connected on a backhander at 12.54 and Bryant scored Kingston's third goal at 14.55. Middleton completed a beautiful passing play with Curran to make it 4-1 at 16.30.

The Macs, looked like a different team in the second period, opened. Sparked by the Ethridge-McGuire-Hall line, they buzzed Demmler hard and often. Either drilled home Hull's rebound at 1.48 and later Hendry edemDerlmewoz20 1 ty forced Demmler into two fine saves with low hard drives from the point.

Bucky Ethier cut the lead to 4.3 at 8.40, wedging the disc between 's post and the goalie from close in. Thirty-one seconds later Bob Boyle tied it 4-4 by smartly bring the house down.

With the Macs one man short at 18.06, Curran chopped the puck past Parlor for Kingston's 5-4 lead. Ethridge flipped it 5-5 at 7.58 of the third.

Kingston drew four of the seven minor penalties dished out by referees Vern Goyer and Tim Williams in a well-handled game.

Kingston: Demmler, Bryant, Hull, Long, Rawson, Curran, Convery, Cashman, Brown, Middleton, Robertson, Lavallee, Ball, Rawson.

Referees — Vern Goyer and Tim Williams, Belleville.

Whip Petes, Flyers Win

Royals' Finish Fifth

By THE CANADIAN PRESS

Duke Harris, winner of the Ron Plumb Trophy as Guelph's most valuable player, scored three goals to help his Royals to a 4-6 win against the last-place Peterborough Petes in the Ontario Hockey Association Junior A series Friday night.

In other action Friday night Niagara Falls earned a playoff berth with a 9-3 win over St. Catharines' third-place Teepees.

Newsie Bietzich potted three goals for the fourth-place Flyers, with singles going to Ron Schock, Bill Eaton and Bruce Crisp.

Hamilton will open the playoffs next Tuesday in Montreal against the league champion Montreal Junior Canadiens.

It was Harris's night in the Guelph-Peterborough game, in addition to his three goals he assisted on tallies by Ron Plumb and Don Diberardino. Borden Smith netted the other Guelph goal.

EARLY DEBUT

Paris-born Maurice Chevalier made his debut as a singer in a casino in the suburbs of his hometown at the age of 12.

Says Cleroux Can't Be Dethroned

QUEBEC (CP) — National Commissioner Gene Lelourneau said Friday further the federation can't dethrone Canadian heavyweight champion Bob Cleroux for not defending his title in the last six months.

Lelourneau said a ruling made last year allows a heavyweight champion to go one year without a defence.

He confirmed he has received a letter from Jack (Deacon) Allen, manager of Toronto's George Chuvalo, asking the federation to take away Cleroux's title.

Lelourneau said that if Allen can produce a signed photostat of a contract Cleroux allegedly signed to fight Chuvalo in Toronto for $7,500, Cleroux must go through with the bout or lose the title.

The commissioner said he understands Cleroux is willing to fight Chuvalo in Toronto but his manager, Al Braverman, wants at least $17,000 for the defence.

Cleroux now is under suspension by the National Boxing Association and the Ontario Boxing Federation for not living up to a return-bout contract with Chuvalo.

Favored for Curling Title

KITCHENER (CP) — Saskatchewan Alberta and Ontario are being looked on as the favorites in this southwestern Ontario city prepared for the Canadian curling championship, opening next week.

Eleven rinks — two from Ontario and one each from the other provinces — have entered the five-day round-robin tournament which opens Monday. Entrants will play each of the other rinks once.

The championships may attract record crowds and as early as Friday, hosts in the twin communities of Kitchener-Waterloo were reported crammed with curling fans.

Secord will be trying for Ontario's third title and its first since Kitchener won in 1939.

MAKING SIXTH TRY

Among other competitors is the British Columbia rink skipped by Reg Stone of Trail, who is making a sixth try at the national championship. His second is Frenchy D'Amour, the only ever to pilot a B.C. champion.

Sasky, Alberta, Ontario

The average age of the B.C. rink is 48, which some observers believe may be too old to win over a tough grind of 10 rounds of 12 ends each.

Manitoba has a youthful entry skipped by Norm Houck, 28. Once a top power in the national championships, Manitoba has won only once in the last 10 years. The strongest Manitoba entry in Ontario appears to be the Norm Sevilla foursome skipped by Jack Florian.

Del Cherry, Sportsman, Died Friday

KINGSTON (CP)—Del Cherry, who had two sons playing in the Eastern Professional Hockey League, died Friday in hospital here after illness.

Cherry played baseball and football in the Kingston area during his youth. One of his sons, John, plays defence for Sudbury Wolves and the other, Dick, plays for Kingston Frontenacs.

Patterson Confirms Liston Fight

NEW YORK (AP) — Floyd Patterson has broken his long silence and confirmed what everyone suspected. He intends to defend his world heavyweight boxing championship against Sonny Liston of Philadelphia.

There will be a fight in the summer," Patterson said Friday from his training camp in nearby Highland Mill. "It will be with Liston. It may be tough but I can't say for sure. Maybe in July."

Patterson said five cities are under consideration in the negotiations, which base a turn for the better Friday when Liston said in Philadelphia he would not let money stand in the way of the fight.

The champion listed New York, Philadelphia, Washington, Chicago and Los Angeles. It was reported that New York, probably Yankee Stadium, is most likely.

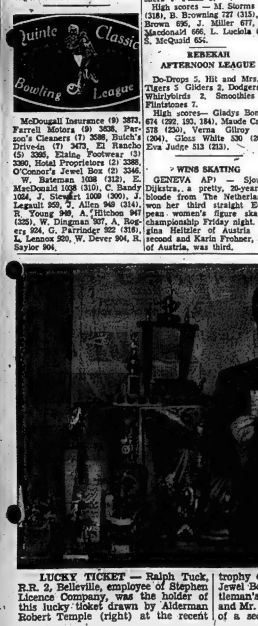
WOULD ACCEPT

Stung by indications that Patterson is ducking him, Liston said he would be agreeable to accepting 12½ per cent of the gate and 10 per cent of the television, movie, etc.) if the National Boxing Association will agree to a reasonable cut for a challenger.

First indications from the NBA were that it would steer clear of making any ruling.

Paul Sullivan, chairman of the NBA's world championship committee, said such action would put the NBA in the unprecedented position of helping to draw up a contract. Sullivan said the NBA's executive committee probably would have to make any final judgment.

Liston and his lawyer, Mort Wilkins, said their thoughts things could be worked out so that con, tracts could be signed by March 13, the deadline Patterson faces from the NBA to sign for a title defence.



Liston and Wilkin said in a statement:

"Let's make our position clear. We are not going to give out with any 'Floyd Patterson.'

"He is the heavyweight champion of the world, and Sonny Liston wants that title! Sonny Liston will fight for it, and Sonny Liston expects to get it in June."

It has been estimated that Liston, if he gets the title, will make between $200,000 and $700,000. Patterson would bet $5 per cent.

Tom Bolan, who will promote the bout for championship Sports Incorporated, has guaranteed Liston $200,000. The most Liston ever earned for a bout was $80,000 for his one - round knockout of Albert Westphal of Germany in January on the same night Patterson knocked out Tom McNeeley in his last title defence.

Power wants to boost last year's .298 above the .300 mark and triple his home run output.

The nearly - always - happy Power, who at 30 has already played the equivalent of 30 baseball seasons, is as exuberant as a colt.

"I kept myself in good shape all winter by doing the twist," Power said. "I also played some basketball with Jimmy Brown (the Cleveland Browns' jarring fullback) and some other guys. Gee whiz, that Brown is tough. . . . Those guys almost killed me."

For the first time in 15 years, Power didn't play winter ball and he's sure this is going to make a big difference in his American League performance.

"Counting summer and winter, I've played 30 baseball seasons," he said. "I figured it was about time for a rest. I got plenty tired toward the end of the season last year. The bat seemed to get heavier and heavier.

"Other years when I came to spring camp, just looking at a ball or bat would make me feel tired. Not this year. I feel good. Very good."

Power hit .312 in 1958; .309 with Kansas City in 1956 and .303 with Kansas City in 1955. Last year he dropped to .298, with only five home runs.

"I know I'm a .300 hitter," he said. "I want to hit .300 again. I would like to hit few more home runs. They pay more for homers."

Archie Rated 9th Heavy

PROVIDENCE, R.I. (AP)— Archie Moore, regarded as a light-heavyweight since he was the world title from Joey Maxim in 1952, has been ranked out of this division and given the ninth spot in the heavyweight class by the National Boxing Association.

The NBA rankings for February-March announced Friday.

"It now is apparent that Archie no longer can make the light - heavyweight scale of 175 pounds and his future activity will be as a heavyweight," said Tony Petronelle, chairman of the ratings committee.

"For this reason, the NBA is dropping him from the light-heavyweight division and rating him ninth in the heavyweight class."

Moore is slated to fight Alejandro Lavarante of Argentina, fourth - ranked heavyweight, in Los Angeles March 20. If he beats Lavarante he undoubtedly will move up in the heavyweight rankings.

Moore has been dethroned as light-heavyweight king by the

Says Squirms Will Aid Hitting

Now Its A 'Power Twist'!

TUCSON, Ariz. (AP) — Vic Power, Cleveland's Puerto Rican infield star, traded winter baseball for the twist and he figures it's going to add 30 or 40 points to his batting average this season.

Power wants to boost last year's .298 above the .300 mark and triple his home run output.

The nearly - always - happy Power, who at 30 has already played the equivalent of 30 baseball seasons, is as exuberant as a colt.

"I kept myself in good shape all winter by doing the twist," Power said. "I also played some basketball with Jimmy Brown (the Cleveland Browns' jarring fullback) and some other guys. Gee whiz, that Brown is tough. . . . Those guys almost killed me."

For the first time in 15 years, Power didn't play winter ball and he's sure this is going to make a big difference in his American League performance.

WANTED REST

"Counting summer and winter, I've played 30 baseball seasons," he said. "I figured it was about time for a rest. I got plenty tired toward the end of the season last year. The bat seemed to get heavier and heavier.

"Other years when I came to spring camp, just looking at a ball or bat would make me feel tired. Not this year. I feel good. Very good."

Power hit .312 in 1958; .309 with Kansas City in 1956 and .303 with Kansas City in 1955. Last year he dropped to .298, with only five home runs.

"I know I'm a .300 hitter," he said. "I want to hit .300 again. I would like to hit few more home runs. They pay more for homers."

Archie Rated 9th Heavy

PROVIDENCE, R.I. (AP)— Archie Moore, regarded as a light-heavyweight since he was the world title from Joey Maxim in 1952, has been ranked out of this division and given the ninth spot in the heavyweight class by the National Boxing Association.

The NBA rankings for February-March announced Friday.

"It now is apparent that Archie no longer can make the light - heavyweight scale of 175 pounds and his future activity will be as a heavyweight," said Tony Petronelle, chairman of the ratings committee.

"For this reason, the NBA is dropping him from the light-heavyweight division and rating him ninth in the heavyweight class."

Moore is slated to fight Alejandro Lavarante of Argentina, fourth - ranked heavyweight, in Los Angeles March 20. If he beats Lavarante he undoubtedly will move up in the heavyweight rankings.

Crothers Stumbles, Finishes Second

Kidd Breezes To Victory

By JOE MacSWEEN

NEW YORK (CP)—Canada's Bruce Kidd, speeding along in his peculiar gait, breezed to an easy victory in the two-mile invitation run at the annual indoor Knights of Columbus athletic meet at Madison Square Garden Friday night.

Kidd, 24-year-old University of Toronto freshman had the crowd in an uproar as he finished in eight minutes, 58.8 seconds, far ahead of Tom O'Riordan of Ireland, in second place at 9:14.4. O'Riordan had defeated him in Boston earlier this season.

"It was relatively slow race," Kidd said later. "I think I could have made better time had I been pushed."

Kidd had overtaken and passed his two other competitors in the race—Joe Rovnor of Fordham University and John Gothaeckt of Baltimore—before even was third in 9:23.3.

The Canadian, who accrues fully deferred his three-mile title at the National Amateur Athletic Union meet in Feb. 24, planned to return to Toronto today and get ready for another contest in Chicago next Friday.

MAY BE TOUGHER

I expect the toughest competition there," said Kidd, who represents the East York Club. "That club might have just picked up another first Friday night except for a stumble that almost threw speedster Bill Crothers off his feet on a turn just after he had the lead in the 600-yard invitation dash.

The Toronto runner got back to pace after a desperate struggle and finished second to Gerry Dowling ahead of Canadian Bill Dowling and Jamaica's Kerr's time was 1:11, Crothers 1:12.8.

"Someone clipped me," Crothers said dejectedly. "I don't know who it was."

TOUCHES HEEL

Kerr said that as he was trying to pass Crothers, Webster and Boreo in and inadvertently touched Crothers' heel.

Crothers, Canadian quartermile and half-mile champ, later came back to anchor an East York team that took third place in a four-man two-mile relay. Fordham was the winner in 7:34 and Ireland second in 7:36.4.

Tom O'Hara, 19-year-old Loyola of Chicago sophomore, easily won the 1,000-yard run in 4:05.6, compared with his run of 4:02.3 a week ago.

The Indians scored their 12th straight victory Friday night at frolic over Pittsburgh Hornet, Friday night while Providence Reds edged Rochester Americans 4-3 in overtime.

Hull Beats Kingston, Beavers Tie

By THE CANADIAN PRESS

By the grace of the third-place Hull-Ottawa Canadiens, Kitchener - Waterloo Beavers still have first place in the Eastern Professional Hockey League all to themselves.

The Canadiens nosed out the Frontenacs 4-3 at Kingston Friday night when Fred Hilts scored with 36 seconds remaining in the game. That, plus the Beavers' 3-3 tie with the Wolves in Sudbury, increased Kitchener - Waterloo's lead over the second-place Frontenacs to two points. The Frontenacs, however, have played two games fewer than the leaders.

Hull - Ottawa, meanwhile, crept to within two points of the Frontenacs and retained its 15-point bulge over the fourth-place Wolves.

Hilts bagged two goals against Kingston during his team's total to 33. The second, his fifth winning goal of the campaign, was scored when Kingston had a man in the penalty box.

Tom Roberts and Billy Carter scored the other goals for the Habs, who were behind 2-1 in the second period. Bobby Atterley, Harry Sinden and Terry Gray were the Kingston snipers.

The Canadiens completely dominated the third period, scoring two goals and outshooting the Frontenacs 13-2. All told, Hull-Ottawa outshot Kingston 38-26.

Vince Edwards As Ben Casey Hottest Thing in Hollywood

By BOB THOMAS

HOLLYWOOD (AP)—Strange place, Hollywood. A guy like Vincent Edwards can hang around for 10 years with scant success, then suddenly become the hottest thing in town.

Edwards always seemed to be one of those actors who would never quite make it. Ben Casey has changed all that.

He's now sitting on top of the world, turning down contracts and publicity he would have jumped at six months ago. The rigors of doing an hour TV series precludes almost everything else.

Brooklyn-born, Edwards was brought to Hollywood to play the athlete in Come Back, Little Sheba. That's when he met head-on the figure that may have "held back his career": Burt Lancaster.

"I was supposed to do the picture when Humphrey Bogart was going to play the male lead," said Edwards, whose acting idol was and is the late Bogart.

IS TOO SIMILAR

"When Burt Lancaster got the role instead, they decided that I was too similar to be in the same picture. So I sat around for two years doing nothing."

After he was dropped by Hal Wallis, Edwards was signed by Columbia. Again he walked up a blind alley.

"I was supposed to do Pickle, but they cast William Holden instead," Edwards recalled. "I did manage to make one sleeper, The Night Holds Terror, but it did nothing for me."

He got to be the king of the sleepers.

He also played secondary roles in such bigger films as Serenade and Three Faces of Eve as well as appearing on most of the TV shows.

Ben Casey finally provided a series of his own. The show is ABC's bit of the season and, along with Dr. Kildare, has spawned 11 possible series about medics for next year.

Take a definite stand . . . firm but polite.

Taurus (Apr. 20 to May 20) Self-expression is of the utmost importance. Tendency is to set others do talking, writing, deciding . . . but you begin to see the trees . . . as well as the forest. Express thoughts . . . feelings . . . ideas!

Gemini (May 21 to June 21) —If one close to you states a fact which is unpleasant . . . accept it for its worth. To do so will it would not be worthy of you. Remember, only real friendships come with truth.

Cancer (June 22 to July 21) Favorable lunar aspect to your sign . . . which today indicates ability to put message across. Excellent for promotion of ideas . . . expressing personality . . . travel and writing.

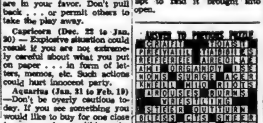
Leo (July 22 to Aug. 21) — Like Aries, don't permit yourself to be so bogged down by "little" jobs that you fail to accomplish major tasks. Don't become engrossed over details . . . don't brood over the past.

Virgo (Aug. 22 to Sept. 23) — Best to be calm. Cycle not at peak . . . and you are tempted to try to push your way. Doors apt to be closed . . . others apt to be late for appointments. Why not wait a while? Be with friends.

Libra (Sept. 23 to Oct. 22— Key word today is service. If you seek favors . . . you will find others have a tendency to be resentful. But if you ask to aid, or be of service . . . the smile will be turned on.

Scorpio (Oct. 23 to Nov. 21) —Two "pulls" today. One force pulls you toward excitement, romance, perhaps foolish action . . . the other makes you yearn for some time to think by yourself. Decide which to follow.

Sagittarius (Nov. 22 to Dec. 21) — Be willing to call hand of anyone today who attempts to "bluff" or bluff. The cards are in your favor. Don't pull back . . . or permit others to take the play away.



Capricorn (Dec. 22 to Jan. 20) — Explosive situation could result if you are not extremely careful about what you put on paper . . . in form of letters, memos, etc. Such actions could hurt innocent party.

Aquarius (Jan. 21 to Feb. 19) — Don't be overly cautious today. If you see something you would like to buy for one close to you . . . do so, within realm of common sense. You can count pennies tomorrow!

Pisces (Feb. 20 to Mar. 20)— Time to trust intuition, launch new projects . . . indications are that you will probably be right. At worst, you won't be too far wrong. Tell experts to follow their own advice.

If today is your birthday . . . you are creative, willing to give of yourself . . . you are sympathetic and you are not happy unless engaged in some form of creative activity. Year could prove outstanding with September highlighted.

General Tendencies: Cycle up for Aquarius, Pisces, Aries. Great lunations following . . . a day when the lid could "blow off" . . . Not particularly good time for trying to put across ideas, schemes which have no practical basis. Those in public eye with something to hide are apt to find it brought into open.

Canadian Content Must Be Raised in Prime Viewing Hours Proposal of BBG

By DON HANRIGHT
Canadian Press Staff Writer

TORONTO (CP) — The Board of Broadcast Governors has proposed that the CBC and private television stations raise the Canadian content in programming for that period between 7 p.m. and 11 p.m. EST.

The BBG would require 45 per-cent Canadian content in programming for that period starting next Oct. 1, and would raise this to 55 per cent on Oct. 1, 1963. It would be the first specific content demand for the period which draws the most viewers.

At present, the BBG requires content is for 45-per-cent Canadian content in the programming of each station every four weeks. The overall quota—which can be attained by broadcasting Canadian shows any time a station chooses—will rise to 55 per cent on April 1.

MEETING RULE

Dr. Andrew Stewart, chairman of the board, said in an interview that the BBG has, at present system, some stations—though not all, by any means—are using the exclusive rule by crowding Canadian shows into unpopular hours and using nearly all their evening broadcasting time for imported American programs.

He indicated that the BBG feels this practice defeats the purpose of the rule, formulated by the regulatory agency in Parliament's 1958 Broadcasting Act requirement that programs be "basically Canadian in content and character."

Friday's proposal still is just that—a proposal. Dr. Stewart said the board feels that eventually there would have to be a specific requirement for the evening hours, and the question is whether this is the time to introduce it.

The proposal will be opened to argument from broadcasters when the BBG's scheduled Winnipeg public hearing starting Tues. day, May 2. Stiff opposition to the proposed regulation appears certain.

ALLOWS EXTRA TIME

Another change would allow extra advertising time on sponsored Canadian programs, while maintaining the existing limits on sponsored and imported shows in the United States.

If a sponsor chose a Canadian program for his television advertising he could get 12 minutes of commercial time. The limit on sponsored American shows would remain at the present level of seven minutes.

Dr. Stewart said the object is to make Canadian TV productions more attractive to advertisers, and presumably the station then could increase the amounts they charge the sponsor. The extra revenue could be used to improve program quality and thus make Canadian TV more programs in the prime TV-viewing hours of 8 p.m. to 11 p.m.

Gordon Keeble, vice-president of CTV, the new private network, said in Toronto Friday night it appears most CTV stations are not carrying 45-per. cent Canadian content in the prime hours.

But he said that with some effort they would be able to do so, and would be helped by the concessions announced Friday.

William Crampton, manager of CFCO-TV, Toronto, CTV affiliate, said the BBG program will not be "unbearable."

He said CFTO-TV now carries 45-per-cent Canadian content in the prime hours, its policy being to alternate Canadian and imported shows during the evening schedule.

Science at Work

By The ASSOCIATED PRESS

Topics this week: The wandering south magnetic pole and Russian and U.S. experts to take the ocean's temperature.

WHERE'S THE POLE?

Word has reached Washington from Antarctica, where a national science foundation communique, that a couple of New Zealand explorers are on a new quest, to pin down the precise position of the south magnetic pole—a constantly shifting area.

And, according to the foundation, there's reason to believe they'll find it has shifted from its last logged location position on the icy continent early in January.

Suspended magnetic needle points straight down as "discovered" in 1909 at a point some 200 miles inland at about 72 degrees south and 155 degrees east.

Since then, it's been moving steadily northwestward toward the Pacific Ocean.

Sliding off into wherebouts of the magnetic pole—not to be confused with either (1) the south geographic pole or (2) the south geomagnetic pole—are all tied in with the earth's magnetism.

FLYING THERMOMETER

Russian scientists say they've developed a technique for using helicopters to study the temperature, salinity and other characteristics of ocean waters in areas now floating ice not readily accessible to surface ships. Hydrological instruments lowered on cables as the helicopter hovers above a selected bird over an area under test.

ATTENTION JOHN GLENN!

Sir Henry says a day is inadequate for most people, says the U.S. Air Force in a report filed with Congress today, but room for only a limited crew, with correspondingly heavy demands on the side-effects of times for individual crew members.

In fact, they say, a spaceman might well work a 16-hour stretch without knocking off for a snooze.

"Sleep periods for spacemen," they conclude generously, "should not be less than two hours at a time."

Canadian Trade With Two Communist Nations Causes Friction Says Communique

By BEN WARD

OTTAWA (CP) — Conflict between Canadian and United States trade policies with China and Cuba was underlined Friday at the end of a two-day conference of the Canada - U.S. interparliamentary group.

Sessions were closed, but a 3,000 - word communique indicated that differences existed, those two Communist nations caused friction between the 25 Canadian senators and MPs and the 16 U.S. senators and representatives.

Today the group was to fly to Montreal for a visit to RCAF Air Defence Command, a reception by Mayor Jean Drapeau and a National Hockey League game.

The joint communique reported agreement on most subjects but "some difference of opinion" on trade with China.

On China, it said the delegations "had a useful discussion on the question of non-strategic trade with Red China Canada has made large sales there.

The Americans noted that the U.S. has shut off all trade except in medical supplies and believed "a similar review and consistent policy of economic sanctions against Cuba by Canada and all Western countries would serve to undermine the Communist threat."

But the Canadians "recalled that Canada has long since terminated any exports to China of strategic goods and is controlling other exports to Cuba and is preventing any re-export of United States goods through Canada."

The conference agreed "that the policies of both Canada and the United States should be developed in the light of each country's long-range plans to contain the Communist threat."

Friendship Growing Between Rome and Protestantism After Centuries of Snubbing

By GEORGE CORNELL
AP Religion Writer

NEW YORK (AP) — In uncounted thousands of Protestant and Roman Catholic homes these days, a candle is lighted each Thursday night.

It is a symbol of mutual longing for the fulfilment of Christ's prayer that "they all may be one."

The candle - lighting custom, started by a Benedictine abbey in Germany and now used widely throughout Europe and spreading in North America, is one of the many signs of a new element at work in Christianity.

Friendship is growing between Rome and Protestantism.

After snubbing each other for centuries, they're resuming brotherly associations.

They're speaking to each other again; they are also listening.

Both sides agree they've made mistakes and they concede they can learn from each other.

Not since the Reformers broke with Rome 450 years ago have there been any regular official liaison between the two wings of Christendom until the new contacts began recently.

NOW GROWING

Now they're multiplying all around including:

Theological consultations, joint biblical and archeological studies, seminary lecture exchanges, research and publications by and about each other, visits, mutual attendance at conferences and other similar intercourse.

Underlying it all is the question: Will Roman Catholics and Protestants ever unite?

Leading Churchmen, in both branches of the faith, think it is possible. Some say it is likely. Some say it is inevitable. Others qualify their answer with "if."

In any case, they say it will be a long difficult process, filled with obstacles that seem humanly insurmountable and to which only God's guidance can provide a solution.

In many quarters, entrenched hostilities remain. Deep theological and organizational chasms have been bridged but not filled.

Yet it is certain because it is God's will," said the Archbishop of Canterbury, Most Rev. Arthur M. Ramsey. He stressed it will take a long time and said the next step must be serious mutual probing of the essential matters of truth and the fundamental problems causing the division.

"It will be a question of establishing always more personal contacts . . . inspired by the greatest honesty and charity," says Augustin Cardinal Bea, head of the recently-established Vatican secretariat on Christian unity.

"Only in this way by slow work can minds be drawn gradually together."

Among the chief differences between Protestants and Roman Catholics is the issue of Church authority — particularly over what is loosely termed "Papal infallibility."

Under this doctrine, Rome maintains that since Christ promised to guide His Church in truth then the Pope cannot err when speaking "ex cathedra"—from the chair—on matters of faith and morals.

USED ONCE

Popes have invoked that authority only once since it was proclaimed in 1870 at a council that was interrupted by war and which never got around to fully amplifying it.

With a second Vatican council scheduled next fall, many observers have noted that the only call a council issues the Pope doesn't stand alone in shaping church teachings and practices.

Although Rome maintains that established doctrine is unchangeable, indications are that there will be clarifications and fresh interpretations that may ease some of the tensions.

The council, said Cardinal Bea, "will not bring us unity of Christianity at once but it we implore the Holy Spirit it may result in showing the way to reward a true unity gradually."

To break the deadlock on church authority, many Protestant leaders think it would be necessary to restore the ancient conciliar system whereby general church gatherings made the decisions.

POPE PRESIDING

Archbishop Ramsey, spiritual leader of the world-wide Anglican Communion, said that if other obstacles could be removed, he would have no objection to such a conciliar system in which the Pope would be the "presiding bishop among equals."

Another problematical question is Rome's claim to being "the one true church." However, this often becomes a matter of semantics, since all Christians, by their choices, consider their own church nearest to being true or else they'd be somewhere else.

Rev. Robert J. Graham, of the National Roman Catholic Weekly, America, suggests the Vatican council may provide a fresh interpretation of this tenet.

Another historic problem involves the interest of saturday.

Protestants teach that man is saved solely by faith in God and His Gracious forgiveness, while Catholics teach that both faith and works are needed.

TERMS DIFFER

Here, too, terminology and usage often magnify the differences. Protestants say that good works are men's natural response to genuine faith in God's loving mercy, thus including that element in their own way.

Rev. Dr. Franklin Clark Fry, president of the United Lutheran Church in America, observed that a key problem was Rome's position that no dogma could be altered, while Protestants stand ready to modify their concepts whenever convinced "out of the Word of God."

"We'll find out by the Vatican Council how serious the Roman Catholic Church really is about Holy Scripture," said Dr. Fry.

Leaders of Protestants could not accept, such as proclaiming Mary as co-redemptrix. Such a doctrine is advocated by some Catholic circles on the ground that Mary cooperated in bringing Christ, the Redeemer, to earth.

BULLETINS FROM BIRDLAND

By WINIFRED WILSON

RARE WAXWINGS

Few people are acquainted with those irregular wanderers, the Bohemian waxwings. This is quite natural, because they are seldom seen in Canada east of the prairies and are really fairly rare birds anyway. Indeed, if you did actually come upon a flock you might not realize that you were looking at anything more interesting than a number of common cedar waxwings as the two species are definitely similar. Feeding habits, manner of flight, face markings, and general appearance of silhouette and slickness of plumage are identical; both wear conspicuous crests, and daubs of red "sealing-wax" on the ends of their wings, and a distinct band of yellow at the end of their tails. Unless your ear is particularly good the difference in their call notes would not be perceptible, though actually the Bohemian's is a more long drawn-out trill rather than the cedar's twittering sings.

JUDGING BY SIZE

Then the differences are not sufficiently noticeable to attract your attention. Though the average Bohemian is bigger a single individual could be exactly the same size as a large cedar. (Never forget that sizes vary in all kinds of birds although more particularly in some than in others.) But when a flock is seen and wavering into the company of their sisters and brothers it is quite impossible to tell the difference judging by their size.

But on close inspection, you will find that there is an absence of yellow on the breast of the Bohemian, the crown is a reddish-brown in front there are yellow and white patches on the wings, and the definite distinguishing mark: a patch of reddish-brown feathers under the tail.

WINTERING GROUNDS

Bohemian waxwings breed in the north-western corner of Canada, mostly in the Yukon. So far south-east as Alberta Once winter sets in, a number of them migrate, or drift upon it's a the fruit," they might be found in Ontario or in eastern Canada any time from November until March, giving their habitat as far south as with one accord they take off from one tree and alight on another.

Police Lieutenant Has Lost 2,500 Yr. for Being Honest

By GERRY McNEIL

MONTREAL (CP) — "I have lost 2,500 a year through being honest," says police Lieutenant Jean Lequin.

But the lieutenant, whose pet hates are gambling and prostitution is getting every cent back in satisfaction.

Hikes from avid leader in crackdown on vice in this city between February and August last year, Lieut. Lequin and his sergeant made more than 200 arrests—mostly on gaming charges.

The husky officer with the crushing handshake finally collapsed on overwork and spent 10 days in hospital.

When he recovered, he was made chief of the social security squad and his efforts have been directed against an elusive plainclothes racket boss.

Lieut. Lequin last led a squad in the year that fighting vice became for him a personal objective as well as a duty.

DEMOTION THREAT

The conscientious inspector of the morality squad was making effective punches at the city's underworld when demotion on a tender spot.

He stepped hard on someone's toes. Chief Constable Director Brien Robert. "A racketeer told him he would be demoted and he was a few weeks later."

The reason given for the demotion to lieutenant was "inefficiency." Lieut. Lequin places the blame squarely on underworld influence. The memory of that painful demotion drives him against vice.

"He is a very straight officer," says Chief Robert, who took over the force officially in December although he was acting director for almost six months of last year. "We checked into him thoroughly, even his bank books, and he is honest."

Lieut. Lequin lives modestly with his wife and two children, one adopted. He misses the drop in salary the demotion meant. When his wife had an operation to Christmas, he borrowed money to tide the family over.

"But I'm satisfied with my job now," says the 45-year-old officer, who sometimes works a 16-hour day to make a case.

ADVICE FOR ROOKIE

Lieut. Lequin joined the force 21 years ago, found training "not very rigorous" and "a lot of fun."

"As soon as the old cats there saw a peppy rookie, they said 'Be careful where you put your nose or you'll find yourself in a station three hours from your home,'" he recalls.

This advice never quite got to Lieut. Lequin, now busy winning back his lieutenant's rank, but it did to some of the people he depends on.

Recently, a taxi driver beat the tariffe. The angry woman came to Lieut. Lequin and reported that her husband was involved in a prostitution ring.

She couldn't produce his license number so Lieut. Lequin had a constable check the motor vehicle department for it so the police could trail the errant cabbie.

"The woman turned up Monday with two black eyes and was she mad," said the officer, remembering the time he repeatedly tipped her husband that he was being checked upon.

His wife was the logical offender, and he beat her up again for spoiling his racket.

200 Bombs Fail To Stir Moslems Into Reprisals

Europeans in Algeria Try to Provoke Riots

ALGIERS (Reuters) — European right-wing extremists exploded more than 200 plastic bombs today as part of a desperate last-minute bid to forestall a ceasefire in the Algerian war.

Almost all the blasts were directed against Moslems in the hope that possible bloody reprisals would delay the imminent end of the 7½-year Moslem insurrection.

The explosions at Moslem stores, restaurants and other points injured at least 10 persons and caused widespread damage. But Moslem reaction to the bombs attacks was on a small scale.

Thirteen of the arrested European right-wing extremists were brought to trial today on charges of terrorism in a convoy of three cars. Men in the second car opened fire on police, but only wounded some of their friends in the leading vehicle.

Meanwhile, women massed on rooftops in Moslem districts shrieking the Arab "you-you" rallying cry while men brandished fired rifles at European cars passing below.

By evening few had cordoned off Moslem districts and had begun searching Moslem homes in connection with the bomb and Roll Day the Algiers suburb of Kouba Moslem demonstrators vented European extremists exploding plastic charges after a violent gun battle. But there were no casualties.

BUILDINGS SET AFIRE

Several of the explosions set buildings afire, but firemen soon had them out. No public buildings were damaged but many parked cars were smashed to bits.

The blasts all occurred between 4:30 a.m. and 6:30 a.m. Security forces defused about 15 other bombs, before they exploded.

The number of explosions was a record for a single day, but obviously has had only 40 to 50 blasts in one night.

All the blasts were directed at Moslem premises in the mixed European-Moslem districts of Saint Eugene in western Algiers and the Rue Rovigo, close to the ancient Casbah Moslem quarter.

The bomb attacks came in the wake of three days of violence in Algeria in which 105 persons — about two-thirds of them Moslems — were killed and 179 wounded. They were the most numerous weekend thefts of money, arms and communications.

DEFIES ULTIMATUM

Meanwhile, secrecy army gunmen in Algeria defied an ultimatum today to order a secret army officer and two Italian correspondents to leave Algeria or die.

Nicolas Caracolio, a Neapolitan nobleman-journalist, went to Casablanca Sunday night after being escorted to a press conference by a protective corps.

WILL BE ASKED TO TAKE ACTION ON THREE BILLS

Aid Businessman, Farmer, Fisherman

OTTAWA (CP) — The small businessman, farmer or fisherman who wants to borrow money to improve his plant, property or gear will be in the Commons spotlight this week.

Finance Minister Fleming plans to ask the House today and Tuesday to take action on three bills extending present legislation covering government-backed loans. When passed, they will:

1. Make small business loans of up to $25,000 available at regular bank interest rates fo, relocating business premises, as well as for new buildings or improvements to old ones.

2. Permit the granting of $7,500 five- per - cent loans to farmers for another three-year period extending to the end of June, 1965, and authorize a limit of $400,000,000 instead of $300,000,000 on total loans outstanding.

3. Permit a similar extension in the life of the fisheries improvement loans act to the end of June, 1965.

It was expected that opposition groups would call for further extensions. Liberal MPs have complained that the small business loans legislation has not been utilized to the extent envisaged by the government when it was introduced a year ago.

The bill was before the house for about an hour Feb. 15. H.W.

Mr. K Reluctantly Accepts U.S.-British Parley Plans

WASHINGTON (AP) — Soviet Premier Khrushchev has reluctantly accepted a U.S.-sponsored proposal to open the 18-nation disarmament conference in Geneva next week with a foreign ministers' meeting, officials reported today.

The Soviet government sent the United States a message, delivered to the state department Sunday, advising that Foreign Minister Andrei Gromyko will go to Geneva.

Authorities said the first quick study of the note indicated Gromyko will also be ready to attend a preliminary session with State Secretary Dean Rusk and Foreign Secretary Lord Home, as the Western governments had proposed.

The new note from Moscow was expected to get personal attention from President Kennedy today upon his return from a weekend at Middleburg, Va.

The U.S.-British-Soviet meeting of foreign ministers in advance of the general arms talks, would deal primarily with the nuclear test ban problem. For the last three years negotiations on that particular issue were carried on by the powers at Geneva until they broke down early this year in the wake of the surprise Soviet test series.

Authorities said the note from Moscow put an end to the uncertainty that has troubled U.S. officials over the level at which the disarmament talks would resume.

Khrushchev had insisted since mid-February that the talks be held at the highest level, a conference, bringing together, the heads of a major of the countries as could get to Geneva by March 14.

But Premier and Prime Minister Macmillan said they would be prepared to go to a summit meeting at a later stage, if progress in the talks warranted it, but they argued a top level beginning of disarmament negotiations would do more harm than good by merely freeze national positions on the already wide range of disarmament issues.

POLICE THINK $232,000 LOOT STILL IN BUSH

Armed Robbery Case Concluded

PETERSBOROUGH (CP) — Police think they believe the $232,000 in cash and negotiable bonds taken in the armed robbery of a Havelock, Ont., bank last summer may still be hidden in bush in the area.

One police officer working on the case said Friday the opinion is based on the fact that none of the $145,000 in bonds and securities has appeared on the market.

Police have maintained a close watch for the missing bonds.

No reward has been posted for the recovery of the loot, a bonding company spokesman said today. He said he would pay anyone finding the money would receive "full consideration."

Last Aug. 31, four men held overnight in the basement of a branch of the Toronto-Dominion bank in Havelock, 25 miles northeast of here. When the manager and staff arrived the following morning, they were held up at gunpoint and $232,000 in cash and bonds was taken.

TOOK TO BUSH

The men escaped in a car but later ran into a provincial police roadblock about 30 miles to the north. They abandoned the car and took to the bush in the Coe Hill district.

Four days after the robbery, five Montreal men were arrested. One died of a heart attack but the other four were charged with armed robbery.

The trial of the four men ended Saturday and Judge A. R. Whimsett said he will deliver judgment today.

Three provincial police detachments have been working on the case, which is the largest, among Canadian robberies.

The biggest Canadian robbery was carried out between May and June, 1962, when $3,250,000 was stolen from a mail truck in Toronto.

All 111 Aboard Found Dead In Plane Crash

British DC-7C Airliner On Way to Lisbon

DOUALA, Cameroon Republic (Reuters)—All 111 persons aboard a British DC-7C airliner were killed Sunday night when the plane crashed into a swamp seconds after taking off, officials announced today.

Half of the aircraft's fuselage was found in swamp accessible only by boat and the wreckage was strewn over an area of one-half square mile.

An airport spokesman said the plane burst into flames and the fire guided rescuers, who had to battle their way through the swamp in rubber boats in pitch dark.

The aircraft, operated by Caledonian Airways, crashed during a storm. The spokesman said the heat of the fire had prevented rescuers from getting to the wreckage.

The plane was on a flight from Lourenco Marques in Mozambique to Lisbon. It had stopped here to refuel.

Sixty of the passengers and South African crew members were listed as being from Johannesburg and Cape Town. English addresses. No addresses were available for the others.

CRASHED IN STORM

The plane was scattered over a wide area and the propeller-driven plane went down during a storm.

Caledonian Airways began operations with the lease of two DC-7Cs from Belgium's Sabena Airlines in December. The chartered plane was on charter to Trans-Africa Air Coach Limited of London.

The death toll of 100 would make it the worst air crash in the history of Africa. The worst previous crash was that of an Air France Super Constellation in which 79 were killed in the Sahara on May 10, 1961.

The British Airways DC-7 is an single plane crash was last Thursday when a Boeing 707 crashed after take - off from Idlewild airport in New York, killing all 95 aboard.

Snow, Rising Temperatures Pose Flood Threat in B.C.

By THE CANADIAN PRESS

Two snowstorms in three days and temperatures rising toward the thawing point are contributing to snow and flood threats for communities in southwestern British Columbia.

Rain and the rising temperatures—in the 30 to 35 region—combined with 6 inches of snow Friday and another three inches Saturday.

More rain is expected today and concentration of rain in any one area could cause flooding, say high.

The only other region where there appears to be some flood danger is in the Maritimes, which had their first excessive weekend of stormy weather. Eastern New Brunswick and Prince Edward Island bore most of the brunt. Twenty inches of snow fell in Moncton, New Brunswick, P.E.I. got 10.

Most highways were both cloudy with snow flurries expected, but temperatures were a little lower than in the Maritimes, ranging between about 20 and 30. Further west, skies were clear of flood threats and temperatures lower across the Prairies.

Saskatchewan and Alberta were experiencing record-breaking cold. At Medicine Hat and Saskatoon the mercury edged down to the degree lower than previous records set March 4. Medicine Hat reaching 22 below and the 1962 record setting Saskatoon plunging past the 1916 and 1943 trough of 28 below. Lethbridge tied its 1916 record by three degrees, recording 24 below.

Heavy snows hit the normally mild lower mainland of B.C. a week after crocuses and early flowers had bloomed in January. The first snowfall caused three deaths, and two more in other parts of the province were blamed on the wintry weather.

Escaped Convict Shot to Death In Montreal

MONTREAL (CP) — Roger Ducharme, an escaped convict who, police said, forced civilians to hide him for nearly a week, was shot to death Saturday night after a police car stopped him and a gunshot wound in the head.

Ducharme, 30, was shot by a detective on a sidewalk outside an east-end flat where he had held a man and woman as hostage under a threat of death.

A spokesman for the Montreal Urban Police Force said a raid operation was performed on Ducharme's hideout early today and ended without regaining consciousness.

Police were acting on a tip from an anonymous informer who called from outside the apartment of his sister-in-law.

Police said he continually threatened the adults and only one young child in the apartment and kept the rest of the three in the apartment as a hostage. They withheld the names of the adults.

Ducharme and his sister-in-law were arrested on the way out to store to buy provisions when a five-man police squad moved in. Police said the two officers diverted Ducharme's attention and the woman escaped.

When Ducharme made a sudden movement police though he was going for a pistol and opened fire. A search later showed he was unarmed.

Ducharme was sentenced to 14 years Jan. 19 for the attempted murder of a policeman in a street gunbattle following a holdup attempt.

He escaped from St. Luke Hospital where he had been transferred from Bordeaux Jail after swallowing a spoon and some wire.

Canada in Midst of Education Revival Conference Is Told

MONTREAL (CP)—The world is finding a new belief in the power of knowledge, Dr. Claude Bissell, president of the University of Toronto, said Sunday night.

This "modern revival of learning" overshadows the previous periods of intellectual expansion, Dr. Bissell said in officially opening the Canadian Education Conference on Education.

Canada shares in the ferment more evident than in North America, particularly in Quebec, he said. Here the energy now put in research and development in pure and technological science and education is the best ways by which to adapt a sturdy educational system to the complex demands of modern society."

Canada had not "the slightest doubt" that Canada's schools and universities would receive the support they deserved in the years ahead.

"If the suffocating burden of armament is ever reduced or eliminated," Dr. Bissell said, "there will be well founded hope that education will become the primary concern of the federal, as it now is of the provincial, government."

Dr. Bissell, who is also chairman of the Canada Council, gave the keynote address to the five-day conference that has brought together 2,000 delegates from all 10 provinces to improve communications between persons interested in education and to promote public support of educational development.

The first such conference was held in Ottawa in 1958.

Welcoming the delegates, Jean-Paul Gerlin, Deputy Minister Of Quebec, said people who think Canada eventually will become "a mixture of French and English cultures "are not realistic."

French Canada was not, however, opposed "to any form of exchange or ideas with English Canada."

It is in fact, eager to pursue them but also insisting the fundamental problems of education in French Canada be recognized."

Janker Gets Plaque by Mistake, Minister Laughs Off Lineal 'Goof'

TORONTO (CP) — Dave Walker may be short on political genealogy but the federal works minister is not on political savvy.

Mr. Walker, substituting at last for a descendant of one of the Fathers of Confederation, presented a plaque to appreciant fluff Saturday with:

"Some of my best constituents live in Toronto."

He took the easy going approach when he learned his descendant was not present to receive the plaque.

The real grandson turned out to be S. Leonard Tilley, publicity director of a Toronto advertising firm.

The minister said the real grandson was "a little embarrassed, but got over it quickly."

He explained he told officials in his department to find Sir Leonard's grandson. He was not until Saturday that he heard about the mistake.

"These things happen," said the minister. "It's just another case of someone being late for a day."

He said he was sorry if the error hurt the real grandson's feelings.

Katangese Attack Town

ELISABETHVILLE (AP) — Katangese Prime Minister Moise Tshombe claimed today that 1,200 United Nations troops launched a heavy attack early this morning on the town of Kamina, 100 miles northeast of here.

He said bitter fighting was still going on and there were an unknown number of dead and wounded on both sides.

Tshombe's claim was told a press conference the UN troops began their attack at 11:30 a.m. Sunday. They were reported 12 miles from the big air and military base of Kamina.

Peruvian Indians Using Slingshots To Battle With Troops Over Land

LIMA (AP)—Hundreds of revolution Indian peasants armed with knives and slingshots battled Peruvian government troops trying to oust them from land they claim they had seized near Cerro de Pasco, 100 miles northeast of Lima.

The Cerro de Pasco police station reported seven men killed, 20 wounded and 50 arrested.

The fighting erupted Saturday when land-hungry farm workers rejected government bids to mediate their dispute.

The peasants, called communeros, seized the ranches several weeks ago and claimed legal ownership. Much of the property is held by absentee landlords.

The government of President Manuel Prado sent about 600 troops to Cerro de Pasco, 110 miles northeast of Lima, after attempts to reach a peaceful settlement failed.

(National Guard General Umberto Barros Mendoza said the peasants attacked soldiers, on the ranches and the troops responded with tear gas and rifle fire. Another troop detachment was attacked by the workers throwing rocks and firing shotguns.

Scarcity of farm land in the area has caused frequent conflicts. Ranches passed down from and large and small property holders. There is feeling that the government is carrying out too few social reforms to benefit the rural population, particularly the Indians.

In rural uprisings in the past, the government has blamed leftists and Communists for inciting the illiterate peasants to take over estates and ranches.

Sheriff Daniel F. Ring said he interviewed Wortman the night "blood known to have any connection with the two victims."

Officers took Wortman into custody for questioning along with a dozen other persons.

Wortman, Dowling and Gregory E. (Red) Moore were convicted last week in St. Louis on charges of conspiracy to obstruct justice.

SUM OF MONEY TAKEN FROM HOUSE

Undersmig the fact that neighbors are often called on by members of the police force, a thief entered a home on Mills Avenue on Friday and stole a small quantity of cash.

When the householder, Mrs. M. Gallinger returned home from work, she discovered that not only the money but some had collected on his paper route the previous day, but also his personal savings, had been taken.

The intruder, apparently interested only in cash, had made a thorough search of the house, as the paper money was in a dresser drawer in a downstairs bedroom and the savings in an upstairs room.

The door of the house had been left unlocked during the cold weather so the milleman could place the milk inside.

White Collar Workers Must Be Recruited Into Unions Labor School Delegates Told

"There are thousands who go to work each morning wearing white collars and ties, who are worse off financially than our industrial union members."

This great issue will be addressed some 90 delegates from Belleville and Trenton at Saturday night's banquet held at the Legion Hall.

UNIONS IN OUR SOCIETY

"Local current problems, regardless of how important they may be considered at the moment, pale into insignificance when we look at the overall picture of the trends, problems, and duty to assess the great unanswerings to assure our future".

Mr. Hamilton then mentioned he would like to give some of his impressions of the labor movement, its growth and development and also venture opinions of what lies ahead. "As we look around us today' he said, "and most wisely, all the great class struggle is really over or if the working people are being treated with a sense of security by propaganda from the mass media of communications and by the fact that most of us are at least getting enough to eat although many are securing it from meagre unemployment insurance payments, welfare handouts from local public and private welfare organizations".

"The first question we must ask ourselves is what progress have we, the working people, made in two short years from the days when the Flint railway financial tycoons forged and shot across the continent, and at the same time established what is now the immigrant laborers who lived and worked like animals?"

While we are here, said Mr. Hamilton, "fighting for economic survival, it is a highly competitive world. If we in Canada are to maintain the standards which are now ours, there must be the fullest co-operation between labor and management as well as others in the community. This kind of co-operation is almost impossible when some employers continue 19th-century practice in labor relations matters."

"In assessing the trade union movement we can no one of course cannot ignore the local problems which concern our unions such as settled wages, working conditions, vacations with pay and so forth."

"These activities are the backbone of our movement. But, I feel that what do we gain if we get a few cents per hour today and it is gobbled up by increased prices, high interest rates, and the like. What good is a wage increase if tomorrow you are among the great army of unemployed. If you take a look at this country you will find that union organization has made very good progress in recent years

"And if you take a serious look at the work of our legislators since the war, both at the federal and provincial levels, you will see that they have fallen miserably to cope with the social and economic needs of our nation."

"It is understandable that the big business friends of government—extract on Insurance legislation and it is also understandable that large insurance companies continue with the help of their friends in the legislative halls to fight government automobile insurance, portable pensions, and that the medical profession continues to fight legislation which would provide adequate health needs for our citizens".

Mr. Hamilton said, "For years the trade unions have realized the need for legislative improvements at almost every phase of our social development. They have attempted to bring improvements into action at every opportunity and on the whole have met with little success."

Mr. Hamilton went on to say now that we have moved fairly in the political field in the past few years, with more some of the ills to be found in the legislative field, it is hoped in the months ahead to see this move as boldly to bolster our economic improvement.

WHITE COLLAR CLASS

He stated the bank clerks, school teachers, nurses, and the great army of workers in offices, stores, are in need of leadership and a strong organization to make their voices heard. Convincing these people that their future lies with the labor movement will not be easy."

Mr. Hamilton concluded, "the tasks which I have outlined both on political and economic fronts will not be simple.

"If we vigorously pursue our objectives we can expect opposition.

"It is to be hoped that the bitterness of the past, the bloody than those of the past, but let us not be so naive as to let this prevent us from taking or demand less sacrifice."

Mr. Hamilton was introduced by Mr. Arthur Whitehead of Eclipt Anne and thanked by Mr. Fred Pownall of Belleville. A dance was held after the banquet and address.

Classes for the Belleville and Trenton members were held on Friday. Saturday Relations and Problems were discussed in each classroom session headed by the various class leaders. Classes include courses such as "Labor and the Law", "Labor Economics", "Labor Management Relations", "Labor and the Community."

Course leaders were Murray Cullen, Labor Relations Director, United Steel Workers of America; Henry Nokes, recreation director, Canadian Congress, Morden Lazarus, P.E.C. Financial Secretary Federation of Labor and Moses McKay, labor representative, United Appeal.

No Heavy Flooding of Moira Foreseen by City Engineer

Barring a combination of continued mild weather and rain within the next three weeks, the Moira River is not expected to create any particular flood danger this spring.

This was the opinion today of City Engineer Malcolm Turnbull, who said that barring heavy rains he could see no serious flood situation on the river this spring.

However, the city public works department, in collaboration with the Moira River Conservation Authority has its flood procedure worked out and ready to go into operation in the event of an emergency.

The last serious flood in Belleville in March, 1938, was touched off by a combination of mild weather and heavy rains.

Rain, starting on the 11th of March brought down ice over the Canniffon and Lazier dams and when the ice jammed in downtown Belleville the water flowed over the roadway and on Front Streets.

By March 19th, 75 acres of the city downtown area and the 14th 300 people were homeless. Damage was estimated upwards of $350,000

Down through the years serious floods have occurred on March 7th, March 17th, March 20th and March 30th.

Skate Across West End of Lake Ontario

TORONTO (CP)—Two Brotherhoods, who, skated across the west end of Lake Ontario Saturday are thought to be the first to make the ice crossing in 50 years.

Henry Jelinek, 17, brother of Canada's top figure skaters Otto and Maria, and Keith Bowen, 18, took just over an hour to make the 25-mile trip between Bronte and Winona. They said the lake was "smooth as glass."

Veteran fisherman William Sargant of Bronte said one of his uncles had made the crossing 52 years ago but said only twice since then had there been enough ice to skate beyond the town pier.

Salmon River Conservation Meeting Called

A meeting out of which the formation of a conservation authority covering the Salmon River watershed may result has been called for the afternoon of March 29th at the Sheffield township hall at Tamworth.

Five of the eight municipalities which make up the major portion of the watershed have asked the Department of Lands and Forests to call a formation meeting and the department minister last week complied with the request.

The eight municipalities making up the major portion of the Salmon River watershed are the townships of Barrie, Camden East, Kaladar, Angerford and Effingham, Tweedsmuir, Arden, Richmond, Sheffield and Tyendinaga.

The above townships have been invited to send accredited representatives to the meeting. A quorum of two thirds is necessary, while two thirds majority of official representatives present will be necessary to carry a motion to form the body.

If a motion to form the area is carried all eight of the municipalities will automatically become members.

While the meeting is open to the public only accredited municipal representatives will be entitled to vote.

The Salmon river drains an area of approximately 400 square miles, most of it in Lennox and Addington townships, before it runs through Tyendinaga and empties into the Bay of Quinte.

Other townships which have very small areas within the Salmon watershed are Hungerford, Clarendon and Miller, and possibly a very small area of Thurlow.

'Pancake Day' Coming Up On Tuesday

Tomorrow is Shrove Tuesday, known in culinary circles as "Pancake Day".

There is nothing new about pancakes. The only thing perhaps is that simplicity, or the cook who has a penchant to dress them up.

"Shrove Tuesday" gives way to Pancake Day for the pancakes were manufactured way back in the Stone Age.

The Fred Flintstones held the first pancake parties with their buddies the Bagles. It was a change from dinosaur soup, and evergreen lime-aid.

The "Witness and Betrys" of that age made their pancakes from rudimentary baking utensils. Leftovers were used as paperweight later on.

The origin of Pancake Day was about 1,000 A.D. when an English cook discovered by accident that "in the week immediately preceding Lent everyone shall go to his confessor and be shriven of his deeds, and the confessor shall go about the town after them hear by his deeds what he has to do".

Said proclamation resulted in the wide observance of Shrove Thursday.

It was a day for merrymaking and the housefrau and inhabitant simply didn't have time to get a six-course meal so they whipped up a short-order ballet tossed it in a pan and pancakes became synonymous with the day.

"Pancake Day" is now a celebration of international renown. In the Mediterranean area and many French, Portuguese and Spanish-speaking countries it is known as "Mardi Gras".

Annually New Orleans issues a Mardi Gras that is known as the most colorful spectacular of its kind in the world.

Canada does not go all out on celebrations or gluttonous pancake devouring. A lot of Old Country people make it a point to feature the tasty cakes on their meals menu.

Glenn Will Stay Out of Politics For Time Being

WASHINGTON (AP) — Astronaut John Glenn's boss predicted Sunday the orbiting hero will stay out of politics even though many experts in that field say he could be a spectacular vote-getter.

Glenn tells me that he is devoted to the space program and wants to stay with it just as long as he can be useful in it," said James E. Webb, head of the National Aeronautics and Space Agency.

Webb said senators and governors have been speculating as to whether he might go into politics.

Appearing with Senator Kenneth B. Keating (Rep. N.Y.) on a program taped for radio-TV use, Webb also gave these views:

The U.S. will be able to put a man on the moon and return him before the Russians do.

Considering the over-all program, the U.S. now is ahead of the Russians in space.

A program for training additional astronauts beyond the initial seven will be ready for announcement in about three weeks.

"We'll be flying every 60 or 90 days now for some time."

Cairine Wilson, First Woman Senator, Dies

OTTAWA (CP)—Senator Cairine Wilson, 77, Canada's first woman senator, died unexpectedly in hospital Saturday.

Senator Wilson, an Ontario Liberal, had been in hospital for about three weeks. She died from complications of hip fractures she suffered in a fall.

Funeral services will be held Tuesday at Knox United Presbyterian Church in Ottawa.

Wife of a politician-businessman and mother of eight children, Mrs. Wilson was 45 when she was appointed to the senate Feb 15, 1930, by Prime Minister Mackenzie King.

The appointment came after several years of legal argument about whether women were "persons" and eligible for Senate seats under the terms of the British North America Act.

In her years in the Senate, Mrs. Wilson showed a deep interest and concern for the problems of others. She was often described as a "practical" Liberal and a conscientious humanitarian.

She was active in many welfare and education groups, and early last May, shortly before she fractured her hip in a fall in the Centre Block of the Parliament Buildings, was made a life member of the Canadian Welfare Council.

For her work with refugee children, France created her a Chevalier of the Legion of Honour in 1950. She was a Dame of Grace of the Order of St. John of Jerusalem, and active in the work of the Canadian-American Women's Committee and the Victorian Order of Nurses.

She was Canada's first woman delegate to the United Nations General Assembly, and first and only president of the League of Nations Society in Canada.

Senator Wilson's death created the ninth vacancy in the 102-seat Upper House. The standing is Liberal 66, Conservatives 24, independent two, independent-Liberal one, vacant nine.

A native of Montreal, Mrs. Wilson was 24 when she married Montreal newspaper executive Norman F. Wilson, former Liberal member of Parliament for the Ottawa riding of Russell. In 1921, when the family moved to Ottawa, Mrs. Wilson started to take part in politics.

At the time women were not first given the vote, Mrs. Wilson acted as joint president of the Equal Franchise Association and took part in the 1921 election campaign that brought the Liberals to power with Mr. King as prime minister.

In 1930 she was the prime architect behind the first national organization for young Liberals. In the same year came Mr. King's offer of a Senate seat.

Senator Wilson was the first woman to take the Senate Speaker's chair in 1956, during the illness of the regular incumbent.

She had five daughters and three sons. 14 grandchildren and one grandson, Mr. Wilson died in 1956.

14-Yr.-Old Boy Held by Police After Stabbing

TORONTO (CP) — A Hindly middle-aged man who gave up university teaching in Ontario to get away from commercialism was stabbed Sunday night after an attempted robbery in his little candy store.

Stefan Turkawycz, 58, was stabbed in the neck with a small hunting knife picked up from the store counter. Police are holding a 14-year-old grade IX pupil.

Turkawycz, partner in the store with Andrew Farmik, had been professor of mathematics at Toronto's Ukrainian University. He came here in 1950 with his wife and two daughters because he disagreed with Communist policies and wanted the daughters to be educated in the free world.

In his neat little store, he was surrounded by pictures of young youngsters. When they had no money for candies, he handed them out free.

He had planned to go into business alone and was in the confectionery for his last day.

A neighbor, Oxsy Goshuiak told police he came to the store to buy a five-cent stamp and saw Turkawycz, with a knife in his back struggling with a boy.

Goshuiak grabbed the boy and pulled the knife as Turkawycz fell face down on the floor.

Mr. Turkawycz was married to his two daughters. He had planned to go into business for himself and was working his last week at the confectionery.

No money was taken from the store. Neighbors said they thought the stabbing might have occurred when Turkawycz told the boy to leave the store.

Charges have not yet been laid.

CUBAN TROOPS

the population. This province (Oriente) has long been a hotbed of revolutionary activities.

For a long time Premier Fidel Castro has been penalizing industry through high taxes and by take over this base.

Last year U.S. rents Guantanamo from Cuba for 2,000 gold dollars. Figure about $2,800 today, by virtue of a treaty negotiated in 1903.

LISTENING POST

With U.S. diplomats gone from Havana, Guantanamo has become something of a listening post. U.S. officers here no longer "get a look" but they know nothing of what goes on inside Cuba.

Some of these officers, are convinced Castro is now a Communist. He has been outplanted by a Spanish-born, Russian-trained general, Ulis Cruz, known here as Geo. Bayo, is a veteran of the Spanish civil war, and apparently was associated with Castro during the latter's pre-revolutionary days in Guatemala and Mexico.

Reports here indicate thousands of guns, mostly machine gun case have been set afire to subdue them.

HAVE FIRM HOLD

There seems no doubt the Cuban Red Army will have a firm grip on the people.

As set well-informed U.S. officer put it:

"The Committee for the Defence of Castro's Revolution has it almost impossible to move about Cuba. You can't spot strangers or to carry unusual parcels. They even keep a close watch on the mail. Anyone writes you buy to see if you are harboring anyone. It's tough for an underground to get a typical that kind of system, but make no mistake, there is an underground."

Approximately 2,500 Cubans pass through the northeast gate to this base twice daily on their way to work. Identity is supposedly they are required to show their ID card, pay dollars on the basis of $1 for one peso.

But there is a thriving black market in dollars in Cuba. The rate in Oriente is five to seven pesos per dollar, in Havana the rate is 10-13.

A number of well-informed people in Cuba manage to find desperate shortage of medicines and it takes a doctor's prescription to get a simple aspirin.

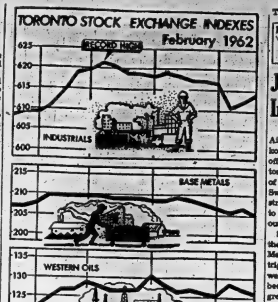
Food is scare, especially fresh vegetables and meat. Cauliflower is short supply and shoes are hard to come by.

Thurlow Twp. Home Burns, Eight Homeless

Fire Saturday afternoon completely gutted the home of Mr. and Mrs. Percy Mayhew on the Wooler-Roslin road.

Firemen rushed to the scene where fire had broken out in the northeast corner of the attic.

It is believed the fire was caused by a defective chimney.



Mr. McGrath, his wife, and six children, ranging in ages from baby to 12 years, saved some of the home's furnishings and personal belongings before flames forced them to flee the outside while the house crumbled around them.

The loss was estimated at approximately $20,000. It is believed Mr. McGrath carried no insurance on his home.

Mr. and Mrs. McGrath are staying with one of their neighbors, Mr. and Mrs. Marvin Miles, while the children are staying at the homes of friends in the surrounding area.

Mrs. McGrath said in a telephone conversation with this newspaper Saturday evening that they were not quite sure just what they will do in the future but they are hoping to be able to rebuild their home.

Fire did not destroy any of the other buildings situated on their farm.

NEW RECORD REACHED — The industrial index on the Toronto Stock Exchange rose to a new record high of 623.29 at the close February 15, but levelled off in the last half of the month.

Western oils jumped briefly to 131.20 at February 16, highest since May, 1958.

Veterinarians, Pharmacists Hold Seminar

Representatives of Ontario's veterinarians and pharmacists met recently in Brighton.

Sixty members of the Ontario Veterinary Association and the Ontario College of Pharmacy gathered from all parts of the province to exchange professional knowledge in a joint seminar on animal and plant health, first of its kind ever held in Ontario.

Among those present were three Belleville pharmacists, C. Cherry, C. Selkon and F. C. Miller; three veterinarians from Belleville, L. Ladobik, J. B. Parliament and H. Burns and a Roslin veterinarian, K. B. Rutter.

Dr. D. A. Barnum of the Ontario Veterinary College in Guelph and Dr. Ian Pearson of Guelph also attended. The latter is a humaz who drank the milk, but a sensitizing dose can be as little as 20 units of penicillin, and you can certainly get that from drinking a glass of milk."

Dr. R. M. Baxter of the University of Toronto faculty of medicine emphasized the danger of penicillin sensitization. He said unwarranted or indiscriminate use of antibiotics in treating infectious conditions resulted in development of resistant strains by the infectious organisms.

Dr. W. T. Oliver, also of the Ontario Veterinary College, stressed the danger of overexposure of animals and humans to aerosol - type and vaporized-type insecticides which caused toxic effects.

WOMEN'S SUFFRAGE

The struggle for women's right to vote in Norway ended in 1913 but the first woman MP was not elected until 1931.

Well Prepared Budget

In these days, any budget which does not involve an increase in taxation is cause for joy.

The Ontario Government's budget presented Thursday falls in this category. Moreover, it achieves this status while providing for a record spending program and the initiation of a new five-year plan of economic growth for the province.

Is Hon. James N. Allan, provincial treasurer, a magician?

Not quite. While he was the chef, the recipe he used had been provided by one of his most distinguished predecessors, Leslie Miscampbell Frost.

This was Mr. Allan's fourth budget, but the first of Premier John Robarts' regime. It was typical of Mr. Frost that, before his retirement, he should have tidied up the financial house for his successor, taking upon himself the thankless chore of making all the necessary repairs.

These repairs were effected by the institution of the provincial sales tax. Without it, Mr. Allan would not have been able to find the money for such an ambitious program of work without either imposing new taxes or piling up a heavy deficit on the province's account. Instead of the modest $374,000 surplus he forecast.

This sales tax, it is estimated, will yield $160,000,000 in the coming fiscal year. It is thus the third largest revenue-producer for the Ontario Government, after corporation tax and gasoline tax but before the payments received from the Federal Government for rental of the income tax field.

This tax, though, has not solved all the province's financial problems. The net debt continues to climb in a fashion which may alarm some, by $43,112,400 in the twelve months ended March 31 next. Interest on the public debt costs us more than highways and a fourth as much as we spend on education.

The main cause of this increasing burden of debt, of course, has been the province's rapid growth. This cause can become at least a partial remedy by increased our ability to pay these debt charges. That would appear to be what Provincial Treasurer Allan had in mind when he said that "our aim will be to maintain an adequate rate of economic growth consistent with the financial capacity of this province."

A Welcome Finish

Just recently it was announced that the Irish Republican Army had been disbanded. To some this may sound to be the end of an era fraught with romanticism and adventure. Many stories and movies have been written and filmed which portrayed the IRA members as being poor underdogs in dedicated battle against the might of Great Britain to achieve a free and united Ireland.

Although the goal of having Northern Ireland united with Eire, where the Black Irish come from, did belong to the IRA, the members fought a most unusual form of a war.

Aside from some daring raids on police stations, barracks and armouries in Northern Ireland there were also frequent acts of bombings, especially in public places where none but the innocent was harmed.

This extremist action divorced the IRA members from the sympathies of the majority of their fellow countrymen and their organization was outlawed in their own land.

Now it is apparently died a natural death. The remaining members have realized that their ideal had little, if any, support—not enough certainly to keep the organization alive. They appear to have at last realized that the citizens of Northern Ireland have no great desire to change their status quo and, as free and responsible men eventually learn, an apathetic public is most immobile and devoid of inspiration.

Because of the methods it used, no tear will be shed at hearing the IRA is quietly folding its tents and fading away into the Irish mist.

A slight tinge of regret must, however, be admitted because it also marks the finish of a group of fanatics who held to their ideals with a dedication that is becoming increasingly rare.

Molotov Now 'Good Guy'

By ART HOFFE in the San Francisco Chronicle

We've had another Power-Struggle in the Kremlin. And it looks like the Good Guys lost again. The Good Guys always lose. In fact, that's how they get to be Good Guys.

I think it started with Mr. Trotsky. Mr. Trotsky, as you recall, was the Evil Power Struggle with Mr. Stalin. Mr. Stalin was in pigtails.

Mr. Trotsky wound up in Mexico writing articles for the American Press saying what a rat Mr. Stalin was.

We kind of took Mr. Trotsky to our hearts, because all Mr. Trotsky was devoting his life to was getting Mr. Stalin, that meanest Mr. Trotsky ever a professional anti-Communist.

One of the first, as a matter of fact. And we got pretty sore when Mr. Trotsky's career as a professional anti-Communist was brought to an abrupt close by a well-placed pickaxe.

Of course, as I get it, the reason for the Power Struggle was that Mr. Trotsky kept saying Mr. Stalin was pretty wishy-washy when it came to slicing the throats of all us Capitalists.

But, as I say, once Mr. Stalin gave him the old heave-ho, Mr. Trotsky became a Good Guy. It's sort of a law.

Which brings us up-to Mr. Molotov. Word is that Mr. Molotov has lost the latest Power Struggle because Mr. Khrushchev got the right jaw off the map.

Henceforth, it's announced Molotovville will be known as Coexistenceburg. Or something. And Mr. Molotov, I'm told, I assume will be renamed the Shirley Temple. Served en flamme.

This defeat naturally makes Mr. Molotov a Good Guy. And our sec newsmen are writing very sad stories about what a heck of a way this is to treat a faithful old Russian who's devoting his life to his country. And how it all shows you what a rat Mr. Khrushchev is.

Of course, as I understand it, the reason for this latest Power-Struggle was that Mr. Khrushchev kept saying he was peaceful coexistence.

While Mr. Molotov and his Stalinist friends were for blowing up the Capitalists sooner.

Which is a very interesting debate, I'm sure. From a Communist point of view.

So there was Mr. Molotov going around starting Pro-Red Programs, and calling for anti-patriotism.

And hinting that Mr. Khrushchev was soft on Capitalism. Maybe even a witting tool of the International Capitalist conspiracy. And he ought to be impeached.

M'kot hing.

And what Russia needed was a man on horseback Who wouldn't be snooted about blowing up all us crummy Capitalists.

Naturally, we rooted for Mr. Molotov. After all, we couldn't root for Mr. Khrushchev. That would be disloyal.

Mr. Khrushchev is the official anti-Communist, and if Mr. Molotov is again Mr. Khrushchev, he's the anti-Communist of an anti-Communist.

And—this automatically makes Mr. Molotov a Good Guy. If he does want to blow us all up.

• • •

Well, it all goes to illustrate our blinding three days. Which is that anyone who's a professional anti-Communist is automatically a Good Guy. Now, I'm not what else he's got on his mind for us.

But loyal myself, I wish to help Mr. Molotov. And I'm forming the American Committee to Aid Kremlin Predecessors Fighting Pieces and orders.

We want to start this off with a bang.

Must Man Go to Moon?

Montreal Star

It is almost treasonable to ask it to the middle of the rejoicing over Flight Lieut. Cecil Glenn's space flight, but does man really need to go to the moon?

The cost of the U.S. moon program has been estimated at from $20 billion to $40 billion over the next 10 years. Even in these days of unprecedented figures, that is an enormous amount of money, and it is to be spent for what advantage?

The sacred name of defence has been invoked in Washington. Science, it is suggested that who holds the moon will control the earth," presumably if he doesn't begin to shoot rockets at it. But this is nonsense. Why undertake the enormous risk of transporting missiles to the moon in order to shoot them back when it is already possible to fire them with most uncomfortable accuracy from one point on the earth's surface to another?

It has been vaguely suggested that the moon may contain valuable minerals. But even if it were solid gold (or, for that matter, uranium) the cost of transport would be utterly prohibitive.

The real reason for the race to the moon (assuming the Russians are truly running) is the present obsession with national prestige. "And we would humbly suggest to President Kennedy that between $20 billion and $40 billion would buy just as much prestige if it were spent right here on earth, and that it could do manifold infinitely more good.

Between $20 billion and $40 billion could turn deserts into farmland. It could help unload millions of bales of cotton to go to bed properly fed instead of hungry. It could find cures for cancer and for most of mankind's other remaining ills. It could substitute proper housing for squalid huts over much of the globe, and so into a development fund, it could go a long way towards questions of Africa and Asia the initial push towards industrialization with its political stability.

It would be possible to list hundreds of ways in which the spending of between $20 billion and $40 billion over 10 years could be of positive benefit to humanity. Does the sending of a rocket to the moon appear among them?

The latest thing out is a world globe made of inflated plastic. One huffs and puffs, and blows up like a balloon.

But, also like a balloon, this globe is susceptible to punctures. One wrong move and the world goes bust.

We keep telling ourselves that this is just a toy. It has nothing to do with the continuous blasts of hot air that fill the atmosphere of the real world.

But the symbolism somehow worries us.

STRENGTH FOR THE DAY

DR. EARL L. DOUGLASS

THE REALLY BIG LIFE

Are you a weeper and a hand, wringer? If so, everybody ought to be sorry for you. Everybody ought to be sorry for yourself. Years have a place in life. There are times when indeed we wring our hands in frustration, agony, or real sorrow. But there are some people who get through life weeping on shoulders if they can find them or weeping without shoulders if they cannot. They wring their hands, every day. Despair, frustration, and the blowing of their toys happen almost as often as every hour on the hour.

There are a lot of us who just plain need to get hold of ourselves. Maybe we throw our weight around. Maybe we talk too much. Maybe we gossip. Maybe we weep and shriek and every on. It's not worth causing a lot of people in the world unhappiness. The divorce courts are clogged with cases of people who have no real grievance against each other but who appear to have fallen into the habit of going wild frequently. Problems which are large and overwhelming only seize a few times in the life of most individuals, but we are continually torn apart by the rigors of little things. Then we should reflect, we rant. When we should control ourselves, we wring our hands and weep.

Tribulation is too significant and serious a part of life to Control in little things means triumph in the living of a big life.

Cheese manufactured in Eastern Ontario during 1922 amounted to 97,026 per cent first grade, according to Chief Dairy Instructor for Eastern Ontario. The figures compiled show that 870,335 boxes of first grade cheese were manufactured during the 1942 season. It is considered that this showing is exceptionally good, and praise is due to the efforts of cheesemakers as well as the farmers who supply the milk which makes these figures possible.

It is of interest to his many friends in Belleville that Flight Lieut. J. J. Bennet, O.C. Security Guards Squadron at Mossing Depot in Holland, appears in the current film "Captains of the Clouds." Flight Lieut. Bennet is a brother of Major D. L. Bennett of Trent Road and a cousin of Mr. Stewart Pope of Forin Street in this city.

With gasoline rationing going into effect in Canada next month, following a period of drastic curtailment in parts of the Dominion, gasoline thieves were active in Belleville again last night. While his car was parked in the private driveway alongside his home on Charles Street, gasoline was siphoned from the tank in a large amount by H. Mosher. And at the Goodrich Oil wholesale plant, would-be thieves broke into the gasoline pumphouse and ransacked the premises, Mr. S. Hopkins, plant manager discovered when he returned to open the place for business this morning.

Local Problems Thwart Progress

By SYDNEY J. HARRIS

The ridiculous airplane situation reminds one very much of the world situation. Not long ago I flew back to Chicago from the east. On the way, the airport was snowed in, so we turned back and headed in Cleveland.

Here were all these powerful and capacious planes ready to fly Chicago from all parts of the country, carrying thousands of passengers, but Chicago was not clear and still — but we could not get there, for the local patch of ground was not ready for our descent.

This is one of the major problems plaguing the airlines. The planes can fly, the crews are able, the passengers are there — but the whole project depends upon a small patch of ground at the point of departure or arrival.

And here we are, in the modern world, with every facility at our disposal for peace and prosperity. Modern technology able to provide a satisfying, if not an abundance, for all. There is an earnest desire on the part of all peoples to avoid the catastrophe of war.

But, "in theory" is not available for this task. The relations between countries, the "local problems" are tied to the horse-and-buggy phase. We have advanced little since Metternich or the Congress of Vienna.

The diplomatic and political history of today reads disturbingly like the history of a century or two ago. The same jockeying, the same old concepts of "balance of power," the same strategic feints and rumbles, the same stale rhetoric of "the good old days" — all of diplomats.

The capitals of the world may justly be compared to the airports of various cities. It is local conditions that are keeping themselves — snow, mud, rain or what not — from their proper function. And it is the antiquated system of political concepts that are keeping the world grounded in the twentieth century in an intellectual sense, while technical, social and economic ideas are zooming ahead.

Slogans are, of course, all well like problem. They are spending millions on research and development, for they will not allow present methods of handling and weather to interfere with their progress.

In the sphere of international relations, however, we are still spending billions to maintain the obsolescent, and are doing nothing to devise new, original and effective ways of coping with our common peril. Our weapons are the latest and best we can produce, but our concepts and our approaches are as futile as a snow shovel in an avalanche.

This is true on both sides of the fence. Germany and Japan are still a pouring Irrelevant Marxist-Leninist slogans, and we still prate about the "free world". Metternich would not feel a stranger today.

To Your Good Health

Doctor Says 'Salt-Free-Diet' Is Virtually Impossible

By JOSEPH G. MOLNER, M.D.

Usually this works out advantageously. But if the amount of retained fluid is excessive then is really necessary, it is easily possible for a woman to add a sudden five pounds of weight that may last for a few days before the period, or vaseline as quickly as it gathers. In extreme cases there may be an accumulation of more than five pounds, even 10 or occasionally 12 or 15, which obviously is a severe problem.

I decline to say that salt is "such a main factor" in relieving pre-menstrual cramps, because in most cases it doesn't make any noticeable difference, in the occasional case, however, it becomes quite important. Excess salt causes congestion, the congestion may trigger the cramps.

In other days, avoiding salt, either in cooking or at the table, at least 10 days before the menstrual period, sometimes 14, all that is necessary. In other cases, in the days of the year when the body discharges excess fluid through the kidneys.

Most women don't worry about this at all. But some, by short diet or experiment, find it remarkable relief.

Dear Dr. Molner: What is your opinion of finishing off children's bedrooms, known as children's bedrooms? Our basement is warm and dry in winter but I would like a dance, ing is spring, summer and fall. I don't know what to have done this when pressed for space but I am a little doubtful. — Mrs. R. It's not advisable. The high humidity, or dampness, is an indication of insufficient ventilation.

TODAY'S TALK

By GEORGE MATTHEW ADAMS

TO BENEFIT OTHERS

We are put into this world first of all to benefit others.

But to benefit others we must be happy. And we must vibrate that which others will feel back.

We must have health. The saving for pension things must be sound and strong.

When we are well we are our full selves and a larger part of the world is ours than at any other time.

But no one is really happy unless he is benefitting others. I have studied many people and I have noted that they become most of their happiness upon themselves and their own troubles (mostly imagined).

Every time you do something fine and helpful for someone else, there is created in you that person that comes to you, something of that personality and something of that benefit.

In fact we are make-ups of others. That's one reason why the more we do for others, the more 'others' we have for friends.

It doesn't make any difference what you do each day so long as your first think of the good you are going to do that day. All good comes back.

Then the man who goes in business solely for making money, makes most in proportion to the benefit to others which he himself receives.

Make other people happy and you won't have to worry about your own happiness. It will follow "as the night the day."

THE PACKSACK

At the age of, two, I was taken by my father for a ride on the last of the horse cars in Toronto. It was in the middle of the last of the horse car routes, on McCaul street, was withdrawn. Of course, I don't remember it. But in after years, my father told me that some day I would appreciate the fact that I had had a ride in a horse car.

Sure enough, I appreciated it the other day while watching Col. John Glenn being shot into orbit. And as the rocket passed during that fantastic and obviously historic and symbolic ceremonial, occasion, I could not help but reflect that there are not too many people left in the world who could be as absolutely sure as I that these and younger generations who take the wonders of our time for granted.

West to Insist On Inspection Of Test Ban

WASHINGTON (AP) — The chief U.S. disarmament negotiator says the West will insist that any nuclear test ban treaty with the Soviet Union include a system of cross-inspection to guard against secret test preparations.

William C. Foster, who will head the U.S. team at the Geneva disarmament conference scheduled to begin March 14, said the West would not be prepared to take Soviet Premier Khrushchev's word that Russia would not test again.

"A number of inspectors" would have to be stationed in the Soviet Union, Foster said. "Early in the game . . . we would want American inspectors, as they, I presume, would want Soviet inspectors."

Foster, who heads the new arms control and disarmament agency, spoke in a television interview. He discounted reports that the West would lower its controls than those proposed last year.

Foster said the West would continue to oppose the system of self-inspection urged by the Soviet Union. However, he said the West is ready to discuss "some adjustment" in internal, national or bilateral inspections.

Reports circulated in London Sunday that the West was believed ready to offer Russia a test ban agreement with fewer controls than those in the treaty proposed by the West last year.

Because many tests could be detected from outside Russia, The Sunday Times said, "the West may . . . be prepared to consider fewer control posts in Soviet and Western territory, and to place greater emphasis on verification of results reported by instruments at home."

The Farm Improvement Loans Act gives a government guarantee to bank loans for purchase of implements, livestock, equipment, farm electric systems, irrigation systems, building construction and alteration, fencing and drainage. In 1959, when it was last renewed beekeepers were included as farmers qualifying for the loans.

Labor Minister Starr said earlier this session the farm improvement loans have been important in the winter works program. Last winter, $3,500,000—an increase over the previous year of 53 per cent—was taken out in loans by farmers.

Combined with home improvement loans under the National Housing Act, they brought to $19,000,000 the amount of credit extended by the banks for this kind of winter work, he said.

The Fisheries Improvement Loans Act is a parallel piece of legislation.

Evidence Is Overwhelming Pupils Not Being Educated As Well as They Should Be

MONTREAL (CP)—There is overwhelming evidence that Canadian children are not being educated as effectively as they should be, Dr. Neville Scarfe told the Canadian Conference on Education today.

The dean of education at the University of British Columbia, delivering the keynote address in English on "the aims of education in a free society," said there is nothing wrong with Canadian education that better-quality teachers will not put straight.

Rev. Henri F. Legare, rector of the University of Ottawa, delivered the keynote address in French.

He said religion is an indispensable part of education and that there cannot be a common Canadian philosophy of education, a common aim and purpose until there is a state-recognized plurality in education.

It had to be based on the fact that there are two races and cultures in Canada with real differences between them. There had to be true toleration —the toleration of men who believed they were all seeking the truth, but in different ways.

URGES CREATIVE THINKING

Dr. Scarfe said one of the main faults was that children are often being taught to memorize and regurgitate facts when the emphasis should be on teaching them to think creatively.

Another problem was that the teachers' freedom was restricted, that they were not adequately trusted and not given sufficient scope to teach in ways they knew to be better than the orthodox.

Dr. Scarfe said one reason for this restricted freedom lies in "the inadequate professional education they have received."

They needed as long and rigorous a preparation as doctors, architects, engineers and lawyers and this was just as true for those teaching in kindergarten as grade XIII.

Dean Scarfe said the chief faults in the educational system are "caused by the obsolete aims and procedures of the traditional, authoritarian and excessively academic school of thought with its emphasis on passive absorption of verbal information."

"The future must put far greater emphasis on the thinking process, on creativity, on self-directed inquiry, on problem-solving techniques.

"Far more effort and energy must be devoted to education rather than instruction. Curiosity, initiative and interest must be kept alive. Fact-finding and fact regurgitation must no longer be the primary purpose of schooling or examinations."

WOULD TRUST TEACHERS

And it was essential that teachers be given a far greater measure of freedom and trust "so that they can set an example of enthusiastic inquiry, independent initiative and courageous creativity."

Father Legard said the whole purpose of education is to make a student a man, to give him an insight into the meaning of his life in the world and after it. Religion provided a meaning, yet today there were movements to take religion out of education.

Teachers today had lost track of the purpose of education so much that they reduced it to a sort of animal training, having to do with "psychological habits, conditioned reflexes and sensorial memorization."

Has not the child a valid right to receive from his education the knowledge of those things which are to play important parts in his life?

"And is not religion just such knowledge which will help him find his bearings as a being-in-the-world?

"To separate the child from religion during his school career, to divorce religious teaching from his humanist and moral formation is to give him to understand at the very threshold of his intellectual life that religion is no more than a superfluous, insignificant element."

Inquiry Finds U-2 Pilot Obeyed Orders

WASHINGTON (AP)—A special board of inquiry has found that the pilot Francis Gary Powers generally complied with orders on his ill-fated flight over the Soviet Union, informed sources said today.

In the aftermath of extensive interrogation Powers is likely to be revealed as a man who met unexplained disaster and coped with it reasonably well. However, the Korean-id pilot was said not to have been able to shed much light on how his plane was forced down deep inside Russia May, 1, 1960.

John A. McCone, director of the Central Intelligence Agency, was scheduled to present his evaluation of the board's report today to a special Senate committee.

Powers, who had been sentenced to prison on spying charges, was released by the Soviet Union last month in exchange for Russian spy Rudolf Abel.

Since then, Powers has been kept out of sight by government interrogators, while facts concerning his capture, trial and imprisonment were investigated by the special board headed by retired federal Judge J. Barrett Prettyman.

Powers is understood to have contended that the force of his plane's speedy descent prevented action to destroy it.

Nevertheless, there is resentment among some members of Congress over the pilot's failure to destroy his plane and its equipment when it fell to Soviet soil. These members said there are five different methods of destroying the craft.

Military experts doubt Russian claims that anti-aircraft missiles brought it to earth from an altitude of more than 68,000 feet.

While the United States now has missiles that can reach substantially above 68,000 feet, military experts doubt Russia had like ones operational in May of 1960.

Sea Cadets Complete Designed Course in Weekend Cruise

A plague of mechanical breakdowns in the steering mechanism and in the gyro compass repeater of their ship failed to hinder the Sea Cadets of Royal Canadian Sea Cadet Corps "Quinte" from completing their cruise around Lake Ontario during the past weekend.

Despite time losses incurred by having to stop to effect repairs on five different occasions en route, in addition to a two-hour delay in leaving harbor due to a faulty chain drive in the steering mechanism of the ship, the Cadets were able to complete their assigned course and returned and arrive on time in port Sunday morning to attend a church parade to Bridge Street United Church and St. Michael's Church.

Although the entire cruise was imaginary as far as the actual movement of a ship through water was concerned, all of the attendant events were quite real and active for the 16 local cadets and the four visiting cadets from Picton.

Standard shipboard routine was carried out, decks were swabbed, mess were prepared and served, short wave communications were maintained, painting and maintenance duties were carried out by the cadets in addition to the attendant duties involved in keeping the ship on course.

The ship's course led from Belleville Harbor down the Bay of Quinte to the Adolphus Reach and out to the Main Duck Island. When the ship reached a point just south-east of Main Duck Island secret orders were opened and "Quinte" proceeded on a course which took her to Sydney Creek, Fort Niagara, Port Credit and back to Main Duck Island and thence back to her home port.

En route the ship's company was engaged in gunnery practice, landing parties and practised fire drills, abandon ship routine and action stations. The latter proved quite useful when an unknown assailant opened fire on "Quinte" during her run from Fort Niagara to Port Credit at 3.00 a.m. Sunday morning. Due to the quick response by "Quinte's" crew the assailant barred hail and ran before her identity could be established.

No apparent damage was sustained by "Quinte" although it was shortly after this encounter that the gyro compass ceased functioning. For the rest of the trip navigation was undertaken by sound bearings.

PROGRAM MAINTAINED

During the cruise a 24-hour short wave radio listening program was maintained. Over 150 receptions were logged with broadcasts from as far as Czechoslovakia, Japan, South Africa and Australia being received. The local group is developing a course in communications and as soon as a member passes the proficiency for a radio "ham" operator it is hoped to obtain and set up a short wave radio transmitter so that two-way contacts with short wave operators around the globe can be achieved.

Following the church parade on Sunday morning, in which officers and additional cadets from R.C.S.C. "Bluenell" of Picton participated, dinner was served in the ship's company and the guests aboard ship, the ship was subjected to a general clean-up and the lands were given shore leave until the next regular Sea Cadet meeting this Wednesday evening at 7.00 p.m.

Lads between the ages of 14 and 18 are invited to join the local Corps which has a few openings available for any cadets.

Over 75 Women Attend St. John's UCW Meeting

TWEED — Over 75 women from Tweed, Actinolite, Sulphide and surrounding area attended the recent first garden meeting of St. John's U.C.W. in the church parlor. The president, Mrs. Emerson Hodgins, welcomed the group and in her opening remarks stated a new organization is an answer to a long-felt need.

The work of the church is one, and women working together can accomplish greater things she said. "We live in a world of fears but with Gods help and guidance we can do great things," she quoted a song entitled "Give Your Best." There's only one way to do best and that's by giving the best that you have in you.

The president reminded the members that the supply parcels for Nelson House should be brought to the April meeting, also that the World Day of prayer is to be held in the Presbyterian church on March 9th. Mrs. H. Foster and Mrs. F. Bowerr had charge of the worship service, an the social hour.

The "Task of the Church" was the theme.

Mrs. Stan Walters sang a beautiful solo "The Holy Hour" accompanied by Miss Mabel Fraser.

Presidents, Mrs. Hodgins, introduced the guest speaker, the Rev. James Payton of Middleville, who will take over the pastoral charge of the Tweed United Church. Mr. Payton left the thought, that perhaps Christians themselves are to blame for this indifference, chiefly among young married people and teenagers. "We must ask ourselves what have we to offer to these people? He felt the new group of United Church Women should present a united front to meet such problems.

Thanks for his stimulating message were expressed by Mrs. Carman Desbarats.

Little Girl Gets Letter From Jackie

MONTREAL (CP) — Nine-year-old Angeliki Tolis's proudest possession is a letter from Jacqueline Kennedy, wife of the U.S. president.

Angeliki, who recently returned home from an extended holiday in Greece, received the note shortly after Mrs. Kennedy's visit to Greece last summer.

It reads:

"Dear Angeliki: I would like to thank you and the other girls from the elementary school of Palea Epidavros for the very pretty flowers and your very kind greeting to me when our boat arrived at Epidavros I hope one day to return to your beautiful village and I shall never forget the welcome I received when I arrived there. I would like also to send all of you my very best wishes. Sincerely, Jacqueline Kennedy."

Angeliki's parents decided to return for a year's visit to their Greek homeland and enrolled her in the village school to acquaint her with children her own age.

In June, 1961, when Mrs. Kennedy visited the country during a European tour, the townspeople decided to present her with flowers.

"I was chosen to give the flowers and a little speech of welcome because I was the only person there who spoke English fluently," Angeliki says.

GILEAD P.O.

In spite of a stormy day the ladies' Friendship Guild met recently in Gilead Community Hall in the afternoon and quilted a quilt for a neighbor.

At night the men and families numbering 34 arrived for a sumptuous pot-luck supper.

After the repast the Friendship Guild held its regular meeting. During the business part it was decided to have a church service in the fall. The building committee is to bring in a report of the balance of work to be done to complete the hall and an estimate of the cost at the next meeting.

Mr. and Mrs. Gerald Swan are the conveners for the March meeting.

The Young People had charge of the remaining portion with Graydon Pound leading the call to worship.

"More Love To Thee" was sung. Graydon led in prayer after which the following items were enjoyed: a Scripture reading by Cynthia Howes; meditation by Gordon Pound; Gordon read a poem; Harry Huffman gave a lovely guitar selection; Elizabeth Howes a reading, "A Birthday Calender Verse for February"; a reading by Olive Clare on "St. Valentine", preceded a piano and violin duet by Gary and Linda Ross and Nancy Huffman read "Valentine Day".

Several amusing contests were had with Bruce Swan, Gary Ross, Graydon and Gordon Pound conducting them. Prizes were given to those who had the most correct answers.

President Barbara Floyd welcomed the members and introduced two new members, Clara Ironside and Marjorie Hastings.

President Barbara announced the survey on the yellow pages for the Red Telephone Book been completed on time and thanked all the ladies for their assistance and a special thank-you to Thelma Freestone and Helen McDonald.

Carm Mott reported the bridge marathon running smoothly. A dessert bridge will be held at the Centre later in March.

GUEST SPEAKER

With the completion of business Gwen Brain introduced speaker for the evening a member of the Kiwanis Ladies' Auxiliary, Ina Bellfield. Her subject was "South Africa".

Mrs. Bellfield came to Canada with her husband and three children about four years ago, from Pearl, a city of 35,000 population in South Africa. Life in South Africa moves at a more leisurely pace than in Canada, due no doubt to the warmer climate. In Pearl, South Africa, the temperature ranged from 80 to 105 degrees F.

The population of South Africa is mixed with about three million white people, ten to 11 million Bantu, about one and a half million of mixed blood and about a half million Asiatics. All are segregated.

HIGH EDUCATION STANDARDS

The standard of education is high. The whites have their own schools and the blacks have theirs. The children are taken to school by bus or if they live quite a distance from the school the children live in hostels and go to their homes about once in two weeks. The children have to learn two languages, English and Afrikaan. All sports are played after school hours, but all must participate in sports. The big game for the boys is rugby.

There are no televisions sets in South Africa but everyone finds plenty of entertainment.

The principal Church is the Dutch Reform Church. There are others in lesser size.

Mickey McDonald thanked Mrs. Bellfield on behalf of the Ladies' Auxiliary for her interesting talk.

Lunch was served by Helen McDonald and her group and a social hail hour followed.

Russian Ambassador's Wife Misses Her Work As Scientist, Engineer

OTTAWA (CP) — The austere facade of the Soviet embassy and the severe simplicity of its interior are in contrast with the warm charm of its first lady.

An attentive and thoughtful hostess, Mrs. Amazasp Arutiunian, wife of the ambassador, likes entertaining at both large and small parties. "The best thing is to find friends."

She says, however, that she misses her work as a scientist and engineer.

Although Mrs. Arutiunian is an Armenian, she was born and brought up in Tbilisi, capital of Georgia, a republic near the Black Sea. She attended the industrial institute there, studying the chemical and technical processes of ceramic and glass production.

The six-year course included practical training at the glass factory on Gorki and the glass and china factory in Leningrad.

After graduating with a engineering degree as a specialist in ceramics, she went to Armenia to work as head of the science laboratory in a gypsum and alabaster factory in Yerevan, the capital. Later she became chief engineer of a china factory there.

PREFERS WORKING

She met her husband in 1955 while he was visiting Yerevan and they were married a year later, living in Moscow until their Canadian posting three years ago.

"For a working woman it is very difficult to stay at home," she said in an interview.

"I would like to be back working at my specialty. I like my profession; it combines science, chemistry and art. One works with beautiful things."

To keep up with developments Mrs. Arutiunian gets special magazines and technical publications from the Soviet Union.

Since coming to Canada she has travelled through much of Ontario and has been to Fogwash, N.S., twice — once when Cyrus Eaton received the Lenin Peace Prize and again when spaceman Yuri Gagarin visited there.

During a recent six - week trip home she visited her daughter Karine, 16, in Erevan, and her sister, an engineer-geologist in Tbilisi.

Karine, a daughter by a former marriage, would like to be a research worker in mathematics, she says.

As for Ottawa, Mrs. Arutiunian says she finds it "cozy," especially in the spring with its flowers and greenery.

"But after Moscow I found it very quiet and with very few people. Of course, there's no place like home."

STARTLING PROGRAM

MANCHESTER, England (CP) — Bookmaker Ernie Halfpenny was watching a television western when a shot rang out and a bullet buried itself in the wall above his head. "I thought one of the cowboys had got out of the TV set," he said. It turned out that several rounds of ammunition had got mixed in his coal.

Holloway United C.W. Plan Bazaar

The second general meeting of the Holloway Street United Church Women was held Wednesday afternoon, in the church parlors. In spite of the inclement weather, there was a good attendance. The meeting was chaired by the president, Mrs. C. Holmes.

Mrs. H. Outtingdyke and Mrs. A. Mitchell's units were in charge of the afternoon program.

The devotional period was led by Mrs. R. Way, with the Scripture lesson read by Mrs. H. Jose. Mrs. Way, taking as her text, "What is the church?" said in part; " Where two or three are gathered together in My name, there I am also". A building is called a church and its membership called a church but the real church is the whole company of God's believing peoples on earth and in Heaven. Whether a church be plain or stately, large or small, rich or poor, old or new, it is a great church if God is worshipped there."

Visiting is one of the church's biggest activities and when ridding it is visiting the ungodly and lonely, as well as those already in the church. People are often lonelier in big or busy places. Do we show stranger enough attention when they come to the big churches? Remember there is more to religion than just waving war against evil. Sinners sometimes find help in fellowship and we should be ready to offer that fellowship to rich or poor, good or bad. God made man a social man - to be happy in the company of others."

Mrs. I. Rollins rendered two lovely solos "Smilin' Through," and "Alice Blue Gown," accompanied at the piano by Mrs. E. Hubbs.

Mrs. T. T. Towsehd favored with two humorous readings, "The Two Boys" and "My Pa", during the business period, plans were started for the annual "Spring Tea", a tea and hat Fashion show and fall bazaar.

A Valentine contest was conducted by Mrs. J. Bush and Mrs. N. Brown, which served to keep the crowd for lunch and the fellowship half-hour.

SPEAKING of MANNERS

PATRICIA LEWIS

GRAMMAR SCHOOL STRESSES GOOD MANNERS

"Don't talk on the phone when you have candy in your mouth."

This is one of the basic rules of telephone etiquette being absorbed by attentive Grade 7 graders in a course being given in the Classroom, held in Housing, New York. In our neck of the woods, the scholastic score-keepers don't overlook all branches of courtesy as a elementary.

My daughter, an enthusiastic member of the class, took the assault out of her mouth and explained the doings to us. The course is short, but snappy; and could be considered slightly extra-curricular, since part of it is conducted in the hall.

The telephone company very courteously installed a battery of ponies in the third-grade homeroom and connected them to an equal number of instruments in the corridor.

The children work in teams. One child stalls the monitor of the connecting phone, and another answers it. Under the watchful eye and ear of Susan Savino, their teacher, the children then hold conversations that run the social gamut.

During their two-way talkathons, the youngsters practice how to give and take messages courteously and accurately, how to speak distinctly on the phone, how to issue invitations and how to accept or decline politely. They also learn how to place orders over the phone and how not to — politely, of course — call the police and fire departments in case of emergency.

Since the course is part of the homeroom routine and not just for fun, the students make notes on the etiquette of phoning as they go along. I cribbed the following from my daughter's notebook:

Don't chew candy when you phone. Gum, too.

Be nice to the operator, when you speak to her for any reason.

Before dialing, write down the number, so you'll know what you're dialing.

Hold the mouthpiece near your mouth.

If you get a wrong number, say "I'm sorry." Don't just hang up.

Don't talk fast. Also, don't shout.

Don't cough or sneeze into the phone.

Give your name when someone answers the phone at a friend you want.

If you're a party line, talk just a few minutes.

Let the phone ring about six times, so the person you're calling has time to answer.

Sign up the phone gently, so you don't bang in your friend's ear.

Judging from this list, we'd say that our third-grader has the phone situation well in hand. The lessons already have had a marked effect on the telephone technique around our house. Now there's no shouting, coughing, sneezing or banging on the phone, and no sourballs stuck in the mouthpiece. In this case, at least, mastering good phone manners was mostly a matter of course.

THE FAMILY COUNCIL

Mark F. — If our friends hear of her plan, I'll be a laughing stock.

Doreen F. — No one need know. It isn't serious to me, and I need a test.

Mark F. — There are just the three of us, Doreen, myself and your 12-year-old son. Yet a hint feels the only way she can get a real rest is to spend a week in a large hotel around the corner.

Can you imagine how it will look to our friends who meet Doreen on the street and then see her form time to time, Majestic? Instead of walking home? I know she's keyed up. We've just finished with the painters and she's been up till all hours scraping their mess off the tiles and chrome and setting the place to rights. But she can rest at home. Dad and I both will be quiet and leave her alone.

Her idea will make us look like unbearable monsters!

Doreen F. — I defy any hotel to rest. I can't get a bouquet of flowers in my own house! Mark's a dear and so is our boy, but I've tried it before and it's no go. Wherever my eye happens to land I see something that needs doing. Besides, a captain hem that's crooked scraping their mess off the tiles over while waxing. And when the phone rings, I can't bear to know she's keyed up. We've even though it's only a while he just finished with the painters.

Mainly, I want to experience a Sunday morning when I can not when I hear my hungry not when I hear my hungry family yell for me to start breakfast or when I must join Mark for a chore. I haven't had that luxury for years. I can't get it at home, Mark needn't fear and I need a neighbor. I'll figure out some explanation.

The Council: Maybe the reason Mark can't understand Doreen's desire to rest at home is that he can! He's had no trouble banishing care for a few hours. Still, he has a conscience. He's confident is on top of any domestic situation that arises. Doreen hasn't that comfortable assurance, even while snoozing. She prefers not to hear, and so know what's going on — just for a brief time.

Is such escape possible? Is it useful? Is it wise? Of course it is — when it's a day for breather arises, when fresh perspectives must be summoned and all of Mark's and Doreen's proposed "retreat" will look to any neighbors who hear of it, or who observe Doreen in the act. So what? He and she know what's up. Good friends may try to make something of it. Real friends will understand, approve and possibly imitate!

Psychologists find merit in occasional marital vacations. There's often an abrasive quality to the day-in and day-out shoulder rubbing of the husband and wife. A short break in the sameness, a leap out of the "rut," can work wonders. There's an appetite for some emotional stock-taking for both the vacationer and the mate left at home.

Thus, both Mark and Doreen will have a quiet chance for reflection and self-rediscovery. An interesting trip arises in Ingliwes like Doreen, according to others who've "liked." After sleeping off the first layer of fatigue, they feel like going home quickly. The rest of the allotted time becomes a burden. To save face, they try to stick it out. If perchance Doreen goes down for a walk and sees a hotel and, while strolling with a 12-pr-said on she may say, "What am I doing here alone?" Home and family will loom precious and irresistible.

One big Doreen: Pick a hotel at the other end of town, for less explaining.

Library Board Holds 'Library Tea'

DESERONTO — The Deseronto Library Board sponsored a "Library Tea" on Wednesday afternoon of last week. The purpose of the tea was to introduce special Lenice reading materials to the townspeople. Members of women's groups from all churches in town were specially invited and about 100 attended.

Some new books had been ordered for the occasion and some books were borrowed from the Canadian Register, the Ontario Diocesan Book Centre, United, Baptist, Presbyterian and Pentecostal churches.

Also on view for those interested were religious works by V. Shabbert which were loaned by courtesy of Alex Adams.

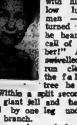
TEA IN REFERENCE ROOM

For the tea the reference room had been transformed into a tea room with green plants decorating the window sills. Tea tables were set up with silver tea services.

The guests were received by Mrs. E. Tunnicliffe, Deseronto, assisted by Mrs. E. F. Gill and Mrs. George A. Wakelin, members of the board. Tea was poured by Mrs. James Westerhof and Mrs. J. McEwen. The junior hostesses were Miss Esther McTaggart, assistant librarian, and Miss Cathy Schell.

The members of the Library Board are well pleased with the results of this first effort to promote a series of community projects.

Careers for Girls



Occupational and Physical Therapy

Miss Doris Clark, Master of Social Work, has had special training in psychology and vocational guidance. In preparing this series, "Careers for Girls," Miss Clark has interviewed career women in the fields she is covering, as well as employment and guidance counsellors.

Miss Clark's human relations column, "Successful Living" runs regularly in The Ontario Intelligencer.

By Doris C. Clark, M.S.W.

(Fifth in a series for teenagers on Careers for Girls)

Joe Black stood in the great woods with his fellow lumberjacks and turned when he heard the call of "Timber!" As he swivelled he was clear of the falling tree but he tripped. With a split second the forest giant fell and he was pinned by one leg under a heavy branch.

His comrades rushed to release him by heaving together on the branch. Finally he was dragged clear, but with his one leg hanging limp and crushed. He was rushed sixty miles to the nearest hospital.

The doctor's verdict was: "The leg is broken in three places: tissue badly bruised and swollen; muscles torn. Recovery to the point of full usefulness of the leg is doubtful."

Would he never walk again? What a difficult thing it was for this lumberman, who had rejoiced in his strength, to face such a possibility!

It was the hospital therapist who brought hope back to him. At first she just talked. Then, little about his life and family. She asked questions about what hobbies he enjoyed.

LEATHER WORK

Here she found her clue. As a boy he had been a Boy Scout and had received a merit badge for his skill in handicraft. Soon she had him designing a scroll for a leather wallet.

Following her pattern, he cut out sections from a piece of fine calf skin. She showed him how to imprint his design on the skin; how to punch small holes all around the edge and bind the pieces together with narrow strips of lacing which were used as thread.

It was amazing how quickly time passed when he had something to do. Then when the cast was removed from his leg, injured muscles needed massage and exercise. She helped him here too, encouraging him to move his foot, wiggle his toes, to try to stand on it. Then an effort to bring back circulation and strength.

Every movement hurt at first but the therapist was gentle and patient, and by little by little the lumberman gained confidence to try more actively. His wallet-making and his exercises made the days more interesting hopeful than brooding about the future; and best of all, helped him to greet his family with a smile.

It took months, but the day came when he walked on a sound leg. Through the skill of the doctors helped by that quiet miracle worker, the physical and occupational therapist, Joe Black rose whole again.

BENEFITS PATIENT

Where a therapist works, no one lies in bed to become more ill. Patients are up the days go by. She learns in her training that everybody who is sick or injured should begin working to get better from the minute he or she is put to bed. Even if it is only moving his fingers, or making circular motions with his arm, some activity can prevent muscles from becoming flabby, and help to keep the patient interested.

Occupational therapy and physical therapy are taught as a three-year combined course as separate specialties in six Canadian universities. Such subjects as anatomy, psychology, chemistry, medicine, physics, help the student to understand the human body and the human mind.

Training and practical experience in the use of therapeutic agents such as electrotherapy (use of light rays in medicine), remedial exercise, manual and creative skills, are part of the course. Thus equipped, the therapist can help bring back life to useless limbs; she can help sufferers from long illnesses to take an interest in occupations new to them and to try out their muscles.

Where a person has lost a leg or an arm, she can help him to overcome his handicap and to find an occupation which he is able to pursue.

CONDITIONS OF WORK

Salaries in this new "helping profession" are increasing. The scale recommended by the professional association for 1962 begins with a grade one salary of $4,000, annually, going up by stages, as responsibility increases, to a grade seven salary of $7,704 for a hospital supervisor with a staff of twenty therapists.

Vacations are three or four weeks annually, depending on rank. The work week is 35 or 40 hours, and in most hospitals and centres the therapist can now share in a pension plan.

MORE NEEDED

Canada needs its experts. About one-half of the graduates are employed by hospitals across the country. In rehabilitation centres they are important members of the personnel-team which restore patients to a maximum of healthy activity.

Approximately 70 graduates in physical and occupational therapy are now in private practice in Canada. Some are teachers or professors at university. A substantial share of the work of rehabilitation of victims of war disease is being carried by therapists who have also served on United Nation's aid.

As a member of this profession which brings new hope to the sick and injured, your service should begin working to get better from the minute he or she is put to bed. Even if it is only moving his fingers, or making circular motions with his arm, some activity can prevent muscles from becoming flabby, and help to keep the patient interested.

Pancake For Breakfast, Lunch or Dinner

by Mary Moore

According to kind reports from you the pancake recipe I gave you last year was the best.

But here I am giving you yet another. These are puffy and thick and we had them for dessert, of all times, on Sunday night for dinner.

Furthermore they require some biscuit mix. So if you have biscuit mix on hand try this new variation for Shrove Tuesday.

MONDAY

Dinner Menu

Black Bean Soup; Cold Plate of Assorted Cold Cuts including Liverwurst; Tossed Green Salad Rolls; Prune or Apricot Whip; Coffee.

PUFF PANCAKES:

2 eggs, 1¼ cups milk, 2 1-3 cups packaged biscuit mix, 2 tablespoons sugar, ¼ cup melted butter or shortening or cooking oil.

In a large bowl beat the eggs until thick and soft peaks will hold shape. Add milk and stir in biscuit mix and sugar. Stir just until blended. Then, fold in oil and stir just until smooth. If you're using an electric griddle set at 350 deg. and, of course, do not grease it. (Pancakes contain enough fat to prevent sticking.) Grease the hot pan or griddle. When evenly puffed and bubbles form and edges begin to look dry, turn and cook and brown other side. Serve at once with butter and maple syrup.

NOTES:

1) Since these pancakes are at least ¼" thick be sure to cook long enough so if you would like even thicker pancakes reduce milk to 1 cup. 2) This amount makes 8 to 10 medium-large pancakes. 4) If these are to be served with your main course for tomorrow's dinner a good meat accompaniment is slices of peameal bacon.

APPLE PANCAKES (sometimes called Apple Flapjacks):

1 tablespoon shortening, 1 tablespoon sugar, 2 eggs, 1½ cups sifted flour, 2 teaspoon baking powder, ½ teaspoon salt, ½ cup milk, 1 cup apples, chopped very finely, 1 cup milk.

Cream shortening and sugar, add beaten eggs, flour sifted with baking powder and cinnamon, and stir finely chopped apples. Then add milk gradually to make a medium batter. Bake on griddle until puffed and holey and turn over and brown other side. These are rich served as an overlapping border around a platterful of sausages or pork chops or roast pork. They are sometimes made quite small — 2½" in diameter. Of course when served with meat they require no syrup.

H-S Assoc. Discusses Child Care

The Prince Charles-Queen Mary Home and School Association meeting was held recently with the president, Mrs Taylor, presiding.

During the business portion of the meeting the minutes were read and the treasurer's report revealed a bank balance of $116.62. It was moved that two delegates be sent to the Home and School Convention held in Toronto April 25th and 26th. It was decided to have the March meeting in the form of a bridge and euchre party to be held in Prince Charles school. Grades 5, 6, 7 and 8 will sell tickets. There will also be a homebaking table at this event.

Mr. Craighead introduced special guests, Mr. Kerr, Children's Aid Society, and other members of the panel. Dr. Spring acted as moderator and introduced Mr. Adamson, Miss Maher, and Mr. Rowsdoel, who each in turn gave a most interesting picture of a child's life from birth to teenager. Various questions were answered by the panel following the talks.

Mr. Parker expressed sincere appreciation to the members of the panel, after which refreshments were served.

Bank's Guard Pulls Gun, Fires at Robbers in London Breaking Gentleman's Pact

By KEITH POWER

LONDON (Reuters) — An unsporting guard who pulled a gun during a holdup here incensed the underworld and provoked wrath from certain sections of the law-abiding public.

The five shots he fired foiled the robbery, but they also put holes in a kind of gentlemen's agreement between unarmed crooks and unarmed protectors of society.

The shots echoed in Parliament where disturbed legislators asked Home Secretary R. A. Butler, in charge of Britain's law enforcement, a couple of pointed questions about gun licences.

Normally, British holdups follow a "cash and carry" pattern.

With policemen gunless, thugs descend on their victims brandishing iron bars and clubs, lay about for a few seconds, and escape, they hope. Sometimes the getaway vehicle is a motorcycle.

DEATHS DOWN

All this may appear full of old world charm but in Britain it has helped to keep down the mortality rate among bank messengers, guards, policemen and innocent bystanders.

But, last December, things changed. Two stolen trucks rammed an armored car carrying £100,000 in wages through the dockland district of Stepney.

Eight bandits wearing gas masks jumped out of the trucks and tore off the back doors of the armored car with grappling hooks. They were carrying revolvers, but—conforming with tradition—the guns were imitations.

When the doors sprang open, guard Frederick Dighton, 48, opened up from the inside with a .22 - calibre revolver. He winged a bandit in the shoulder.

CARRIED FOR YEARS

A subsequent newspaper inquiry disclosed that the bank company involved in the payload has been equipping its guards with guns "for many years" although this was the first time one of them had been forced to use firepower.

Among the critics was the chief of a big British security agency who said: "We believe that the carrying of lethal weapons by guards places them and the public in jeopardy."

The Guardian of Manchester commented: "There is no place for private armies in a civilized community."

Radiation Belt Seen No Hazard In Space Travel

WASHINGTON (AP) — The U.S. Air Force said Friday that the lower Van Allen radiation belt now appears to be no hazard for space travellers, contrary to earlier opinions.

There is another layer farther out but air force scientists expressed optimism about what will be shown by later tests there.

The announcement covered results of a year - long study based on information obtained from a scientific package aboard what the air force referred to only as an "Agena satellite."

It said:

"The Van Allen radiation belt, once thought to be a hazard to space pilots, may no longer be a problem in manned space travel, through the doughnut-shaped ring about the earth . . . Data obtained thus far indicates that the belt is only one-half as big in the area of major radiation concentration as originally surmised, although it is perhaps six times as 'hot.'"

Even though this heart of the belt has six times the radiation intensity previously estimated, a space vehicle would pass through it quicker than previously believed and thus be subject to less bombardment by protons, the air force said.

A space pilot would have to spend a full week in the zone to receive enough radiation to cause death, air force scientists estimate. Instead, he would pass through in minutes.

THE HARDER THE JOB...

the bigger the need for a Chevy Heavy!

The tougher the job, the harder the haul, the more reasons to turn to a Chevy Heavy. It is built to take it and powered to make it on every job. The ability to handle more work and to keep going, day in day out, has made Chevrolet the name that truck men look to for durability and dependability.

In Chevy Heavies you find truck power tailored to the job. There's a new meaning to High-Torque power in the husky 348 V8 engine, and on the heavier haul let the new mighty 409 V8* muscle in and handle things with ease.

Durability is another reason for owning a Chevy Heavy. It starts with the mighty ladder-type frame of high-quality steel. It includes the extra-tough, extra-strong Independent Front Suspension that combines with Variable-Rate Rear Springs to take the shakes and shocks out of rough rides. And finally there's the unitized construction of the comfortable, built-to-last cab that adds rugged good looks to every Chevrolet Truck.

Banking Board May Conflict With Election

OTTAWA (CP) — The new royal commission on banking and finance intends to go ahead with its public hearings in Canada despite a likely conflict with federal electioneering.

Open sittings will begin in Victoria on Monday, March 12, and progress eastward.

Sometime in its session a federal general election will be precipitated. Thus the commission could run the risk of becoming at times just one more stop on the hustings informants say if the election is soon and bad enough the commission will adjourn.

The commission will be making the first extensive study of Canada's banking and monetary system since 1933, when a similar body headed by Lord Macmillan of London submitted a major report that led to establishment of the Bank of Canada.

STUDY ALL FACETS

Included in the new study will be interest rates, the money supply, the exchange rate on the Canadian dollar, the government's relations with the Bank of Canada and operations of the chartered banks.

Much of the commission's chores will be with economics and monetary theory, but it will have to test this theory against current practice. And it is likely that its interest will be shared by active politicians, especially if the election is fought on economic issues.

When the commission rears is the sort of thing that happened in the 1956 federal general election, when the central issue was the recession of the day. Prime Minister Diefenbaker contended that the recession and unemployment stemmed from the tight-money policy of the former Liberal government.

Then, about three weeks before the March 31 voting, the then governor of the Bank of Canada, James E. Coyne, said in his annual report that the recession did not begin until the latter part of 1957 — when the Conservatives were in office — and was not caused by monetary policy. He said there was no tight - money policy in the sense that the money supply was contracted.

Liberal Leader Pearson said the Coyne report made "nonsense" of the Conservative argument. The prime minister countered by quoting the late James Muir, then president of the Royal Bank of Canada, as saying that the tight-money policy had begun two years earlier.

And so it went—right down to the wire.

Successful Living

(A Canadian Social Worker Helps with Human Problems)

Can She Divorce for Desertion?

DORIS GLASER

DEAR DORIS:—I am 36 years old and my girl is 31. We have been living together for two years and we've got a baby girl 19 months old.

My girl was married when she was 16 and they lived together for about two weeks. Then she went away and she doesn't know where.

She had to support herself till we moved together. What can she do? Can she sue him and get a divorce for cruelty and desertion?—HAPPY FATHER.

DEAR HAPPY—The only grounds for divorce in Canada are adultery—so that's out, unless the husband wanted to do the suing.

If she has had a good hunt for him, and cannot find him, it might be possible to get a Court Order declaring him dead. Consult a lawyer, or ask the regional welfare officer for direction in legal aid.

* * *

DEAR DORIS:—On my birthday we had a party. My friends bought me the "Twist" record. We were all doing the twist until my Dad told us to stop.

O.K., so we stopped and didn't say anything.

I know the twist isn't a very nice dance, but just between us we were all having fun. It's not a dance I'd do in public, but at private parties we have fun doing it.

Now he has hidden my record. Do you think that's fair?

After all, that's not the only record I can twist to if I want to twist. Everyone of my friends does the twist except me, because he won't let me.—EMBARRASSED.

* * *

DEAR EMBARRASSED—The worst part is to stand out like a sore thumb when everybody's doing it. Isn't it?

But at 14 it is still wise to do as you are told. Take comfort in knowing your family cares about what you do. Some don't.

I agree that the twist is not pretty to look at. It can be fun, though. When I was slightly older than you I was doing the Charleston, which is also quite a wiggle. So I haven't a leg to stand on!

DEAR DORIS:—I too, would like to add a word to the letter you received from the widower in his forties.

There seem to be group activities planned for the under forty, teen-agers and over sixty groups. But the 40-60 year age group seems to be forgotten. I went to a "Y" activity for unmarried persons and found it overrun with twenty and thirty year olds.

I wish a club could be formed for the 40-60 year age group. People who have experienced a happy marriage are more lonely than those who have not.—LONESOME WIDOW.

* * *

DEAR LONESOME:—It's hard to be forty and alone. But widows are staging recoveries every day.

Start something. Your own bridge club, perhaps, meeting every other week.

And talk to your "Y" director, who is always open to a new idea—especially if the person who offers it is willing to help.

* * *

CONFIDENTIAL TO PZD UP:—If you are still living in your parents' home, it would be up to your father to ask your husband to leave. However, I would suggest that your first step in family counselling in order to see whether you cannot save your marriage. In Belleville your resource is the Children's Aid Society, 53 West Moira Street.

Scientists Propose Creating National Studies Institute

OTTAWA (CP)—Two Defence Research Board scientists have proposed creation of an Institute of National Studies to investigate scientifically Canada's needs for long-term problems.

Dr. Walter Gordon Petrie, assistant chief scientist and head of operational research for the board, and Donald A. Grant, a member of the board's systems analysis group, make their suggestion in an article in the current issue of the Queen's Quarterly, published by Queen's University, Kingston.

Problems which they consider might be studied by such an institute are automation, arms control and air travel and aircraft control.

REACTION NOT KNOWN

Reaction of the government, it says, to this completely unofficial proposal is not known though the government in recent months has adopted new measures to encourage research, both civilian and military, in industry.

It is considered possible that a proposal incorporating the main ideas of Dr. Petrie and Dr. Grant will be placed before the government. It could be submitted by university groups or scientific associations if not from the government service.

Dr. Petrie and Mr. Grant say that an Institute of National Studies would be a national asset because it would apply the scientific method to make all elements of important problems clear to those who have to make decisions—that is, in the main government.

GOVERNMENT WOULD PAY

They suggest that such an institute be established in a university environment but be supported and used by government.

They calculate that an institute would require expenditure of some $700,000 annually and suggest that it be staffed by 30 professional analysts.

To give an indication of the type of study they are thinking of, they cite the mathematics analysis of arms control by another board scientist, G. H. Kaye, Mr. Kaye's study deals with the control of numbers of long-range missiles in the hands of the United States and Russia if contested limit was number possessed by either side does not get out of serious balance the danger of nuclear war is diminished.

Hawks Defeat Habs; Hull Scores "43"

Wings Nudge Rangers

By THE CANADIAN PRESS

The struggle for the National Hockey League's fourth and last playoff position appears to have swung in Detroit's favor.

The Red Wings went into weekend play trailing New York Rangers by four points, but won and tied while the Blueshirts lost twice.

That leaves the Wings just one point shy of fourth and they have the advantage on the schedule, having 10 more games to play to New York's seven.

Detroit tied Montreal Canadiens 3-3 at Montreal Saturday night, they whipped the Rangers 4-2 at New York Sunday night in the opening game of a home-and-home series. Rangers and Wings meet again Tuesday night in Detroit.

Toronto Maple Leafs dumped the Rangers 3-1 at Toronto Saturday night and clobbered the hapless Boston Bruins 5-1 at Boston Sunday night.

In the only other game, Chicago Black Hawks defeated Montreal Canadiens 5-2 in a penalty-studded match at Chicago Sunday night.

SCORES GRID GOAL

Bobby Hull scored his 43rd goal of the season for the Black Hawks, and broke the seven year old record set by retired Montreal Maroon Howie Morenz of the Canadiens in 1944-45 and equalled by Bernie Geoffrion, also of Montreal, last season.

The husky left winger has only seven games remaining to play and needs a goal-a-game clip to tie the mark—a tall order. But he has scored 19 goals in his last 24 games.

Parker MacDonald of Sydney, N.S. scored two of Detroit's goals and New York Sunday night. The scoring ring finally opened and closed the scoring. He last got a goal at the last period putting the lid on a late New York rally.

Gordie Howe and Marc Boileau polled Detroit's other goals while Andy Hebenton and defenceman Ivy Spencer scored for the Rangers.

At Montreal, the Wings played well enough to beat the injury - riddled Canadiens, but still had to come from behind to tie.

FALLS BEHIND

Alex Delvecchio rapped home Detroit's first goal with just 21 seconds gone of the first period. Then the Wings fell behind 2-1 with Claude Provost tying it up at the 16-minute mark of the second.

Henri Richard and Gilles Tremblay counted for Canadiens.

Richard, a key man in Canadiens' attack, broke his right arm when dumped into the boards midway through the last period and is feared lost for possibly six weeks. That would put him out of action for the balance of the schedule and possibly the Stanley Cup playoffs as well.

Canadiens also played their weekend games without defencemen Doug Harvey and Dickie Moore and centre Jean Beliveau. Both are nursing groin ailments, neither of which is considered serious.

Bob Nevin scored in the last period mapped a 1-1 tie and gave Toronto its win over Rangers Saturday night.

Red Kelly potted Toronto's two other goals but lost one to an empty New York net with just 23 seconds left in the game. Baton scored for the Rangers.

The Leafs, also plagued by injuries, lost centre Dave Keon late in the second period. Keon pulled a muscle in his thigh and was unable to make the trip to Boston for Sunday night's game.

George Armstrong and Eddie Shack scored twice for the Leafs at Boston.

At Chicago, Hull also drew an assist and moved just two points behind pace-setting Bathgate in the league individual scoring race. Bathgate has 78 points, Hull 76.

Other Chicago's scorers were Murray Balfour, Jerry Melnyk, Pierre Pilote and Bob Turner. Billy Hicke and Geoffrion scored for Canadiens.

Campbell Wins Baton Rouge

BATON ROUGE, La. (AP)—Joe Campbell picked up his first tournament victory of the year Sunday by capturing the $20,000 Baton Rouge Golf Open with a record-smashing 274, eight strokes under par.

He fired final rounds of 67 and 68 to finish the rain - soaked event two strokes ahead of Bob Rosburg and $2,500.

Jerry Magee of Toronto, finished out of the money with 76-71-69-75—290.

Campbell beat by one stroke the tournament record of 275 set at the 6,411 - yard Baton Rouge Country Club course in 1954 by Sam Snead.

Adds $1,500 To Personal Pot

SAN JUAN, P.R. (CP)—George Knudson of Toronto is digging up little pots of gold on the Caribbean golf tour.

The 23-year-old Canadian, who took time off from the rough United States touring trail to enter the Wru Caribbean events, captured his second tournament in three weeks Sunday.

He won $1,500 for his first-place finish in the Puerto Rico Open, running his 1952 winnings to $8,256. Knudson won the Mar. acaibo, open and $1,500 two weeks ago and picked up $400 in the Caracas Open Feb. 25.

Sunday's triumph came when he fired a par 71 over the 6,305 - yard Berwind Country Club course for a 72-hole total of 280.

Knudson's performance sent him into record place for the Caribbean Cup, to be awarded after the final tournament of the circuit at Jamaica next week. He has 60 points. Don Whitt of Fort Worth, Tex., is second in a four-way tie for second prizes at 282 Sunday leads with 68.

Frank Whitby of Kitchener had 70-71—283 for 4th place, good for $112.

West Point Defeats RMC

KINGSTON (CP)—The United States Military Academy won its third straight game in the annual hockey series with Canada's Royal Military College here Saturday night.

The West Pointers survived two periods of constant pressure, then added two goals in the final stanza to down RMC Redmen 3-2.

It was the 31st time the teams had met. RMC has won 17, West Point 12, and one game finished as a draw.

The Big Seven

By THE CANADIAN PRESS

Bobby Hull of Chicago Black Hawks moved to 43rd goal of the season and also drew an assist Sunday night to move into a tie with Bathgate for second spot in the National Hockey League individual scoring race.

Hull now has 76 points while Bathgate, held to just one goal in two weekend outings, has 78. Hull leads Gordie Howe of Detroit Red Wings by one goal. Howe scored Sunday night and tied Stan Mikita of Chicago, held pointless, for third. Each has 68 points.

SCORE FOUR ASSISTS

Frank Mahovlich of Toronto Maple Leafs collected four assists in his record - breaking fifth spot with 68 points.

Alex Delvecchio of the Red Wings scored his 23rd goal and also picked up two assists for 66 points. Teammate Ted Lindsay, Toronto Maple Leafs' Bob Pulford and Montreal Canadiens' Bert Olmstead dropped to seventh place with 39 points.

DUCK PROSPECTS POOR

FARGO, N.D. (CP) — Waterfowl production on the Prairies will not immediately be good this year despite heavy snowfall, a United States expert said here.

H. R. (Bud) Morgan, former North Dakota game and fish commissioner and now special representative of the U.S. National Wildlife Federation, predicted that duck habitats in the Prairie provinces and North and South Dakota will be poor this summer.

Morgan feels that any heavy runoff from this year's snow will disappear below the surface.

Rollins Win Over Joyces, Vagdens Lose

The Bellevville Industrial Hockey League wound up its regular schedule last night when Rollins Construction whipped pennant-winning Joyce Real Estate 8-3 and Napanee Pringle's Falcons downed Vagden Millis by a 7-1 score.

Playoffs will get underway next week with Joyces meeting Rollins and Napanee clashing with Booth TV's. The semi-finals will be best-of-three series with the finals to be best-of-five.

Joyces and Napanees ended the schedule tied in points for first place but Joyces were given the top position when they outscored Napanee 83 goals to 57. Joyces were thus allowed to play their semi-final opponents, and despite last night's defeat, chore Rollins Construction.

Rollins outclassed the Real Estate crew in every department last night. After Joyces opened the scoring, Rollins notched seven in a row before the losers scored again. It was 1-1 at half time but Joyces came up in the second half.

Jack Hudgins, with two goals and one assist, Gary McMillan and Doug Lucas, with two goals and an assist each, paraded the Rollins attack. George Crabb and Wayne Walle had the Joyces' goals. Walle also picked up three assists, as did Gary Little, while Jack Hudgins and Jack Lucas and Jim Covendale each had one.

Jacki Elliott, returning to the Joyce lineup after being out with a shoulder injury, scored one goal and assisted on another. Wayne Fox and Jim Sheridan had the other assists with Hylle Bryant assisting on one.

Napanee took a slim 3-1 lead in the first half of their game but pulled away from there with five unanswered markers in the second half.

Pat Hayes and Bob Bartch triggered two goals apiece for the Falcons with the others going to Harvey Rombough, Don Aylesworth and Jerry Brady. Doug Yeamans and Dave Brady each drew two assists, Bob McNeil, Aylesworth, Les Fish, J. Brady, Bartch and Carl Gray had one each.

Norm Richards tallied Vagden's lone goal, unassisted.

Following is the final league standing.

Jay, Cepeda Still 'Out'

Colavito Gets $48,500

NEW YORK (AP) — Pitcher Joey Jay and first-baseman Orlando Cepeda are the last of the big-game holdouts, heading a list of 18 players who have not signed for the 1952 major league baseball season.

Rocky Colavito of Detroit Tigers was the latest of the stars to sign when he agreed to terms Sunday after a four-day holdout. His American League salary will be reported $48,500.

Colavito, who took part in a Tigers' drill soon after agreeing with general manager Rick Ferrell's office, got $38,000 last year for hitting 42 home runs, batting in 140 and ringing up a .290 average. He has outright more than $50,000 this year.

Jay, who won 21 games for Cincinnati Reds' National League champions a year ago, has offered to buy his contract for $200,000 from the Reds so he can make a deal for himself. General manager Bill DeWitt of the Reds has refused and indicates the 26 - year - old right-hander can sit out the season if he doesn't sign.

Cepeda, San Francisco Giants' slugging infielder, has balked at terms but the Giants aren't concerned about his playing condition after a season of winter baseball.

Eight holdouts are pitchers, with the Giants' Jack Sanford, Pete Ramos and Camilo Pascual of Minnesota Twins and reliever Don McMahon of Milwaukee Braves topping the list. Others are Bob Miller of Cincinnati, Jim Owens of Philadelphia Phillies and Ray Moore of the Twins.

The Reds have the biggest holdout problem, with their batsman Gene Freese and utility man Cookie Rojas also unsigned.

Other holdouts are infielders Purnelle Green of Boston Red Sox, Elio Chacon of New York Mets, Felix Torres of Los Angeles Angels and Bob Herrera of St. Louis Cardinals and catcher Doug Camilli of Los Angeles Dodgers.

Outfielder Tony Gonzalez of Philadelphia signed Sunday and relief pitcher Turk Lown of Chicago White Sox ended his brief holdout Saturday.

Glenn Had Nothing on Our Boy!

He went into orbit around five o'clock Saturday morning.

He mounted the news room steps, five at a time.

His eyes were shining. His muscles crowned steel atop an stiff as a Coldstream Guard at attention.

He did the "twist" from one telephone to another. His hands shook. His voice was trembling.

Early-warm news and sports editors looked on in amusement.

He went from high to low gear and finally pulled up to a halt at the sports desk.

He—gasped "It's happening!"

Then he blasted off again. He vaulted the "low gate" and took the stairs in the reverse six at a time.

He burned into a sizzling zoomble. The vehicle snorted. Then on two legs, and took off in a straight line for East Dundas Street.

Yesterday afternoon Gary Alexander became a "pop-pa!"

It's a girl!

Mamma and Miss Lillian Allison Alexander, seven pounds, 10, one-quarter ounces are doing fine thank you.

The "old man?"

Still in orbit!

RARE, MEDIUM, WELL-DONE

By GEO. H. CARVER, Sports Editor

President James "Snipe" Matthews of the Pepsi Hockey Booster Club, called a gathering of the loyal clans tonight in the chambers of the city hall mighty. The get-together is scheduled for 7.30.

Realizing the financial plight of playing coach Jean Paul Lamirande's top-flight intermediates, through no fault of their own, President Matthews and his Boosters have decided something must be done to bring the faithful through the box-office turnstiles.

The meeting is called to plan and discuss plans for a "Big Prize Night", tentatively slated for one of the intermediate "A" final games evening. The exact date will be announced after the games dates have been set.

Incidentally, the Pepsi's, should they win the eastern intermediate finals and they should not have much trouble doing that, will meet the Chatham-Ontario champions either Midland or Collingwood. These clubs at present are in the throes of the finals series with the latter leading 2-1.

However, the "Big Prize Night" will see one of the biggest "giveaways" sessions ever held in the Old Lady of Market Street.

Sixty prizes—count 'em—sixty valuable prizes will be handed out on the Big Night. These include wallets, lamps, cartons of cigarets, tables, dinners, coolers and many others.

Merchants, individuals and organizations were very generous when approached by President Matthews and his assistants during their prize-gathering safari through the city.

"Everybody wanted to help," said "Snipe" and we hadn't any trouble getting the gifts. It was wonderful on the part of the donors."

The gifts will be given away free bt charge. There will be no raffles, draws and such gimmicks. Every purchaser will admission ticket to the hockey game is eligible for a prize. They will be given away to holders of grezs tickets which carry the draw numbers.

"Not only these prizes," said the Booster president, "but we have been given 100 cases of pucks and 100 packages of cigarets, which will be presented to the first 200 people entering the arena. And I have been promised another 100 gifts of a similar nature which also will be given away at the game.

Jim would like as many members of the club as possible to attend tonight's meeting in the city hall. The "Big Prize Night" entails a lot of work—and there will be a job for every Booster to do.

As has been columned here before, the current season has been anything but a financial success for the intermediate club. It is in the "red," what with transportation, equipment, meals and other costs, while the boxoffice "take" has been pathetically small. After arena rental and other necessary game expenses have been deducted the club's share has been nothing to write home about.

But Jean Paul Lamirande has not lost faith in local fandom. A man of wide hockey experience he knows that the lack of real competition in scheduled play has not appealed to hockey lovers. He does not blame them in this sense.

But he feels that is provincial competition against such clubs as Midland, or Collingwood, Toronto Macedonians, Woodstock, Georgetown and other Western Ontario clubs, the Pepsi's will meet foemen worthy of their steel.

These clubs boast senior calibre players who won't leave any areas with lopsided decisions hanging to their tails. There should be some outstanding battles here when the provincial chips are down.

Metals Nip Wilsons In Playoff

Bellevile Crawford Metals pulled out a close 56-52 victory over the Trenton Wilsons here yesterday night in the opening game of their OABA Intermediate "C" playoff series.

The second game in the home-and-home, total-points, to-count series will be played at the Trenton High School this Saturday night at 8 o'clock.

Saturday's game here was a nip an' tuck battle from start to finish with the lead changing hands time after time. Crawfords held a slim 25-23 lead at the half way mark.

The Crawfords, reinforced by players from other Bellevilla teams, were again paced by high-scoring Teddy Batchelor who scored 20 points. Don Skinner, with nine and Bill Green, with eight, were next in line in the scoring department. Wilf Borden topped the Trenton scorers with 12 points, followed by Warren Widley with 10 and Ernie Clarke with ten.

The game was closely officiated and rough with 19 fouls called against both sides.

The winner of this series will meet either Kingston or Smith Falls in the semi-finals of the provincial playdowns.

TRENTON — WILSONS (43): W. Borden 12, W. Whitley 12, C. Crowe 2, D. Saunders 8, V. Jeffery, M. Jeffery 4, Carter 10, G. Whitley, Burke, Theriault.

BELLEVILLE CRAWFORDS (56): T. Batchelor 20, D. Green 9, R. Pearson, D. Skinner 9, R. Caswell 6, McNicol, E.' Naismith 4, D. Smith 7.

Minor Hockey

The Brains and the Maple Leafs advanced into the bantam hockey league's next round Saturday by ousting the Browns and the Rangers.

The Brains topped the Browns 3-2 to capture the round 3-4. The Leafs dropped a 4-3 decision to the Rangers but still took the series 7-6.

S. White led the Brains to victory, scoring two goals and assisting on two more. D. Kneeshaw also scored twice with R. McDougall adding the other goal. J. Pringle assisted on two goals and S. Thorne on one. For the Browns, G. Moore fired two goals, R. Hunniley one and J. McCreary one assist.

D. Avery, B. Bateman, K. McQuaid and R. Dunn each scored a goal but the Rangers' but it was not enough to overcome the Leaf's big lead from the first game. M. Fullerton and Smith tied Ranger assists. G. Lanza had a goal and an assist for the Leafs with D. Muldoon and J. Blakley adding the other goal.

The first game of the peewee semi-finals, the Barons defeated the Maple Leafs 6-2, paced by C. Scott's four goals. J. Sargeant fired the other two goals while D. Loder and Hodgins had the only assists. J. Wilson scored both the Leaf markers with A. Bradley helping on both.

The remaining bantam and peewee teams played exhibition games Saturday. In peewee, the Red Wings defeated the Browns 4-2, the Mets topped Quinte 4-3, Rangers and Canadiens tied 3-3 and the Black Hawks downed the Bruins 6-2. In bantam, Red Wings shaded the Black Hawks 3-2, Barons and Canadiens tied 3-3 and Quinte blanked the Mets 5-0.

Curling Championship Away Today

Alberta's Gervais Respects Sasky

By JACK SULLIVAN
Canadian Press Sports Editor

KITCHENER (CP) — Hector Gervais, a hulking 200-pound Alberta potato farmer who can send the opposition scurrying for cover with his takeout shots or ease the 42-pound stone to the button with a soft, delicate touch, has advice for every curling buff from Newfoundland to British Columbia.

Don't count on Alberta to make it two straight in the first-ever Canadian curling championship today.

His reasoning may be sound. Lurking in the background are four Richardsons from Regina skip Ernie, the wealthy Arnold second Garnet and lead Wes — who are itching to become the third triple champions since the amazing wide championship started 33 years ago.

The Richardsons — Ernie and Garnet are brothers and Arnold and Wes are cousins — have been out of the limelight a year since they won the Canadian title in 1950 and in 1960, and no one has counted them out.

DON'T BET ON IT

Gervais probably realizes that more is involved than a "Don't bet on it," was his caustic reply when reporters pinned the 1962 champion on his rink. "I know what Ernie can do."

So does every other enthusiast of the game. Richardson followed up the Canadian win with victories in the game's "big" series in Scotland and — as a matter of pride, he would like to add another — the Matt Baldwin of Algeria who won the Canadian title in 1954, 1957, and 1958 and, at three straight Scotties, the first triple winner with victories in 1956, 1962 and 1964.

But there are others very much in the picture. Manitoba is considered a power. So is Ontario with Ron Northcott and three transplanted Saskatchewan farmers and a curling rink manager from Port Colborne.

Then there is the Trail rink from British Columbia, skipped by cigar-smoking 47 - year - old Reg Skeet, the first entry in the Canadian playoff. Also considered high up the Ontario Centennial rink from Kenora, Ont., a foursome that has no experience for the social aspects of the game. They are sphinxes when it comes to chatter they're a convivial quartet.

NOT FAVORED BY DRAW

Favored for the 64-rink 6-day round-robin championship was made a luncheon gathering Sunday and, unless the experts are far off base, Ontario is in for a rough time.

That rink from Tam O'Shanter Curling Club in Toronto has the surface at least — the toughest draw in the first two days. It opens at 2 p.m. this afternoon against Manitoba, 21 time takes on Alberta at 8 p.m. and opens Monday's two-round draw against Newfoundland in the morning and Saskatchewan in the afternoon.

Those opening four rounds could about decide the issue for the favorites made up of skip Bayne Secord, mate Vernon Lang, second Russ Lindberg and lead Dave McDonough. Secord is from Richles, Sask. Lang and Lindberg are from Bradwell, Sask., and McDonough is from Port Credit, a Toronto suburb.

By late Tuesday night, Ontario should have a good idea of its chances of becoming the second Ontario rink to win the Canadian title since 1939.

Here's how today's rounds shape up:

First round: Manitoba vs. Ontario, Newfoundland vs. Northern Ontario, Saskatchewan vs. Prince Edward Island, Quebec vs. New Brunswick, British Columbia vs. Alberta. Nova Scotia has the bye.

Second round: Prince Edward Island vs. New Brunswick, British Columbia vs. Newfoundland, Ontario vs. Alberta, Manitoba vs. Nova Scotia, Saskatchewan vs. Northern Ontario. Quebec has the bye.

Picton Not Represented

Four Teams in Softball

The Belleville and District softball league got off to a promising start toward the 1963 season here yesterday when three of last year's clubs returned up at the meeting and another announced by telephone that "we shall return".

Joyce Real Estate and the Bobcats, from Belleville, and the RCAF Flyers attended the meeting and all said they would be back this year.

Cobourg manager Bob Neill telephoned just prior to the meeting and announced that the Cobourg Merchants would like to play in the loop once again this season. Neill said that the team would be a "new younger club".

The fifth team in the league last year, Picton Wats, was not represented at the meeting but word of mouth has it that the Wats will return to this loop. There is also some talk of a junior club from Belleville applying for entry but such a club was not represented yesterday.

The executive for 1963 will likely change form from past years, according to those in attendance yesterday. Another executive meeting has been scheduled for Sunday, March 18, and at that time a league commissioner and a four or five-man board of governors may be elected. If a commissioner is elected he will be given the authority to control all league matters with aid from the governors on protests and on any other matters with which he needs assistance.

It was decided at yesterday's gathering to raise the entry fee this year to $35 per team. The possibility of having each team post a performance bond was also discussed and will be brought up again at the next meeting.

Those in attendance yesterday were: secretary-treasurer Cliff Belch, OASA President Don Lee, umpire-in-chief Harold Bawden, Bay of Quinte Umpires' Association President Al Hall, Joyce Real Estate's Art Kemple and Bill Old, of the Bobcats, Bill Shier and Claude Carr, of Joyces, Red Dan McAllister and Charlie Drake, of RCAF Flyers.

The Bay of Quinte Umpires' Association will hold a meeting at the Club Canara this coming Sunday afternoon at two o'clock.

No Czechs for Colorado

To Play Russ In Moscow

MOSCOW (AP) — Czechoslovakia's hockey team arrived Sunday for a two-game series with the Soviet team, amid speculation about the Czechs' appearance in the world championships.

It had been reported by the U.S. aisle department that the Czech team had requested visas to go to Colorado, where the world meet will start Wednesday, March 6. But Tass news agency said Czechoslovakia will play two games in Moscow March 8 and 9. Russia lost its two games against the Czechs in Prague in January.

Czechoslovakia, Russia, Yugoslavia and Romania polled out at the world games when the Allied Travel Bureau in West Berlin refused to give necessary travel permits to the East German team in retaliation for the building of the Berlin wall by the Communists.

Royal Attack Wins Rich Santa Anita

BY THE CANADIAN PRESS

Royal Attack won the $152,100 Santa Anita Derby at Arcadia, Calif., Saturday by covering the 1¼-mile distance in a sluggish 1:49 3-5.

Although the Santa Anita Derby results usually are regarded as tips on the state of west coast horses, the race did little to establish the three-year-old Kentucky-bred chestnut colt as a serious threat in the Kentucky Derby.

The colt, ridden by Eddie Burns, scored a five-length victory over Admiral's Voyage and returned $8.20, $4.60 and $3.20. Admiral's Voyage paid $6.20 and $4 while Sir Ribbot, who was third, paid $4.

At Miami, Fla., Robert Lehman's Prego, who closed fast on the stretch, had decisive winner in the $126,200 Flamingo Stakes, at Hialeah Park. The decision was made after Sunrise County grabbed an early lead and finished first but was disqualified for bolting to the outside in the stretch.

Sunrise County was dropped to third after crossing in front of Sir Gaylord in the stretch and Ribbon was moved up to second.

Time for the mile and a furlong was 1:49. Two seconds slower than the track and times record.

Prego paid $52.80, $9.70 and $6.60 while carning $88,350. Ribbon returned $3.70 and $2.80 and Sunrise County's show price was $5.80.

Moira Secondary Juniors, favored for the title were eliminated in the semi-finals by the Oshawa Collegiate squad.

Stan Barbour's BCI Quinte title-holders got off to an auspicious start in their game with Peterborough C.I., leading 15-11 at the end of the first quarter.

Fouling and faulty passing took their toll in the second with the "Tigers" emerging on a 29-19 lead at the end of the half.

The winners maintained the margin in the third quarter the period ending 39-27.

The Collegeans rallied in the final quarter outshooting their opponents 12 to five but it was too little and too late.

Larry Campbell led BCI with 21 points, Bruce Regenburg getting nine.

Quinte's Little Saints in a desperate bid for the junior title eliminated Cobourg in a tough battle but just failed in a gallant attempt to down the starry Oshawa Central youngsters.

The Oshawa game was tensely fought with the score being tied at 54-all. Quinte came back strongly scoring seven points to clinch the win while holding Cobourg scoreless.

In the final tilt Oshawa held a 15-point lead at half time. Midway through the final quarter the Quinte crew closed the gap to four points but Oshawa stayed off their drive to win by a half-dozen.

Petes Peewees Win Title

By REMY d'ANJOU

QUEBEC (CP) — Peterborough All - Stars became champions of the Quebec International peewee hockey tournament Saturday before a crowd that many a professional hockey or football team might envy.

A record 18,000 spectators, mostly children, turned the Colisseum into a sardine can for the final game in which Peterborough vanquished Rockland, another Ontario team from the Ottawa district, 12-0.

Ontario teams now have won all three of the annual tournaments.

Lieutenant - Governor Paul Comtois of Quebec dropped the opening puck and Red Storey, formerly of the National Hockey League, refereed.

Bill Dobbin scored four goals for Peterborough, Dick Redmond had two and Brian Fredericks, Dennis Patterson, David Birch, Richard MacLeish, Brian Hill and Larry Nicholls each scored one.

Peterborough goalie Fred Stevens added to the team's victory by shutting out a gritty but outclassed Rockland team.

Later, Rockland's Guy LaFleur was awarded the Red Fisher trophy as the most valuable player. He scored 16 goals in 18 games.

A bus - load of Peterborough parents and friends came down for the game.

There were 54 entries in the tournament, including 14 from Ontario, 10 from the United States and one from Alberta.

Flyers Make Playoffs

By THE CANADIAN PRESS

Niagara Falls Flyers fought back to clinch the Oshawa Hockey Association Junior A playoffs and just squeezed in by winning their second-last game of the schedule.

They may rue the day, if their last game is a fair example of a taste of what's to come. The Flyers Sunday met Montreal Junior A champs Oldcastle Trojans, which they open the best - of - seven semi-final in Montreal Tuesday. The Canadiens, who finished in first place in the Metro loop ahead of Hamilton Red Wings, walloped the visiting Flyers 7-2.

The Red Wings closed out their season with a pair of wins over the Oshawa Generals Toppers at St. Catharines Saturday night and 3-1 over the Jetsons in Peterborough Petes in Hamilton Sunday.

LAST THURSDAY

Hamilton plays host to St. Catharines Thursday in the opener of their best-of-seven series. Guelph Royals, idle during the weekend, finished in fifth place.

Hull Whips Beavers 5-1, Fronts Lose

By THE CANADIAN PRESS

The combination of a Hull-Ottawa Canadiens' victory and a Kingston Frontenacs' loss boosted Canadiens into a tie for second place in the Eastern Professional Hockey League Sunday.

Canadiens downed league leading Hershey Bears while Beavers 5-1 at Hull to bring their standing to 69 points, the same as Frontenacs'.

The Kingston club went under 2-0 to cellar-dwelling Sault Ste. Marie Thunderbirds, in another Sunday game at the Sault. The EPHL was idle Saturday.

Their win brought T-Birds to 41 points, three behind fifth-place North Bay Trappers. Trappers had an unhappy weekend at home, losing their playoff hopes in a 5-3 defeat at the hands of fourth - place Sudbury Wolves.

TIGHTEN HOLD

Wolves' win strengthened their hold on the fourth and final playoff spot to 10 points. They now have 34 points compared with Trappers' 44.

Sudbury still has 14 games to play, and Trappers have 11. If Wolves finish their present pattern of winning about half the games they play, and Trappers keep winning one in every three, the North Bay club is in trouble.

SCORE DOUBLE SWEEP

MONT TREMBLANT, Que. (CP)—Leo Lacroix of France's national ski team and Linda Crutchfield of Shawinigan, Que., won the Quebec Kandhar combined ski championships Sunday. They made a clean sweep of the two events, Lacroix first in both Saturday's giant slalom and Sunday's two slalom runs.

C. Ritchard Loves Intrigue More Than Acting, Directing

By WILLIAM GLOVER

NEW YORK (AP)—Cyril Ritchard "thrives on complications. If necessary, he provides them himself.

"I love intrigue," says the debonair star. "Even better than acting or directing."

There's no danger of his giving up that multiple international career. But his clandestine dagger-satire gets as invigorating workout each time a new bid for his theatrical talents comes along.

Such deliberate digression preceded the amiable Australian's current participation in the comedy Romulus at Broadway's Music Box.

"It all started when Roger Stevens (the producer) sent me a flock of wires, all of which I ignored. Then when neither Stevens nor Gore Vidal (the author) could be reached, I went looking and located Stevens in London.

CALL JOLTED HIM

"He was so startled by my unsolicited phone call that he spattered simple old me and someone else had been suggested for the part. 'I'll do it,' John (Gielgud, I don't mind,' I answered; 'But if it's anyone else I do.'

"Later I found out from Vidal that it was Robert Morley they had in mind. But he was getting ready to play Nero in another drama and felt that one toga-and-sandals role against a limited number of times in a career. So then I was in demand again.

The roundabout finally halted and Ritchard immersed himself in a role which he now rates as the "most difficult" he's ever done because of its complicated two-layer interpretation.

Other recent occasions upon which Ritchard has indulged his penchant for villainy are concerned acting in the Pleasure of His Company and his first directing assignment with the Metropolitan Opera Company.

Sponsors of "Pleasure" threw a fancy luncheon for Ritchard to discuss the project but the star kept away from that topic. So playwright Samuel Taylor in desperation went along after wards as Ritchard hurried to the airport.

TURN ON CHARM

"I had all my funny stories ready, charmed him utterly — and we never got around to the play until I was getting out of the car," he gleefully recalls.

"Taylor mentioned it and I said 'Oh, yes,' and went up the ramp. When I came back to them Taylor told all the others "we've simply got to have him."

Ritchard presently performs under the supervision of another director, Joseph Anthony.

"I can keep the actor and director separate. I myself separated as long as I respect the other director's directions. This is a discipline which harks back to my early training as a dancer and to my result school."

Pleasant Fare Was Showing Of George M. Cohan's Hits

By CYNTHIA LOWRY

NEW YORK (AP) — Irving Berlin and the late George M. Cohan have written so many songs that almost any program which just plays the familiar tunes is bound to be pleasant.

And pleasant — faint praise — were two weekend television shows built out of the work of the two men. Sunday night's NBC Reports on George M. Cohan attempted, with a notable lack of success, to combine TV's over - used biographical techniques — old photographs, newsreel clips, theatre posters, and earnest narration—with gay musical production numbers. They didn't combine.

A talented but obviously uncomfortable cast including Peter Lind Hayes tried to make something of the quaint old numbers. Two really big Cohan songs—Give My Regards to Broadway and I'm a Yankee Doodle Dandy —were presented in clips from an old James Cagney movie and were the high points of the show.

Irving Berlin's music was the subject of Friday night's Telephone Hour. The production suffered from a sort of stuffiness and lack of style characteristic of this series. It even affected Metropolitan Ginger Rogers and Janet Blair.

BUS STOP SCORES

Bus Stop, the ABC series which has been suffering from an overdose of bed publicity because Hollywood dreamboat Ray came up Sunday night with an attention-holding, well-done suspense tale. Pippa Scott and Howard Duff were the stars.

Saturday night's The Defenders, about extortion, was one of the series best and even made next little more interesting.

Perry Mason Show producers are right on top of the news! Sunday night's Perry Mason, of the Angry Astronaut with some of the location shots made at a factory working on the projected U.S. moon shot. . . It looks like Lloyd Bridges starred in dry actor next year after all Hollywood those underwater seasons of Sea Hunt. CBS will star him in a series called Adam's Fable—in pense tale. Pippa Scott and a business suit.

AT THE FARE — Gilmorous Rita Hayworth stars as Rex Harrison's ex-wife lady in "The Happy Thieves" opening tonight at the Park Theatre for a one week engagement through United Artists release. The suspense comedy, co-starring Joseph Wiseman, Alida Valli and Gregoire Aslan was filmed on location in Spain. On the same program terror in the sky beyond known flight in "Flight That Disappeared", starring Craig Hill, Paula Raymond and Dayton Lummis.

AT THE FARE — Nancy Hale and John Bryan as executive and actor of "The Flight That Disappeared", opening tonight at the Park Theatre, through United Artists. On the same program "The Happy Thieves" starring Rita Hayworth and Rex Harrison. Both films are first showings.

AT THE BELLE — Peggy Ann Garner, Joan Blackman and Elvis Presley co-star in the "Blue Hawaii" romance, opening today at the Belle Theatre, for an extended engagement. The Technicolor Paramount production was filmed in Hawaii and has a score of 14 great tunes. Angela Lansbury and Nancy Walters have supporting roles.

Joe E. Lewis Earns $400,000

His Gang-Ripped Throat Thru-Way for Jokes, Scotch

By JAMES BACON

HOLLYWOOD (AP) — Once, when Joe E. Lewis was a budding comic, a mobster gang in Chicago slashed his throat. Doctors gave up. They stopped enough so that some of the world's most vilbid jokes could pour out and a startling quantity of scotch pour in.

He has ruptured his physicians by resolutely ignoring their long - standing advice to quit drinking.

"I see more old drunks in night clubs than old doctors," Joe explains.

But at 60, in his 40th year in show business, even Joe E. concedes there are limits to a man's intake.

"Already I can see the handwriting on the floor," he says. The public at large knows little about Lewis but in night clubs he is a king, rivalled only in tenure by Jimmy Durante.

He earns about $400,000 a year, works three days a week in Las Vegas — and when he has a week off spends it there.

SOFT TOUCH

In appearance, he is like everyone's bachelor Uncle George, the soft touch on who drinks.

He's dapper in dress, medium of height and florid of face.

Like Durante, Joe E. is a soft touch for people in a jam, suite or a night club. His friends are jockeys, actors, chorus girls, ballplayers and newspaper men. His idols are western stars.

If the race tracks are closed, he sleeps till 4 p.m.

The essence of his humor is a sort of barroom philosophy.

Pluto said "Under the influence of either poverty or drink, people are at their best." His work are equally liable to degenerate.

Several thousand years later, Joe E. Lewis said: "Show me a man without money and I'll show you a bum."

Or:

"Which or poor, it's better to have money."

Most of Lewis' humor is bawdy, intended for the saloon circuit only. But, he says, that is not the reason why he didn't make it on television.

"They sent me a Nielsen rating when I was on the air and found out that only half the people in America were watching me."

MORE LIKED HIM

Joe E. was born on New York's Lower East Side but it was Chicago's gangland that started—and almost ended—his career.

He was the favorite night club comic during the Capone era.

His loyalty to a gangland boss who hired him almost cost him his life and voice. When he refused to work in the club of a Pluto said "Under the influence of either poverty or drink, people are at their best." His work are equally liable to degenerate.

He couldn't talk for years and a promising singing career was forever ruined.

His life was filmed by Paramount as The Joker Is Wild with Frank Sinatra portraying him.

Or:

"If sometimes think Sinatra had more fun playing my life than I had living it," he says.

"Once they had a scene where Sinatra playing me refused a drink. They had to hire a stunt man."

Seals, Fish, Stamps And Guns

The fur seal, for reasons but D.C., at 30 cents each. Ask for known to himself, seems to think that the Pribilof Islands off the coast of Alaska constitute the only ideal place in this world on which to mate and bear young. Why this frigid, rocky, virtually barren group of islands should be so attractive only a seal can tell you. The fact remains that the fur seals swarm to these shores each spring, literally by the hundreds of thousands.

Around the turn of the century these animals were harvested indiscriminately by Russia, Japan and the United States. The herd was threatened with extinction unless something was done. So treaties were made and comparative order was restored. Now, under intelligent management, the future of the fur seal herd is secure.

Most folks don't realize that the fur seal harvest is in the class of big business. To give you some idea, during the fiscal year ending June 30th, 1961, the United State Government realized $2,839,862 from the sale of the hides and the rendering of fat, carcasses to obtain meal and oil from 97,091 animals, the largest return since 1956 when 136,836 animals were taken.

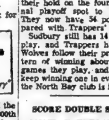
A WORTHWHILE DERBY



West Palm Beach, Florida, held its annual Silver Sailfish Derby from January 12th through February 2nd. Generally we are not in favor of fishing tournaments, derbies and rodeos. Angling, in our book, is not and should not be converted in to a competitive sport. But the Silver Sailfish Derby is an exception. The event is well run, and only cups, trophies, etc., are awarded — no cash prizes, automobiles, and so on.

Entrants in the derby are encouraged to kill as few fish as possible. Only record fish are brought in and Wildlife has made possible the tagging of released fish. Derbys adding to the overall knowledge of this fine migratory species. This, alone, makes the derby very much worth while.

DUCK STAMP BOOKLET

If you are a stamp collector and a great many people are in these days of commemorative issues, you will be interested in a new booklet put out by the U.S. Fish and Wildlife Service. It is called "Duck Stamp Data: Background and Technical Information for Collectors." A rather top-heavy title for a small book, but it gives you pictures and pertinent details about each of the 28 D u c k Stamps issued to date.

Copies can be obtained from the Superintendent of Documents, U.S. Government Printing Office, Washington 25,

AUCKLAND, New Zealand (Reuters)—Two young men today wound up more than 2½ days of non-stop "twisting" and claimed a world record for their effort. They stopped after 57 hours and 16 minutes.

Science Now Shrinks Piles Without Pain Or Discomfort

Finds Healing Substance That Relieves Pain And Itching As It Shrinks Hemorrhoids

Toronto, Ont., (Special) — Science has made such statements as "Piles have ceased to be a problem!" And science does not make such statements very wide variety of hemorrhoid conditions, some of them very serious, were relieved with this inexpensive substance in both the privacy of their own home without any discomfort or inconvenience.

In one hemorrhoid case after another, "gratifying improvement" was reported and verified by doctors' observations.

Pain was promptly relieved. And while gently relieving pain, actual reduction or retraction (shrinking) took place.

And most amazing of all—this improvement was maintained in cases where doctors' observations were continued over a period of many months!

In fact, results were so thorough

PEKING (CP)—A tall, quiet-spoken Canadian holds a key job in international journalism's reporting, as he puts it, "at the hub of history's biggest social experiment on one of the world's oldest cultures."

Clare McDermott, Reuters correspondent in Peking, is the only permanently resident western reporter in the Chinese capital.

The 36-year-old native of Middleton sees few Westerners in Peking and even fewer Canadians. Apart from a Chinese driver and two interpreters assigned by the state, his main contacts are with Chinese officialdom.

His life is subject to the professional and personal restrictions placed on all foreigners by the Communist authorities.

In a city of nearly 7,000,000, with a foreign colony of 1,000 to 2,000 are foreigners, McDermott finds he cannot walk down a street without attracting attention, however friendly it may be.

TRAVELS WIDELY

"Someone shouts 'foreigner' or 'foreign devil' (Russian slang for you know it you are surrounded by a gang of smiling children."

Despite the restrictions on his movements, McDermott says he has been able to make many visits to factories, farming communes and towns outside the Peking area. In this way he has visited such places as Nanking, Shanghai, and Hangchow in Eastern China and Canton and Changsha in Central China.

One of his most interesting jaunts was a journey across the Desert to Outer Mongolia last summer to cover the military knock Communist Republic's anniversary celebrations.

A staff correspondent with stocky build and jutting jaw, McDermott worked for several Ontario newspapers before leaving overseas and joining Reuters.

He went to Peking two years ago after four years in London and two in Paris.

COVERED SPORTS

Mr. and Mrs. Ray and Mrs. Neil McDermott, 4821 live in Edmonton.

Their 24-year-old brother, graduating BA at the University of Alberta in 1949, first coached a girls' basketball team in Ottawa's Carleton College — now the University — before undertaking a Bachelor of Journalism course.

McDermott worked as a sports writer for the Ottawa Journal for a year and a half. Next job was as a general news reporter on the Sudbury Star, from which he went to Europe and travelled for a year before joining Reuters in London.

McDermott is sometimes persuaded to talk about the paper given in the Chinese press.

Chinese readers, who studies his newspaper or other people study scriptures, must learn to "read between the lines, spy, unhappy people," he says, drawing from published accounts of unemployment, strikes, droughts and disasters.

Halloween

There hasn't been a word in the Chinese press about the purges in Eastern Europe which would have been pouring into North China to reduce the effects of Titoism, he said.

However, educated Chinese who are accustomed to dealing with foreigners appear to have friendly feelings for Canada, McDermott said. He says his status as Canada as being different from that of the U.S. and Great Britain but they often ask why Canada must remain "tied to the apron strings of the U.S."

If Chinese authorities regard Canada with a degree of warmth, he says, much of this must be attributed to Dr. Norman Bethune, the Canadian surgeon who worked with the Chinese Reds in the 1930s.

Bethune organized the medical services that went to the front lines where Chinese forces were fighting the Japanese. He died of infection he contracted when operating on wounded men even after he knew he was dying of bodily speed of rest.

REGARDED AS SAINT

"Bethune now is enshrined as one of the saints of the Communist Party," McDermott says. "Mao Tse-tung wrote an essay in his memory, a memorial hospital has been built in the North China hills where he practised and a special issue of

School Closed By Invation Of Skunk Family

RIDGETOWN, Ont. (CP)— The skunks that live under Hawker's Public School have won another round in their battle to defend their home.

Janitor Harry Hawker and 12 pupils have moved out. The school has been temporarily closed.

The skunks' victory came after pupils found their furry neighbors had eaten their lunches while classes were going on.

They followed complaints by parents about the odor on their youngsters' clothing and hides.

The teacher, Mrs. Ferguson Rea, said this is the second time the school has been closed because of the skunks. The last time it remain shut "until the battle is won."

This could mean a long vacation. Several attempts have displayed a constitution that is hard to beat. Since setting up house under the schoolhouse three years ago, the skunks have been fed daily by school board members with milk poison, traps and even gas.

Last year, two skunks were killed before, seven billed.

"They're always coming back," said Mrs. Rea.

This week the board ordered the skunks' home dug up and excavated. Food, loaded with poison, was scattered around the building. Still, the skunks have been fed.

Mrs. Rea said a family of groundhogs also lives under the school.

"The groundhogs and the skunks seem to live together in a kind of semblance. But we can't."

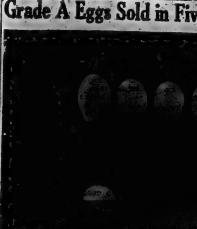
Bethune died in the Chinese field in high esteem, McDermott says, is Gen. Morris Abraham Cohen, another Canadian doctor who went to China as body-guard to Chinese Communist leader Dr. Sun Yat-Sen, leader of the 1911 revolution which paved the way for the eventual Communist takeover in 1949.



Cohen, who now holds a Canadian passport, is a frequent visitor to China and is received by many of the country's top leaders.

Since being assigned to Peking, McDermott has learned that Cohen first met Dr. Yat-Sen while the latter was touring Canada—in Edmonton, McDermott's home town.

International Counsellor Addresses Lions

CAMPBELLFORD — The Campbellford Lions Club played host to the Trenton Lions at their regular meeting on Wednesday evening. There were 32 members in attendance.

Guest speaker for the evening was International Counsellor Norward Sprague of Trenton, Ont. He spoke highly of the Campbellford Lions for their success and activities that night on January night in 1953.

Leon Sprague told the group that the service one can render to his community and organization being measured with membership. A person comes to be a Lion by invitation only, with consideration as to whether he is a hard and willing worker and will be a benefit to the club. A great deal of care is needed, he stressed, in selection of officers, particularly president of the club. Both Lions and Rotarians representing the club can be a great asset to the community and therefore citizens who think Lions club must be of high standard to be invited to the town and community."

The speaker was introduced by International Counsellor Leon Kim Clarke, and thanked by Lion Bill Oliver.

Lion Roly Whitley of the Trenton club introduced the group much to their enjoyment.

Possible to Produce Serum For Treatment of Cancer

HOUSTON, Tex. (AP) — A Swedish researcher has reported his studies indicate it is possible to produce a serum for treating cancer.

But other scientists have raised questions about his laboratory methods.

Dr. Bertil Bjorklund, 41, head of the immunological research section of the state bacteriological laboratory of Sveflanta Institute in Stockholm, spoke Saturday night at an annual symposium on fundamental cancer research sponsored by the M. D. Anderson Hospital and Tumor Institute here.

Bjorklund's work with the vaccine was not discussed during the question period but there were sharp inquiries about some of his laboratory methods. Questioners included Dr. Albert Sabin, developer of oral polio vaccine.

Bjorklund said he had similar experiences in previous meetings.

FINDS COMMON ANTIGEN?

He said he has proved there is a common substance in all human cancers that produces antibodies to fight the disease. This, he says, is not present in normal tissue.

Sabin and others maintained there is no evidence to show human produce antibodies against their own cancers.

This has been demonstrated in strictly-controlled laboratory experiments with animals, Sabin said.

"These show each particular cancer has a different antigen that produces antibodies," he continued. The issue is not whether human cancers may have a distinct antigen. The only question is whether this method did and can demonstrate it."

CLAIMED A FIRST

Bjorklund said that of 60 human cancers he tested, all tumors were shown to have the same antigens. He said his research group has presented the first evidence that tissues taken from cancers in several hundred patients contain a natural cytolytic substance.

It is normally in an inhibited state, but can be activated by immunization of specific antibodies, he said.

Dr. David Marrack, an M. D. Anderson staff member, told the group:

"He has used the crudest, blunderbuss method for creating his serum."

Dr. J. R. Marrack of England, brother of the Houston doctor, said there is "a fair amount of evidence" that a cancer antigen is present ("but I think a large amount of further experimenting should be done before it can be settled."

Federal Scientists Find Peace Tower 60 Feet Away From Where It Used to Be

By JAMES NELSON

OTTAWA (CP) — This old world does have the wobbles, found that the Peace Tower on Parliament Hill may be as much as 60 feet away from where it used to be, in relation to the stars.

Astronomers at the Dominion Observatory make a check practically every clear night that they can photograph the stars.

M. M. Thomson, chief of the positional astronomy division of the observatories branch, says the shifting position of Ottawa is minute—a maximum of 60 feet in the earth's radius—but it is important to the measurement of time.

The wobble means that the stars may appear too early or too late over Greenwich Observatory in England, from where the world takes its time measurements. This variation may be as much as 1-300th of a second.

However, the wobble is unpredictable and confirmed accurate. It may take the earth 14 months to go from one extreme to the other, and it is difficult to determine an average duration or pin-point the stars when shifting to the north.

The Dominion Observatory here now is part of a world-wide network of scientific institutions making regular, precise checks on this matter and sending its information to the international time office in Paris.

Electronic computers are used to process the data and Canada's newly-developed atomic clock can check down times to an accuracy of 1-10,000th of a second.

So far, the scientists have not been able to determine why the earth wobbles. Despite two world wars, fairly accurate measurements have been made and collated over the last 80 years. Since the setting of special observatories, all located on the 39th parallel of latitude in the United States, Japan, Russia and Italy.

The Dominion Observatory last year brought into use a new telescope which it designed and constructed to improve the measurement of star positions. The observatory measures time variations by means of a stationary vertical photographic telescope. This is the one from which the astronomers can also measure the varying latitude of Ottawa.

As new and more precise equipment is brought into use here and in other observatories around the world, the scientists believe their more accurate observations may lead to solving the question of why the earth wobbles.

Laotian Govt. Said Borrowing To Ease Pinch of U.S. Aid Block

By RENE-GEORGES INAGAKI

VIENTIANE, Laos (AP) — The government of Premier Souvanna Oum, feeling a pinch caused by U.S. suspension of aid, has borrowed 100,000 kip (1,250,000) from the national bank to meet monthly expenditures, informed sources said Sunday.

The United States has withheld its $60,000,000 aid request for February as a means of pressure on right-wingers to get on with talks to form a coalition government.

The government's initial reaction was to defy this financial pressure. There were official statements that the country would carry on without American doles. But the government has to meet large payrolls for its army of some 70,000 men, its police and functionaries.

And since the United States withheld aid for two weeks in January there has been a slight inflation, averaging 20 per cent on food prices.

HOW LONG?

The question is how long the Vientiane government can carry on without inflation or changing national basic laws. Some experts estimate it can continue through March.

But few people believe the United States would withhold aid long enough to create real hardship or cause the fall of the government.

A feeling was beginning to grow that the dollar shortage was weakening right-wing opposition to the so - called neutralists in formation of a coalition government.

British and French ambassadors to Laos flew to North Laos to find out whether neutralist Prince Souvanna Phouma's new coalition formula has found any backing from his half-brother, Pathet Lao Prince Souphanouvong.

HAD TWO FORMULAS

Souvanna left here Feb. 26, after five days of talks, carrying two formulas on forming a coalition, government, to seek Souphanouvong's views on them. Pathet Lao hierarchs since his return have ruled out one Vientiance proposal: To have a government of six commissions headed by the king.

The other proposal, drafted by Souvanna, calls for a coalition headed by Souvanna with 18 cabinet members divided among the country's factions. Under it the anti - Communists would have a bloc of eight, while the pro - Communists would have four, plus perhaps two or three sympathizers among the seven so-called neutrals.

Souvanna has said he plans to come to Vientiane in the coming week to continue his talks.

Waterfowl Count Up 22 Per Cent From Last Year

WASHINGTON (AP) — A decrease of 28 per cent in the number of migratory waterfowl wintering in the central flyway was shown by the recent annual mid-winter survey, the U.S. Interior department has announced.

The number of ducks observed was 25 per cent below the 1961 winter count; blue and snow geese were down 25 per cent; white-fronted geese were up 33 per cent from last year but still were 30 per cent below the seven-year average; Canada geese were relatively unchanged and coots were down 22 per cent.

Mallards, which normally make up nearly 50 per cent of the duck kill in the flyway, were down 14 per cent from 1961, to a level almost 40 per cent below the seven-year average.

Green-winged teal and blue-winged teal were down 56 per cent and 36 per cent, respectively, from last year, and the number of pintails was 39 per cent lower.

These four duck species normally competes about 80 per cent of the bag in the flyway.

Secret Army Seen Prison Afire

2 Moslems Die, 30 Others Hurt By Terrorists

Raiders Set off Blast, Then Lock Prison Gates

ORAN, Algeria (AP) — Hundreds of Moslems demonstrated today before a prison where a secret army commando killed two Moslem m' prisoners and wounded 30 others in a fire raid Monday.

Squads of steel-helmeted riot police held the Moslems back as they screamed nationalist slogans and shook their fists.

Several hundred yards away another crowd of several hundred Moslems stood behind a barbed wire entanglement sealing off an entrance to the Vielle Nouvelle, Oran's largest Moslem quarter. Armored soldiers and a half-track with a 50-calibre machine-gun faced them.

Special cordons of riot police were rushed to the prison area at the edge of the city.

Authorities said the secret army apparently attacked the prison to avenge its own punishment of Moslem terrorists. Almost all the 1,800 convicts were imprisoned for terrorist activities in support of Algerian independence.

COMMUTED SENTENCES

The secret army, pledged to keep Algeria French, has often expressed anger that Moslem rebels sentenced to death have not been executed. President de Gaulle commuted all death sentences shortly after he assumed power in 1958.

The 30 terrorist commandos forced a prisoner driver at gunpoint to drive his van through the prison gate as eight terrorists in paratroop uni forms scrounched in the back.

Once inside, the eight disarmed pris o n guards and opened the gate for the other raiders to enter in two jeeps, two small trucks and two military weapons carriers.

The guards were taken from the prison in trucks and held hostage.

OTTAWA (CP)—The financial ills of your corner grocer, baker and dressmaker were discussed in the Commons Monday.

Under debate was a government bill to broaden slightly the scope of the act under which small businesses can receive government - guaranteed bank loans — maximum $25,000 — to renovate their premises.

The new bill, which was approved in principle and then given third and final reading and sent to the Senate, will permit small businesses to obtain loans to relocate their premises.

At the House opening, Veterans Minister Churchill announced a switch in government policy which will enable recipients of war veterans allowances aged 70 and over to receive the full effect of the recent 10-a-month increase—to $65—in old age and blind pensions. The new regulation was made retroactive to Feb. 1, the date when the higher old age and blind pensions came into effect.

Previously, th e e pensions were judged part of the income subject to the means tests which needy veterans must undergo before receiving war veterans allowances.

DEAD ANIMALS DISPOSAL ACT UNDER ATTACK

More Harm Than Good Is Claim

TORONTO (CP) — A New Democratic Party member of the Ontario legislature claimed last night the Dead Animals Disposal Act of 1960 has done more harm than good.

Ken. Bryden (Toronto Woodbine) said it allows meat processors to obtain licences to carry out further inspection to ensure they are living up to terms of the act. It tends to give an "air of respectability" to those in handling a meat from dead animals for human consumption, he said.

Mr. Bryden's speech came near the end of 7½ hours of debate on farm matters during which the house completed only half the estimates of the agriculture department.

Sittings r e s u m e today at 2 p.m., an hour earlier than usual, and another night session is scheduled.

NDP Leader Donald C. MacDonald maintained that recent allegations concerning the sale of tainted meat were the result of clean investigation by the RCMP and federal authorities, without help from Ontario authorities.

PROVINCE TOLD

Agriculture-Minister Stewart replied that provincial inspectors were in front of the investigation. He said it would require an army of inspectors to meet the requirements laid down by some opposition members.

Vertical integration was discussed and the government was accused by Farquhar Oliver (L, with the problem.

B-25 Shatters 3-Speed Records And Many Windows in Flight

LOS ANGELES (AP)—A B58 streaked to New York and back in an unofficial four hours, 42 minutes and 20 seconds, shattering three speed records and many windows.

The four-jet, 1,300 - mile - an hour bomber trailed a 40-mile-wide sonic boom that caused alarm and damage along the route. It was piloted by Col. Robert Sowers, 35, Lexington, Ky., and carried a crew of three.

The established record for the 4,900 miles was six hours, 46 minutes, 39 seconds set by Robert M. Sweet in an RV100 Voodoo jet.

The plane took off from Carswell Air Force Base, Tex., refuelled over the Pacific near there before, starting the dash, then refuelled again midway and over the Atlantic near New York and midway west.

The B58 also chalked up these unofficial marks:

1. West to east, two hours, one minute, 30.6 seconds. The old record was two hours, 49 minutes, set last May by Navy Lieut. Richard F. Gordon in an F-4H Phantom II.

2. East to west, two hours, 15 minutes. The mark was three hours, 36 minutes, set by Capt. Iven C. Kincheloe.

Most of the flight was at 50,000 feet, so high that little damage resulted from the sonic boom—shock waves generated by compressions of air in front of planes travelling at supersonic speeds.

Damage was worst in southern California, where altitude was under 30,000 feet.

Gen. Thomas S. Power, chief of the Strategic Air Command, was asked by reporters who would pay for the windows broken by the sonic boom.

"The air force will comply with the law of the land," he replied.

Kennedy Makes Reply To Letter on Parley

LONDON (Reuters) — Soviet Premier Khrushchev has declared Russia will conduct nuclear tests to perfect "new type of weapons" if the West builds more nuclear tests.

The threat was contained in the Soviet premier's latest message to President Kennedy that was delivered Sunday, Its contents were disclosed today by the Soviet news agency Tass.

Khrushchev's message agreed to Western proposals for opening the March 14 disarmament conference at foreign ministers' level and holding three-power talks beforehand on a nuclear test ban.

But Khrushchev denounced U.S. plans to hold atmospheric tests in April as a "new experiment of an aggressive course in international affairs" and a blow to the disarmament conference.

WILL START TESTS

Khrushchev declared:

"Anybody who is not animated by the special purpose of misleading world public opinion must realize that, if the U.S. completed series of United States intentions to begin to add a series of their own in order to perfect weapons, the Soviet Union will be forced to carry out tests of new types of its own, weapons which, in such circumstances may become essential for strengthening her security and preserving world peace.

"You are beginning a new round in creating ever more lethal types of nuclear weapons. You can do special unbending a chain reaction, which will moreover become ever more stormy."

He said President Kennedy already a r t i c u l a t e d in speeches t h a t U.S. nuclear weapons exceeded those of the Russia while U.S. military leaders had boasted they could win the Soviet Union and all allies off the face of the earth.

POWER MYTH

"On the other hand you now say the United States must carry out nuclear tests which allegedly so as not to be left behind the Soviet Union in arms, first clearly U.S. words do not meet.

"However much you try to justify this decision, there can be no two, opinions that it is a new experiment as an aggressive course in international affairs and a blow to the forthcoming disarmament committee, which is on the point of beginning its work, a blow to all the world's disarmament talks."

Khrushchev said the U.S. decision is aimed at perfecting

TAKES NEW POST

TIMMINS (CP) — Desmond Kimber, 38, city engineer at Woodstock for more than three years, has been named city engineer here. It was announced Monday Mr. Kimber will start work next month.

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Kennedy replied today to Soviet P r e m i e r Khrushchev, clearing the way for the meeting of foreign ministers at Geneva to discuss nuclear testing and disarmament.

The president's letter to Khrushchev was delivered by U.S. Ambassador Llewellyn Thompson to Soviet Foreign Minister Andrei Gromyko in Moscow.

Informed sources said the White House will make public Kennedy's letter and probably Khrushchev's letter, to which the president is replying.

Khrushchev's lengthy messages to Kennedy and to Prime Minister Macmillan were delivered Sunday.

Tass disclosed Monday that Khrushchev, in a switch from his previous proposals for starting the Geneva disarmament conference at the summit, agreed to the Kennedy-Macmillan proposal to open the conference at the foreign ministers' level.

The Soviet p r e m i e r also agreed to send his foreign minister, Andrei Gromyko, to Geneva a few days early to confer in person with Secretary Rusk and the Earl of Home, Britain's foreign secretary, as Kennedy and Macmillan had suggested. The conference proper begins March 14.

STILL SEEKS SUMMIT

Khrushchev's 10 - page letter also said to have included these other points:

He repeated his contention the disarmament conference should be attended by heads of state. He denounced as "fabrication" Kennedy's plan to resume U.S. nuclear testing in the atmosphere by late spring unless a test ban treaty a g r e e m e n t is reached.

He said the Soviet Union will not seek the position of "arbitrator" refusing to accept international controls, while the West insists are essential for policing a nuclear test ban.

France's announcement Monday that she would not take part in the conference—thus rejecting the invitation to be represented to 17 from 18—evoked little reaction here.

President de Gaulle has made plain previously his view that the Geneva conference has little prospect of achievement. It is understood also that he sees progress, U.S. officials expect France to come back into the talks.

SCARE GROUNDS PLANE

NEW YORK (AP) — A Nations Airlines plane returned to Idlewild Airport 36 minutes after takeoff here Monday, today because a woman passenger thought it was "shaking." The plane is unsafe, my husband is after me," the unidentified woman told a newsman. A search failed to disclose any explosives.

Powers Saw Strange Chute In Sky When He Bailed Out

WASHINGTON (AP) — Lt. Col. Francis Gary Powers stepped out of seclusion for the first time today and is expected to tell of seeing a mysterious parachute in the sky when he bailed out of his stricken plane over the Soviet Union.

Powers is to appear before the Senate armed services committee to tell his story in public.

The biggest mystery of his story flight on May 1, 1960, is how the U2 was brought down, by engine trouble, Soviet missiles or what?

At his Moscow trial, where he was sentenced to 10 years in prison as a U.S. spy, Powers refused to say that his plane had been hit 40,000 feet by a Soviet rocket, as Soviet Premier Khrushchev had claimed.

He said there was an explosion and a bright glow but that he had "no idea what it was." One informant said that as he now understands it, Powers thinks his plane was knocked down by a near-miss from a Soviet rocket which exploded close enough to ship the glider like aircraft out of control and prevent Powers from using all devices for delayed destruction of the plane.

When he finally was able to leap clear of the spinning plane at 10,000 feet, Powers is understood to have seen a second parachute in the sky.

But he was said to have been unable to determine whether this parachute meant some Soviet plane figured in the downing of his hirhflying reconnaissance plane.

Powers carried suicide equipment but was not under orders to use it, informants said. He was told it was supplied in case he felt he could not withstand efforts to torture information out of him.

Four Men Get 6-10 Years For Havelock Bank Robbery

PETERBOROUGH (CP) — Four Montreal men were convicted of armed robbery during a day in the $232,000 holdup of a bank at Havelock, Ont., last Aug. 31.

Three were sentenced to 10 years in penitentiary, the other to six years.

The 10-year sentences were given to Roger Poirier, 31; Roger Martel, 41, and Yvon Laboude, 31. Jean Claude Lalonde, 24, was given six years.

County Judge A. R. Wilmott, who took almost two hours to deliver his judgment to a packed courtroom, said: "I find the four accused guilty of the crime charged, namely guilty of armed robbery as charged."

The four were charged with holding up a branch of the Toronto - Dominion bank. The bulk of the cash and negotiable securities has not been recovered.

A strong force of police was present as sentence was passed.

The sentences were on the armed robbery charge only. Other charges—resisting arrest by stopping, breaking into a cottage and possession of two stolen autos—will be heard at a date to be set.

Crown Attorney John Bradshaw asked the court for maximum sentences, reminding the magistrate that terms of up to 20 years could be given.

Arthur Maloney, defence counsel, stressed that the four men were products of the Montreal slums.

Blind Old Age Pensioners Now Facing Higher Charges

By The CANADIAN PRESS

The Canadian National Institute for the Blind in four provinces has increased room and board charges for blind old age pensioners in its care, and in a fifth province an increase is expected soon.

The raised charges come on the heels of the recent $10-a-month increase in the old age pension to $65 from $55.

Room and board increases have been reported by the CNIB in Manitoba, New Brunswick, Nova Scotia and Prince Edward Island.

The CNIB Ontario office has disclosed that an increase, not yet formulated, is expected "soon".

Saskatchewan, Alberta, British Columbia and Newfoundland CNIB headquarters are not planning to push up charges, but in two of these provinces it has been reported those blind per-

LIVING COSTS UP TENTH OF POINT IN JAN.

Food, Medical Services on Rise

OTTAWA (CP) — Canadian living costs rose fractionally in January due to a wide range of price increases, especially for foods and medical services.

The consumer price index for Feb. 1 rose one-tenth of a point to 129.8 from 129.7 a month earlier, the Dominion Bureau of Statistics reported today.

The index at Feb. 1 equalled the record of 129.8 established Dec. 1. It is based on 1949 prices equalling 100.

Increases were recorded in January for food, clothing, transportation, health and personal care and recreation and reading. The tobacco and alcohol index decreased and the housing index was unchanged.

PRICES RISE SHARPLY

The food index in January rose two-tenths of a point to 125.0 from 124.8 due to sharply higher prices for fresh vegetables, including imported carrots, cabbage, lettuce and onions. Prices also were higher for bread, eggs, oranges, coffee, tea, veal, turkey and powdered skim milk but lower for beef, pork, chicken, frozen orange juice, fresh tomatoes and fats.

The over-all increase in living costs followed a drop in industrial wages in December of a point-de of average industrial wages and salaries at Jan. 1 — latest figure available—was 119.7 compared with 153.3 a month earlier and 115.0 a year earlier. The index is based on 1949 wages equalling 100.

Baseball, Football and Drugstores Make Canadians Much Like Yanks

EAST LANSING, Mich. (AP) — Baseball, football and drugstores make Canadians and Americans much closer to one another than they sometimes think or care to admit, a Canadian diplomat said Monday.

L. Dana Wilgress, chairman of Canadian section of the permanent Joint Board of Defence between Canada and the United States, told a Canadian-American seminar at Michigan State University a lack of understanding is one of the key factors in a recent deterioration of relations between the two countries.

"In neither country is sufficient thought and study being given to this important question of Canadian-American relations," he said.

"The peoples of both countries are too inclined to take each other for granted."

The world has many parallels of the intimate relations between Canadian and American people he said, adding:

"The closest one is as much a Canadian as if is an American attitude.

Wilgress said many Canadians become as partisan as Americans in following U.S. baseball and football teams, a Geography has united, but history has separated the two countries, he said, Canada's dwelling on differences is the main distinction between the two countries.

It has caused a strong link with the British peoples—a link that is sometimes described as the "chief counterweight against the American influence that is necessary to preserve Canada as a nation."

It also has been the root of the recent wave of anti-Americanism, he said. In their search for some substitute to a British connection to preserve their na-

Mayor Maurice Chalk was authorized by the police committee to advertise for two additional constables to augment his force and, make the implementation of a 40-hour work-week possible.

In consideration of the town's overall expenditures, a cut in mileage for the police chief and Inspector R. J. It was felt that since both men have police cruisers at their disposal and that the inspector does not wear a uniform, the mileage and allowances were not necessary.

Council also took an economy trend, council voted to pay the members of the Committee of Adjustment, Mrs. Mabel Blakely, Gerald Weaver and William Bonisteel $5 a sitting for 1955 instead of a higher payment requested. Council will consider the request from the trio for next year's expenses by this body at a later date.

ONE-WAY TRAFFIC

On Monday, March 12, one-way traffic movement on Front Street, will commence. Traffic will be asked to proceed from Dundas street to the Bridge Street (south-north direction) only.

Council's decision on this will be advertised this week and Mayor MacDonald says he will make some sort of arrangements about a traffic policeman at the junction of Dundas and Front Streets, for the 5 o'clock rush hour traffic.

Mayor MacDonald brought up a complaint from two of the town's taxi operators that the police department was not enforcing a by-law by which they are required to close their halls at 1.00 a.m. The by-law states that the complaint seemed to be in with some sort of league agreement. The two operators also asked that the closing hour be extended to 2.00 a.m.

The mayor will ask the operators to put their request into writing and council will "look into it and see what can be done" suddenly" been enforced.

Council was advised that a well, which is being drilled on the town by the late Thoma Morse's estate claiming damages to property and citing as such things as "loss of business" is not being drilled by a service station owned by the estate when reconstruction of Front and Division Sts.

Town solicitor Roderick Cameron will delve further into the claim before recommending any action to council.

Tatham Co. Given Contract For Sewers at Revised Cost

TRENTON — Trenton council voted last night to accept the tender of the Tatham Company of Rossmore for the installation of trunk sewers on Bonaa and Sidney Streets at the revised cost of $175,097.65.

Originally, the Tatham Company had submitted a tender for $159,097.65 against seven other tenders ranging from $206,860.50 to $175,097.65.

Although council was loathe to come up with the extra $16,000 over the original tender, the Tatham Company thought necessary for the project, council felt that of new tenders for the work were called, that the delay and the project would be shoved out of this year's winter works program.

Recently, the federal government agreed to loan the town $130,097, through Central Mortgage and Housing agencies, for the project.

The Ontario Water Resources Commission and the town's consulting engineers, Gore and Storrie, had recommended the acceptance of the Tatham bid.

On Monday, Mayor James MacDonald, clerk-comptroller O. W. Leavy and town engineer Eric Alexander met with O.W.R.C. and Gore and Storr representatives in Toronto on Friday.

On a polled vote, regarding the acceptance of the tender, Councillor Ed. Todd voted against the move.

"I'd rather see it rebid and the contractor tied to his original contract bid," said Councillor Todd.

Van Hits Train, Driver Unhurt

TRENTON —A 26-year-old milk delivery man had a narrow escape from serious injury Tuesday when the van which he was driving collided with a CNR freight train at the Morgan Street railway crossing.

Simon Eizings of 33 North Murray Street, Trenton, was driving on Riverside Dairy truck east on Dundas Street. The train was southbound. Mr. Eizings told police that his view of the railway tracks was obstructed by buildings along the tracks. When he saw the train he applied his brakes, but the truck continued to slide on the icy road and collided with the train.

The entire left side of the truck was demolished. Damages were assessed at $1,200. Damage to the train was estimated at $50.

Council Agrees To Pay Subsidy For Ambulance

TRENTON—For the second time in a little over a month, Trenton council voted approval of an application from the Rushnell Ambulance Service for the payment of a subsidy for 1952, with the provision that a $3,600 subsidy be paid to Mr. Rushnell.

B. Douglas Rushnell, operator, applied by letter for a renewal of council's 1952 subsidy of the year. Council gave tentative approval and Councillor Ed. Todd was appointed to examine the books of the company to establish the need for a subsidy. Councillor Todd submitted a recommendation to the Trenton Board of Health, out of whose budget the subsidy would be paid, that the $3600 be arranged for. The board, in turn, recommended that council pay it since it allows for the subsidy payment in its budget.

However the welcome opinion tendered for the service.

Mr. Rushnell did not tender, although he let it be known that he was interested in supplying the service, provided the subsidy figure of $3600 remain as stated.

At last night's council meeting, Councillor Ross Burtt told Mr. Rushnell that council had decided to believe by way of councillor N. J. McNair that no subsidy would be necessary this year.

"I rent the premises from Mr. Rushnell," said Mr. Rushnell, "He has no connection with my business or ambulance service. I make my own decisions."

Town Reaches Accord With Workers' Union

TRENTON — At last night's meeting of town council, Councillor James Duncan, chairman of the finance committee, was told council that, as the result of a two-year contract with local 799 of the National Union of Public Employees had been reached.

At the special meeting which was held in the council chamber Councillors Duncan and Lloyd Worrall for the John Marshall and Jim Thompson for the union and a conciliation officer from the Department of Labor.

The union had asked for a 40-hour week, an increase across the board, on a one-year contract; three weeks' holidays after 15 years' service and an agreement on a 4-week holiday after a certain number of years.

The two-year contract agreed upon allows for a six-cent wage increase this year, a five-cent wage increase next year, and the 40-hour week holidays after 15 years' service.

Cheddar Cheese Bright Spot in Dairy Industry

While governments and farm operators are doing some serious soul searching about the state of the dairy industry in Canada, cheese producers in Ontario at least have cause for justified optimism.

At a directors' meeting of the Ontario Cheese Producers' Marketing Board held recently in this city, officials were informed that Canadian Cheddar Cheese remains in constant demand and popular to the United Kingdom. "In fact," said Hector Arnold, chairman of the Board, "our biggest problem at the present time is in being able to get enough supply to fill outstanding orders from British buyers. We have on hand, inquiries and requests totalling up to 6,000,000 (six million) pounds for first grade Canadian Cheddar to be shipped to the United Kingdom. We just don't have any cheese available to fill these orders".

And Canadian Cheddar still commands a premium price on the British market despite competition from New Zealand and Australia and other cheese producing countries - bringing about 29 cents per pound as against the New Zealand price of about 26 cents.

Marketing board officials have made recent personal forays into the British buyers' home territory with the result that the popularity of the Canadian-made product and its determined want, if anything, need be done to maintain quality for British tastes.

Surveys indicate that Canadian Cheddar remains the favourite in the United Kingdom because it is a raw milk cheese that develops a cheese with a delicate flavour when aged. Cheese exported to Great Britain is stored for a year before maturing before being sold to the consumer.

A big step in marketing success came about when the Ontario Cheese Producers' Marketing Board underthook a five years ago to guarantee a product quality in a move to recapture British markets and build buyer confidence.

FEW CLAIMS PAID

As a result of more careful grading and increased quality control, there were paid on only 163 boxes out of 250,000 boxes shipped in 1961, which is less than one-tenth of one per cent. On the Canadian market, the board reported that at auction this ranged from 33c to 36c in the past year, and has never dipped to the Government-supported floor price of 32c during the year.

Cheese producers are not greatly concerned over British proposed entry into the European Common Market. They're banking that Britain will find the fact that Canada is the only country in the world producing a raw milk cheddar in any quantity — and this seems to be the type of cheese traditionally preferred by overseas customers; that any changes in common market activities should not adversely affect the premium received for Canadian cheddar in the British market.

The largest grade in 1961 as cheesemen see it now will be to manufacture enough product to meet both domestic and export market demands and problems, the most other requirements of the dairy industry in Canada would like to be wrestling with at this time.

Heading up the Ontario Cheese Producers' Marketing Board for the coming year will be Hector C. Arnold of Campbellford, re-elected board chairman; R. J. Kelso of Spencerville, vice-chairman. New members elected to the board include R. P. Rupert of Cornwall and A. C. Stone, who is warden of the united counties of Prescott and Russell. Other members of the board are A. E. Hicks, T. H. Dixon and N. M. Cowan.

Move to Have Ratepayers Decide Fluoridation Delayed

The moves on the part of Belleville City Council to have ratepayers decide the issue of fluoridation by municipal water supply has been delayed another two weeks — this time on a technicality.

Two weeks ago council gave first reading to a by-law to repeal a previous by-law passed last year calling for fluoridation, but when it came up for second reading yesterday for its second and third reading it was ruled out of order.

Alderman Jack Ellis raised the technicality that because the by-law had not been considered by the committee of the whole and that could not be included on the night's agenda.

Council agreed that the by-law should be tabled for two weeks for consideration and presentation by the executive and finance committee.

The intention of council is to have a referendum decided by the people at the next municipal election.

TABLE BY-LAW

Council also yesterday tabled a by-law to rename Meadowvale Ave., Vine Crescent and Edgehill Road as city streets.

Alderman Don Whalen said passing of the by-law to assume the streets would take away the only instrument which the city has to bargain with the subdividers.

He said if the city took over the streets now the sub-divider has agreed with the ratepayers in the area to go underpaved.

Alderman Ross Bailey said the by-law should be reconsidered in viewpoint but pointed out that ratepayers living in the area were taxpayers and were entitled to city services.

Mayor Frank Ketcheson, Ald. Whalen.

Outlets Will Be Placed on Light Standards

A new light standards installed in the downtown Front Street area will have plug-in facilities for connection to be agreed with the Christmas season lights.

This was directed by city council yesterday as members voted that allowances be made for suitable outlets at each lamp standard.

Two weeks ago council voted for four new type lights to be installed on Front Street on a trial basis and as a guide to determine the type preferred when the present lights are replaced.

The recommendations for outlets on the light standards for connecting up decorative lighting was passed yesterday along with a request for assessment of the public utilities regarding the streets on which lights are to be replaced this year.

If those outlets were low enough they would come in handy for any newly equipped Alderman Don Whalen.

A list of 21 streets or sections of streets on which replacement of lighting is planned for 1962 was also submitted to council for approval.

The streets scheduled for new lighting this year are all within the so-called "old" section of the city and include core routes and other main travelled arteries.

40 Moira School Students Tour Plant of Deloro Stellite

Approximately 40 technical students from Moira Secondary School, along with their instructors this morning received an industrial exploration of industry at work as they toured the Deloro Stellite plant at Bellleville.

Purpose of the tour was to provide the students with possible job opportunities in the fourth largest industry in the city.

Plant Manager J. C. Houston welcomed the Grade 13 students and explained the company's role in Canadian history. Mr. Houston remarked that in the past 50 years there has been very lastlafied with graduates from local vocational schools.

The morning's tour started in the plant foundry and divided into four groups made its way through the grinding, finishing machine shop, X-ray inspection, shipping and receiving departments.

Explained were the many steps a customer's order goes through from the time it is put in stage to the finished part. Following the tour there was a general discussion in the plant cafeteria during which the students were shown a component such as a stater blade for a jet engine, goes through from base metal to the finished product.

Included in the tour were boys specializing in draughting, machine shop and welding working.

Next week another 40 students from Moira Secondary School will make a tour of the Stellite plant.

No Parking On Everett St. Is Held Up

A recommendation from the city traffic and light committee calling for no parking on Everett Street from Bridge St. West to Moira has been held up for four weeks by city council.

The move calling for no parking followed requests from the city police and fire departments and from 1961, which was being obstructed as result of parking and drivers' zones.

Firemen use Everett Street as their route from the Moira and Bridge Street fire halls, parked autos could interfere with traffic in an emergency.

Council held up the recommendation when it was pointed out there are two churches and a funeral parlor on the west side of Everett Street that could be effected as the result of any no parking by-law.

The matter will be brought back for discussion again in two weeks time.

Teas and Supper Aid Church Building Fund

At the corner of Bridge St. and Farley Ave. is a lot, vacant except for a sign telling passers by that St. Columba Presbyterian Church is to be erected there soon. But in the eyes of Mrs. Coleman, wife of warden of the united counties of Prescott and Russell, and members of the board are A. E. Hicks, T. H. Dixon and N. M. Cowan.

The Building Fund is foremost in the minds of every member these days, and the source is being tapped to add to it. Recently the children's choir had a most successful "Make-Believe Tea". The profits realized by this endeavour was beyond the wildest dream of the most optimistic of the young members.

Although the congregation is small, it is big enough to hold many active Ladies' Guilds, each of which supports to the fullest any project of the other.

The Iona Group of St. Columba has been working very hard lately cementing plans for a forthcoming tea.

The lantern slide is holding a "pancake" supper on Shrove Tuesday.

And so slowly, but surely, the Building Fund is growing.

BLIND OLD AGE

sions receiving provincial and municipal aid to Bridge could of their full keep will get no benefit from the larger old age pension. The CNIB has no reference program in Quebec.

Following an increase to $55 a month from $45 in the CNIB room and board rate in Kingston, Mrs. Minnie Martin, CCF member for Timmins, said last week in the Commons the government should introduce social security pensions of real benefit to the elderly blind who must pay for room and board out of pensions.

He said the increase in Monday's total to recipients with only 33 cents a day.

CNIB business manager Robert Hutzell in Winnipeg explained the cost of keeping a man or woman in a single room with meals, recently has risen to $85 a month from $80 with the federal government making up the extra $30.

"They still get back their $110 from their pensions cheque," he said. "We tend to get little more back for them, but it's a question of cash flow."

The Maritime board of the CNIB has just approved an increase in rates from $80 to $90 for the Lancaster, N.B., residence which serves New Brunswick, Nova Scotia and Prince Edward Island.

The CNIB at Vancouver charges $85 a month for room and board and "will stay." When the old age pension stood at $55 the B.C. government chipped in to the CNIB, gets a total of $90 per person. $10 monthly for pin money and the differences was made up by the city, province and the CNIB.

Even with the $10 increase in the pension the elderly blind pay, on the CNIB, gets a total of $90. He still gets his $10 spending money but the rest goes to the CNIB.

S. D. Edmonson of the Alberta CNIB headquarters said the province and municipalities probably will cut their aid to those getting increased pensions.

Leader Pearson that there is no immediate intention of entering discussions with the United States on joint control of any American u r l e s s a proposal which might in future be stored in Canada.

On the small businesses loans measure, the opposition contended that the government had going enough to assist small entrepreneurs.

Paul Martin (L—Essex East) said the government must do much more if the small businessman is going to be able to meet the challenge of supermarkets and discount stores.

He said a delegation representing small businessmen had formed the government in 1958 On a total of $73,562 small retail, wholesale, manufacturing and service businesses in Canada needed financial help.

But there had been only 2,977 loans totalling $7,000,000 under the act.

Hazen Argue, CCF - New Democratic Party group attempted to insert a clause that would place a ceiling of five per cent on loans made under the act as against the normal bank interest rate of six per cent.

Deputy Speaker Paul Martineau ruled the amendment out of order on the grounds that it went beyond the scope of the bill. His ruling was appealed by the CCF-NDP but was upheld by a vote of 96 to 44.

Lionel Chevrier (L—Montreal Laurier) said the liberals stand with the government on the ruling because it was technically correct, but they support the principle of a five-per-cent ceiling.

At one point Finance Minister Fleming accused the opposition of "sheer obstructionism" in the way they were delaying the bill. It had been under debate most of the week.

Mr. Martin said the obstruction had come from "the unfortunate illness" of Mr. Minister of finance. Mr. Fleming replied Mr. Martin "deserves it."

"I would rather be pompous than a pouter," Mr. Martin replied.

Mr. Fleming later introduced a resolution, preparatory to a bill, to extend the Farm Improvements Loans Act for three years beginning July 1, 1962.

Plans for New Motel Now Abandoned

Plans for the construction of a new motel north of 401 and west of No. 14 highways, will not now be carried out, city council was informed yesterday.

Several weeks ago Mr. Samuel Goodman requested the approval of council for the extension of city water to the proposed motel site north of 401.

The matter was laid over for a decision and yesterday there was a recommendation on the council agenda calling for refusal of the request.

But the recommendation was about to be dealt with council was informed that Mr. Goodman now was not proceeding with the motel proposal and the recommendation with respect to extension of water service was accordingly withdrawn.

Council Members Defeat Motion to Alter By-Law To Allow Bank Building

Hastings Drive residents in Belleville have won the 1962 battle of Hastings but there are indications the war will be appealed.

Monday city councillors voted overwhelmingly against amending the city zoning by-law to allow construction of a proposed bank on Hastings Drive, but C. N. Yanover, owner of the two building lots on which the bank structure was planned, indicated he would appeal to the Ontario Municipal Board.

City hall council chamber were crowded with Hastings Drive residents as they turned up in support of their petition asking council to vote against allowing the bank structure in a residential area.

The petition presented to council carried the names of 226 property owners.

Mr. Yanover, during zoning issue has now been before council for well over a month with council yesterday deferring the original stand when it voted to allowed the change.

VOICE OBJECTION

A month ago council voted to consider the request of the two lots from residential to highway commercial. Then when residents learned the proposed bank was moved two weeks ago to allow room for construction of the bank building and the matter was laid over until this week for decision.

Yesterday Mr. Yanover told council plans were to construct a bank building worth $75,000 to $100,000 facing on Dundas Street with an entrance and egress from Hastings Drive. The bank would employ six or seven persons and would add to the city tax rolls.

He spoke to deed part of the property facing Hastings Drive to the city at a greenbelt.

"If council turns this down I intend to appeal," he said.

Alderman Don Whalen, Don Whalen and Ben Corke spoke against the zoning change while Mayor A. M. Hubbs and Alderman Jack Ireland supported the move.

Mayor Haig said the matter had been improperly handled and suggested it should be held time to completely explain the issue and any controversy would have been avoided.

He added that council not be swayed by petitions but to express their own opinions for the benefit of the entire city.

ONLY TWO SUPPORTERS

Alderman Ireland said the Central Manufacturers' Association have the final say on the matter and suggested that approval of the by-law would serve both time and money.

Alderman Digby disagreed, claiming that the O.M.B. normally takes council's decision into consideration before giving its decision.

He said it council turned the matter down now, the Board would have to hear both sides of there was an appeal.

Council voted 12-3 against allowing the construction of the bank building with only Mayor Haig and Ald. Ireland supporting the recommendation.

Other apparent causes, he said, include:

U.S. imposed import quotas on Canadian products.

U.S. ownership stakes in high positions in Canadian subsidiaries of American firms.

Greatly increased American control of Canadian resources.

Executive discrimination of Canadian economy on that of the United States.

Canadian opposition to the use of nuclear weapons.

Service or Prestige?

An executive of Trans-Canada Airlines shed a rather interesting light on aircraft development recently. He noted that the United States is now undertaking the development and construction of a supersonic aircraft which will be capable of making the Montreal-London trip in a matter of little more than 60 minutes compared to the current five-hour requirement.

In asking the American Congress for the $150,000,000 necessary to finance this project the American military officer making the presentation indicated that it was only because of the urgent reasons why the proposed appropriation should be granted. The TCA official stated that all but one of these reasons could be applied to the development of more conventional aircraft. That reason was prestige.

In presenting his case for consideration of the development of conventional aircraft the TCA representative indicated that the same amount of money could be used to develop aircraft which were capable of bringing low-cost air transportation to almost any small community in the reasonable future. Such development would produce aircraft which could land and take off in a small area, could transport goods and people at a much more economical figure than is currently possible, and offer air service as extensive as any mode of public land transportation now available.

Briefly summing up his consideration of this possibility this gentleman posed the question as to which was preferable—a $50 fare for a five-hour trip from Montreal to London or a 90-minute journey for over $250?

There is little doubt—and the former situation would be desirable and indeed, in the majority of cases involving such journeys, most economical and more popular in the long run. The thought of economical air service to any city or town of reasonable population is also appealing. Such a service would assist greatly in the development of our country, both internally and externally.

Not Necessary—But Likely

Hon. Paul Gerin-Lajoie, Quebec's youth minister, in welcoming delegates to the second Canadian Conference on Education (in Montreal), said that people who think Canada eventually will have to unify her French and English cultures "are not realistic."

Mr. Gerin-Lajoie is right of course. There is no necessity for such unification—indeed there would be no reason why it should be, for one of the charms of Quebec is the many small differences which pique the interest of the visitor from English-speaking provinces.

But the absence of the necessity for such unification does not mean that it will not occur. Indeed the tendency is that it will most certainly well underway. This is true not only of French and English cultures in Canada, but of cultures in other lands scattered around the globe. Modern transportation facilities, the affluence of the western lands which enables an increasing number of their citizens to travel, the growing dependence on international trade, the communicative mediums which science has given us—all of these tend toward the establishment of a common culture for the whole civilized world.

The world will be the loser, a much less interesting and entertaining place, if what is natural and inevitable is carried past the bounds of what is necessary and desirable—but it may happen, nevertheless.

Independent Dependent

It is interesting to note a recent news report from Vienna which states that there was recently a uprising by some Czechs against the established order of the Czechoslovakian Communist Party led by President Antonin Novotny.

Weeks after his arrest the true reason for his removal from civilization has been announced as being his abortive attempt to take over control of the party and the government and not misuse of public funds as originally announced.

It is interesting to note the wording used to describe Mr. Barak's offence. He is accused of "conspiracy against the state and of the interests of the Soviet Union."

All of which would seem to substantiate the theory that the interests of the Soviet Union are the predominant responsibility of any government in the communist bloc, Marshal Tito and our Chinese grain consument excepted.

Just how calmly would the citizens of a western nation take to one of their compatriots being arrested and charged by his own government with conspiracy against the interests of the United States?

Ottawa Offbeat

PC Backbenchers Complain Of Political Bias of CBC

BY RICHARD JACKSON
(From The Ontario Intelligencer's Ottawa Bureau)

OTTAWA — The Conservatives who like to boast that their "brass" is in close communication and understanding with their "grass", are simply, even bitterly divided on the alleged hot political issue of the day.

The "brass" forms," that is, the Prime Minister and the Conservative Cabinet, whatever their private beliefs, publicly defend the publicly-owned television and radio networks.

This is the face of the open hostility of the "grass" roots" backbenchers in the Commons who accuse the CBC of bias, bad taste, waste, and extravagance, and what really worries the Cooservatives, of a deliberate and continuing effort to undermine the Government.

This feeling runs so deep, and so wide is the division between the party's Parliamentary "brass" and "grass" that the rank-and-file Conservative backbenchers have booted, even booed members of the Cabinet who stepped in to defend the CBC from attacks in the Commons.

Whatever may happen in the Commons' caucus — the place where any party, in locked door privacy, lets down its hair — and plenty probably does, the fact that the CBC and Parliamentary veterans could recall the Cabinet getting the unanimity from the ranks.

'TWAS MUTINY

It came when a Conservative backbencher protesting what he termed the "depraved, disgusting garbage" of the shows called in the Commons for the Government to "clean up the programs to the apparently degenerate mind" behind CBC programming.

The backbencher was complaining about one Sunday night dramatic production which had shown the unattractive, if not disturbing problem of a mental disorder and the on-screen treatment—by a woman psychiatrist.

There were sexual overtones to the show and perhaps it wasn't something one liked to lean into family living-rooms of a Sunday night — but it really wasn't the fact bothered the protesting backbencher.

His real target was the political bias, as he saw it, of the CBC.

The Conservatives — and with some reason — charge that the CBC so manipulates the roster of those who appear on Montreal radio and TV public affairs programs as to "tend" it against the Government.

It could be that attacking a government is sweet fun, and makes a better and more "entertaining" program than defending it, but even with this explanation, the CBC in the eyes of the Conservatives has become an Opposition propaganda medium.

True, some pro-Government speakers do get on CBC radio and TV public affairs programs, but the majority are from the other side of the political fence.

A possible explanation is that with the CBC requiring an opinionated rather than an objective report, it is easier and more provocative to condemn than to explain or approve or even simply give the straight, unvarnished facts.

THERE GOES THE PM?

Through it all, with the Conservative backbenchers becoming inflamed at the bias in the CBC, the Government has taken the position that there must be no political interference with publicly-owned (but independent) broadcasting.

There was the time when the Government may — or may not — have tried to do something about it, but when a still officially unexplained effort was made to kill a morning radio political commentary out of CBC offices after an irresponsible and offensive personal attack had been made on the late External Affairs Minister Sidney Smith, there were other whispers, too, of what should be a code of political neutrality for CBC. But when the offending program was dropped, some 14 senior CBC executives resigned, precipitating a minor political crisis on Parliament Hill and resulting in an executive shake-up in the broadcasting executive.

The producers survived, and the Conservatives are on the back benches of the Commons today who cry out against the publicly-owned CBC as it so far as except their resignations at that time, and so is what many MPs feel still is an anti-Government propaganda mouthpiece of the CBC.

The stand of Prime Minister Diefenbaker and the controlling CBC crisis remains an enigma, although there are reasonably well-founded reports that he sympathizes with his backbenchers but still insists that political hands must be kept off the CBC.

Seen from the viewpoint of the party rank and file, is that he has to do it because he has to go deeper into the treasury to finance the CBC. This year, it is budgeted for $85,000,000.

This, then, was what was behind that astonishing hooting and booing that the Conservative backbenchers gave Communications Minister Nowlan when he almost regretfully defended the CBC.

Japan is one of those nations which has adopted birth control to cope with the population pressure in the tight little kingdom of the Pacific.

Whether there is any connection between this and a certain vitality which has come to that country, statistics now prove that the people of Japan are enjoying longer lives than ever before. Since World War II the rate has increased greatly.

This astonishing increase in longevity in Japan was laid to the Japanese life expectancy has passed the 70-year level for the first time since babies were formulated in 1892. Actually, the Japanese baby can now enjoy a life expectancy of 70.35 years. The men can look forward to 66.92 years.

Apparently where the Japanese found they had to cut down on quantity they have determined to make up in quality — if this can be judged by the length of the life span.

TODAY'S TALK

By GEORGE MATTHEW ADAMS

SYMPATHY

The warmest place in the human body is the heart — because it's the engine room. It's the most-interesting place, too.

Whenever I have been on a boat I have always liked to go down to the engine room and watch the powerful wheels go around. And before failing off to sleep I would think of them down there doing their great stunt in taking me to my destination.

I often put my hand over my heart to hear for myself how it feel its beat. I think of the activity there and then I think of all that I carry around in there — warmth, my choice friends, and all the hopes of an aspiring life.

Sympathy is born in the heart. Without sympathy in the heart it would soon run cold and it wouldn't cost any longer. Life would be over.

That which discourages or drives away sympathy is as the frost which will frost vegetation away at the buds and kill the flowers before. Sympathy is essential to life, to beauty and to happiness.

Love is the flower to sympathy.

Be kinder and gentler we are to those we love, the more we love them. And the nearer we approach to the real sympathetic heart is to own an angel.

We cannot always give what we desire to those we love, but we can always give our sympathy and thus draw near to them in all their activities, all their aspirations and all their troubles.

Big people are always sympathetic because they have big hearts.

Sympathy needs room.

Teachers Have Quiet Air Of Authority

By SYDNEY J. HARRIS

The three most effective teachers of young children I have ever seen were women who rarely raised their voices above a whisper. In personality, age and looks they had little else in common except a quiet air of authority.

It is an absolute fact that control of a child decreases in exact ratio to the loudness of the voice. A child who is shouted and screamed at soon becomes impervious to these noises, just as people living near long elevated tracks shut out the sound of trains.

Just what is this "air of authority" I mentioned above? I wish I could give it to you, if it is anyone's satisfaction, including my own. It is a mysterious entity, which children recognize and accept; like charm, if you have it you don't need much else; if you don't have it nothing much else helps.

I have been a struggling, squalling bunch of 4-year-olds united in momentary chaos by their distraught mothers — and in one minute, under the aura of a teacher, speaking so softly that she can hardly be heard across the room, has reduced them to an orderly, contented, obedient group. It is an astonishing lesson in the force of sheer personality, which is the greatest power in the world.

What most teaching courses fail to recognize for there is no way to teach it to a girl supervising children is a high and exacting art as much as it is a skill or profession. Like the art of medicine, it can be drawn out of nothing, but it cannot be implanted. There is no mechanical formula for it, and there is no science of healing — for the presence of the teacher. But there is a highly respectable factor in success or failure.

The secret seems to lie somewhere within that vague and suggestive word "empathy." A good doctor knows how to sympathize with a patient so that the patient feels a sense of identity and security with his physician. Likewise, a good teacher can feel (given professional repressing) enough of her child, and so put him quickly into identicity feel this affinity.

I have long felt that practicing teachers are given psychological and emotional tests, which are far more important than the academic ones they presently take to qualify. A good teacher (and there is the lowly levels) must have the natural feeling toward the young; for if the feelings are distorted, there is no real authority — only its dreadful counterfeit which is based on fear.

Meanwhile, there is little the best we can do is to recognize that our control of our children must be based on love, confidence and clearness of feeling — not on shouts, screams, threats or bribes.

Hiccups Are Sudden Spasm, Contracting of Diaphragm

By JOSEPH G. MOLNER, M.D.

Dear Dr. Molner: What causes hiccups and is there any way to stop them? I'm writing about a man who has them on every day for two or three weeks. They stop for awhile and begin again, but only in daytime. — C.E.D.

Hiccups are a sudden spasm, or contracting, of the diaphragm, forcing out a sudden gust of breath.

The common causes probably are over-eating or drinking too much alcohol, but any condition irritating the diaphragm into this rebellious reaction can thus, cause hiccups.

Such cases can be disorders of the stomach, liver, kidney, brain. Uremia, a retention of wastes by the kidneys, is not too uncommon a cause.

For ordinary hiccups I suppose one popular remedy is as good as another — holding the breath, sipping water, breathing into a paper bag — even tickling the hairy inside of a nasal with a cotton applicator.

But for persistent, long-lasting attacks, sometimes these home remedies are no help. I remember having a poor man mentioned in today's letter has patiently tried dozens of these remedies, and they didn't help.)

Mrs. (I said Dear) of C.E.D.'s letter) has heart trouble and takes medication to reduce the water retention in his system. (Note how that fits with the reference I made to kidneys.)

I'd strongly suggest that the man's "persistent hiccupitis" be checked. The amounts of nitrogen, sugar, salts and water may give some useful clues as to possible cause. If these are considered in the normal, they may well indicate treatments that will help him in more ways than just stopping the hiccups.

When hiccups are so extreme, it is decisively necessary to see the cause, which may be seek the cause, which may be quite important in itself. Continuing hiccups are exhausting.

It may at times be necessary to cut or temporarily paralyze the phrenic nerve, which is the main nerve fibre to the diaphragm. It won't interfere with breathing, but it will permit the diaphragm to relax. (If is, by the way, a procedure once widely used in treating tuberculosis, when rest was our principal means of combating it. Now, of course, we have more aggressive methods, including both drugs and surgery.)

The fact that the hiccups come only in daytime may be significant — it could be a reaction to some psychic factor, perhaps a form of hysteria. Psychotherapy may be helpful. Psychiatry, as I've mentioned before, is applicable and useful in a great many emotional problems that are far removed from what we commonly think of as mental illness.

Dear Dr. Molner: I am 76 and in good health. No headaches or dizziness, but one leg troubles me. I have had my doctor and he just told me not to bother about it.

I hear my heart beats in my left ear when I go to sleep, and it's annoying. Could it be something that bothers me is that I hear and hear well, but does not register. — O.R.

I wish you could be a doctor for a few weeks, because you'd realize that this isn't unusual. The occasional hearing of the beat is probably due to an "extra systole," which, oddly enough, is a premature beat rather than a "missed" one. The beats are regular, but in the regular rhythm, leaves a slightly longer pause afterward so it seems like a "missed" beat.

It happens to some people when they are tired, and it does no harm and usually doesn't mean anything at all.

Note to K.R.E.: "Renal failure" means disease of the kidneys, which can be various conditions, of course, but retention is the most frequent of them.

STRENGTH for the DAY

DR. EARL L. DOUGLASS

LOOK AROUND YOU

This column feels the necessity of constantly reminding its readers that they have to know it or not we are in the midst of a changing world. Crime is increasing percentagewise six times as fast as the percentage increase in population. Certain types of misbehavior — especially that we once called childish — have experienced such an increase in the past fifty years that one is led to suspect the source of the resulting situation.

The truth of the matter is that people are very seldom aware of the seriousness of conditions and trends by which they live. As we turn back the pages of history and read about the turning points in human affairs, we are astounded that the generation which suffered the earth-turning points recognized as little the significance of the days in which they lived.

We are thinking today of primarily in terms of world war and bombing. Perhaps in fact, by all means, be the most important issue which we confront. If we are to avoid the pitfalls of moral decline — and statistics affirm that we are on them the social customs in which we participate the moral standards by which we abide, the quality of our actions every day in home, office, factory and profession is also, may be far more significant than what is going on in the Kremlin or even in the White House and Capitol in Washington.

We need to peer deeply into our own hearts and into the characters which motivate ourselves by which we are surrounded.

THE PACKSACK

By GREGORY CLARK

One of my old schoolmates who has made a big lot of money in an adventurous business career has lately made a habit of writing to me to receive my congratulations, he invited me to lunch.

"I've come to a most interesting conclusion," he told me. "You are the only one in my thoroughly-goodnatured circle I've ever met."

"I certainly do."

"Early in my career," he said, "I was the victim of some pretty shabby treatment by my employer and associates from employees. As a result, I turned sour. I decided that you could never want to make a period of maybe ten years, during which I was intensely busy prosperous. As the result of my prosperity, I decided to let my true nature assert itself, and I became a good-natured man once more, but a very, very wise, customers, everybody.

"Once more, I became an embittered man, and started all over again, trusting nobody. It took me ten years to get it back. Here I am, prospered once more. But I feel my true nature has been ten years to get it back. Here I am, prospered once more. But I feel my true nature has been ten years to get it back. Here I am, prospered once more. But I feel my true nature has been

Aims of Education in Free Society Big Question for 2,000 Delegates to Decide

By BEL RUFFIN

MONTREAL (CP)—There are some 2,000 delegates attending Canadian Conference on Education and after a full day's talk it appears there may be close to that number of shades of opinion on one of the major questions placed before them.

They were asked what the aims of education in a free society should be and how to carry out these aims.

Speakers ranged from emphasis on the need for freeing the minds of children for creative thought to insistence that religion must be included in the curriculum if students are to learn true values.

There were suggestions that children must be taught to think rather than simply be fed facts. These were countered by a statement from Dr. Hilda Neatby of The University of Saskatchewan, author of the controversial book So Little for the Mind.

She insisted that education without facts would be no education at all.

There were two views that seemed to find fairly wide acceptance.

NEED BETTER TEACHERS

One was that the calibre of education in Canada is not what it should be. Another was that there should be better training for teachers. Dr. Alan Neville Scarfe of the University of Brit. Columbia went so far as to say:

"Nothing is wrong with Canadian education that better quality teachers will not put straight."

It was also Dr. Scarfe who said "schools must set children free to explore, to investigate, to experiment and to construct."

And it was Rev. Henri Legare, rector of the University of Ottawa, who put the case for religious education in the school program.

"Anyone who wants to understand our own culture, as it exists today, cannot dispense with the study of Christian culture, whether he is Christian or not."

Similar view was expressed by Dr. C. E. Phillips, director of graduate studies at the Ontario College of Education, in the booklet that formed the basis of discussion.

"The public school (as contrasted with the denominational school) cannot and must not give religious indoctrination as a function for ethical teaching or for any purpose.

ATTACKS APPROACH

Perhaps the most provocative statement of the day came from Kenneth M. Aitchison of South Burnaby, B.C., president of the British Columbia Teachers' Federation.

He attacked the idea of trying to state the aims of education, saying it "has to be sold in part to all people" and "becomes a statement of pious generalities, to be read once, agreed with, and then forgotten."

Mr. Aitchison said the trouble with education is that the bureaucrat has too much to say and the teacher not enough. Teachers were subjected to "autocratic direction in every central control situation."

The delegates broke up into seven forums to discuss such subjects as the professional status of teachers, development of student potential, new developments in society, financing education, continuing education, the citizen in education, and education and employment.

LIVING COSTS

ing more than 10 persons and covering a wide range of industries, represents an average of total wages paid.

The health and personal care index rose in January to 157.2 from 156.6 due to higher doctors' fees which more than balanced lower prices for pharmaceuticals, including prescriptions.

The increase was caused entirely by a rise in the health care index. The personal care index was unchanged.

HOUSING HOLDS STEAD Y

Housing costs—biggest item in the consumer budget—were unchanged with the index holding steady at 134.9.

The clothing index in January rose to 111.8 from 111.6 as a number of items of men's, women's and children's wear and piece goods moved up from January sales levels.

The transportation index edged upward to 140.7 from 140.6 as all three components indexes rose. The automobile operations index rose as a result of higher gasoline prices; the local transportation index moved up because of higher taxi fares and increases in inter-urban bus fares pushed the travel index up.

The tobacco and alcohol index declined to 117.5 from 117.8. Lower cigarette prices in the tobacco index more than offset slightly higher prices for alcoholic beverages as a result of tax changes in Saskatchewan.

The index of 30 industrial raw materials rose to 248.0 from 247.1 in the three-week period from Jan. 26 to Feb. 16, in the same period the index of Canadian farm products at terminal markets fell to 216.2 from 216.7. Both indexes are based on 1935-39 prices equalling 100.

$300,000 Will Be Spent on Road Repairs

The city of Belleville will spend $300,000 plus on maintenance of city streets this year.

Yesterday council passed the annual month-by-law on which the city will ask subsidy from the Ontario Department of Highways, the amount of the by-law being $300,900.

City Engineer Malcolm Turnbull said today that this amount is up slightly from last year and is from $264,000 on which was the amount on which subsidy was asked four years ago.

In addition to the $300,000 figure there will be a supplementary roads by-law later in the year.

Along with regular roads maintenance work the re-paving of sections of Dundas Street and Coleman Street is expected to be carried out by the city public works department this year. Both of these streets are highway routes and 50 per cent subsidy from the department will be expected for the work.

DEAD ANIMALS

—Grey South of "just plaiting ment of an advisory committee by advice on this problem is a "miniature approach".

"If we allow the processors to reach their goals only will the be farmers in the province as peasants and slaves," he said.

The minister said the advisory committee's investigations have been limited to fruit and vegetables by the hope that any solution would be applicable to other farm commodities.

Peter Manley (L—Stormont) questioned whether the $20,000 figure mentioned in the estimates for rabies control would be enough.

Mr. Stewart replied that the department did go to the Treasury Board for any amount of money required to compensate farmers whose cattle are stricken with rabies.

Mr. Manley also challenged the 1960 payment of more than $11,000 by the Agriculture Department to a cheese-exporting firm for cheese that went bad in England.

Mr. Stewart explained the payments was made to protect the good name of Ontario cheese producers in the important United Kingdom market.

Department officials said lately about $20,000 was repaid by firms that purchased the bad cheese.

The minister also announced a program aimed at wiping out brucellosis—one of the most widespread cattle diseases in Ontario.

He said the department will start a pilot project centred around the experimental farm at Ridgetown. About 150 herds will be regularly inspected and tested in an attempt to find ways of controlling the disease.

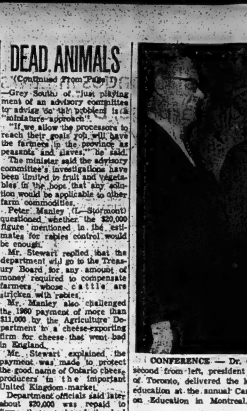
Bowling Alley To Be Closed On Sabbath

Local 10-pin bowling enthusiasts in the habit of indulging in their favorite sport on the Sabbath are going to have their entertainment cut off.

Belleville Mayor A. J. Haig told council that he had been approached by the city solicitor that the Belleville Bowl on the eastern outskirts of the city would receive Sunday public operations forthwith.

The mayor announced today by City Solicitor Guss Porter who told The Ontario Intelligencer that he had been advised by the Belleville Bowl solicitor in Hamilton that they would abide by the city Sunday closing by-law.

This calls for bowling alleys to be closed from 11.30 Saturday night to 1.00 p.m. Sunday.



Jim Robertson, local manager for the Belleville Bowl, said he had received no direction regarding closing Sunday although he said he would be seeing his firm's solicitor on Wednesday.

"So far I haven't heard anything about it," he said.

Mr. Robertson admitted, however, that before Christmas he had received a summons to appear in court with respect to the action being taken to close the alley on Sunday.

The alleys have remained open on Sunday since new 10 pin bowling emporium was opened late last summer.

In the fall council voted for the city to take to force the alley to close on Sunday and directed the city solicitor to take the necessary action.

Balance of Payments Deficit Is Lowest in Seven Years

OTTAWA (CP) — Canada reduced its balance of payments deficit to $365,000,000 last year —the lowest since 1955 thanks to a surplus of merchandise trade.

But the Dominion Bureau of Statistics reported today there was a record high $1,168,000,000 deficit on non-merchandise transactions with other countries—nearly half of it resulting from dividend and interest payments on foreign investments.

The current account deficit, a deficit of nearly 20 per cent of the $1,900,000,000 total, was the second consecutive decline from the peak deficit of $1,494,000 in 1957.

In both those years the country's merchandise trade account has been improving. But there was also a widening deficit on "invisible" non-merchandise transactions such as interest and dividend payments, tourist and travel expenditures and shipping costs.

BIG TRADE BOOST

The biggest single factor in the reduction of the balance of payments deficit was a $179,000,000 surplus on commodity trade, compared with a $145,000,000 deficit in 1960.

These figures were in line with normal trade statistics because of certain adjustments made for

Britain's Test Ban Attitude More Flexible Than States'

By JOSEPH MacSWEEN
Canadian Press Staff Writer

Britain seems to be taking a more flexible attitude than the United States to the question of reaching a nuclear test - ban agreement, informed sources say.

A somewhat puzzling contradiction in reports from London and Washington indicates British is placing less emphasis than the U.S. on the scope of the inspection system needed as to enforce a nuclear treaty.

The contradiction is not so much in what is said by Prime Minister Macmillan and President Kennedy as in what is not given out by lesser officials regarding inspection, verification and Russia's attitudes — expressed as loosely as possible to avoid charges of espionage cloaked in a disarmament argument.

William C. Foster, chief of the U.S. Disarmament Agency, admitted in a television press conference Sunday the U.S. and Britain were not in agreement on the problem—little more than a week before the subject is to come under at-least discussion in Geneva.

TEST TALK

There was nothing equivocal in Kennedy's statement Friday that atmospheric nuclear tests will be resumed unless Russia agrees to a treaty by the latter part of April.

But Kennedy also referred to "new modifications" in the test-ban pact "in the light of new experience" and this fed speculation in Britain that he envisaged a looser treaty.

The importance of this point was apparent from the obvious care with which Foster chose his words when he was asked if he could say whether the modifications would be downward or upward.

"No, I cannot although on balance, if anything, I would think they might be upward," Foster declared.

TESTS DETECTED

Kennedy indicated in his Friday speech he was particularly alarmed about Russian high-yield tests. There is little doubt the U.S. and other countries could detect these in any case and, indeed, there is no indication of worry that Russia got away with any secret blasts in last fall's series.

But Foster was worried about the inspection.

"At the time the April treaty was proposed, we had no concept of the magnitude of the series of tests which could be carried in secret, as demonstrated by the recent series from the Soviet Union.

"Therefore we must modify the treaty to take cognizance of that experience and the modifications are designed toward that end."

Observers saw this as a big territory whose exploration would take much time, lessening chances for a treaty by May.

In this view, the U.S. stand would result almost inevitably in a western resumption of tests with no answering series by the Russians—and Britain was said to soften her approach to prevent a fatal spiral.

captive until the attack was over. The raiders got away in a huge charge of explosives and machinegun fire. Only a huge garage inside the prison walls was damaged.

As they retreated they locked the prison gate so none of the prisoners could escape. The terrorists fired machine-guns wildly into the flames as they fled.

High winds fanned the flames and firemen had difficulty bringing the fire under control. Panic swept through the prison's sprawling red blocks and hundreds in neighboring sections of the city massed in crowds, screaming and wailing.

All the political prisoners were transferred to other quarters outside the prison.

Algiers radio Friday 25 persons were killed—27 of them Moslems—and 130 wounded.

The terrorists continued a French and Algerian rebel leaders headed for the French Swiss border for the opening Wednesday of the decisive round of negotiations for a cease-fire and independence agreement for Algeria.

In Algiers a 12-pound charge of plastic explosives was found on a Moroccan airliner shortly before it was to take off for Casablanca. Officials said the charge was in a tightly-closed pack and apparently the fuse sputtered out for lack of oxygen. Police blamed the bombing attempt on the secret army.

FLARES IN FRANCE

Secret army terrorism also flared in France. A French Army car was ambushed on the outskirts of Paris and two officers were wounded in gunfire.

Former premier Pierre Mendes-France, a supporter of Algerian independence, was forced to cancel a lecture at Grenoble after the mayor withdrew permission to use the auditorium. The manager said secret army had threatened to harm his children if he let Mendes-France use the hall.

Louis Joxe, Algerian affairs minister and chief French negotiator, spent 45 minutes with de Gaulle. Premier Michel Debre stayed on for another 25 minutes.

It looked like an A-bomb," said Leonard Sanders, a Fort Worth Star-Telegram copy editor who saw a drive-in theatre close by. "The sky lit up behind the movie screen and a huge cloud of smoke rose almost immediately."

Council Turns Down Petition For Watermain

A petition for the construction of sewer and watermains on Bridge Street, East, under local improvements, was turned down by council yesterday.

The area for which the sewer and watermain was proposed is a 600 ft stretch opposite the shopping plaza fronting an area being sub-divided by a local builder.

Alderman Joseph Raycroft as chairman of the city public works committee, told council it was the feeling of the committee that the work should be under private sub-division control rather than under local improvements.

At the same time, however, council was asked to review the request for installation of watermains on McFarland Ave. in Hillcrest where residents were said to be without water.

Alderman Robert Treash said the health of residents in the area should be of first consideration by council.

A petition from residents in the area for construction of the watermain was before council last year but was deferred to allow more consideration.

Alderman Temple's request was turned over to the Department of Health.

Brilliant Performance Given By Young Canadian Pianist

By EUGENE LANG

A near-capacity crowd was on hand in the Collegiate auditorium last evening as the first concert of the 1961-62 series of attractions of the Belleville Community Concert Association was presented featuring the brilliant young Canadian pianist, Ronald Turini. Winner of both the Busoni Competition of Bolzano, Italy, and the Geneva Competition of Switzerland in 1959 he further increased his musical stature by coming second in the Queen Elizabeth of Belgium International Concours in 1960.

Studying with noted teachers in both Canada and the U.S. he has eventually reached the point where he has been accepted by the renowned Vladimir Horowitz, a man considered as one of the top five pianists in the world today. He made his American debut just a little over a year ago and certainly surpassed the expectations rumored for him.

This season the Canada Council arranged for him a series of engagements with all the leading Canadian orchestras from Montreal to coast along with numerous solo recitals. He is returning to the American continent this season and is also returning to Europe for which there already appeared for him.

His program consisted of works by five composers ranging from 18th century Scarlatti, Beethoven, Chopin and Liszt of the 19th to Hervey Sacre, present era. In the two opening Sonatas of Domenico Scarlatti he demonstrated technical ability encountered by clarity of detail. The first of these little introspective items were enjoyed more so in that they were not the usual "Cat and Mouse" actually connected with the name Scarlatti, but offerings of a more measured pace to reveal the pianist's purity of delineation.

The epic grandeur of Beethoven's mighty Sonata in F Minor, Opus 57, "Appassionata" was fully realized by Mr. Turini in the portrayal of its powerful propulsions. The various outside movements fared best with the Andante pianissimo whose principal theme was developed in deep contemplation and in its initial statement. We would also like to have heard Mr. Turini take the repeat in the last movement which would have lent more anticipated excitement when the immense coda is finally reached in its hallstorm of frenetic fury. However, this was one of the finest overall interpretations, one could hear of this masterwork in many a night of concert going.

The two works of Ravel, "Jeux d'eau" from "Miroirs" and Toccata from "Le Tombeau de Couperin" were both delightful contributions by the young pianist, tonally and rhythmically emphasizing the enormous bravuras in the former.

The Barcarolle Op. 60 of Chopin was projected with such pathos and refinement that one seldom hears injected into this work that it would be safe to say a finer rendition of this number by a pianist could not come across. The artist probed into this lovely number by milking from its depths the beauty of her melodies and dialogical sequences. Also in the Polonaise-Fantaisie brightness, the F Major from Op. 23 in lightning lilt and the Revolutionary Etude Op. 10 in powerful grandiloquence.

The three Liszt selections all gave the pianist full scope to exhibit his enormous technique which he seems to have an inexhaustible supply at his command. The Sonnetto del Petrarca No. 104 he projected in its compelling phrases as is the Liszt touch for dramatic singing in its dolefulness interwinding with virtuosic veerings. Both were given emphatic interpretations by Mr. Turini. The Hungarian Rhapsody No. 12 in C Sharp Minor was a fitting finale to his recital, in which the pianist elicited from the piano practically every possibility that the instrument is capable of and in this number nothing.

Following renewed applause on the part of the appreciative audience Mr. Turini returned to play two encores, "The Spinning Song" of Mendelsohn and a Prelude of Rachmaninoff both capped with polish and personativeness. All in all an excellent recital by a young pianist with a great future in store for him in the years to come.

Following the concert Mr. Turini, the board of directors and numerous members of the association were entertained at the home of Mrs. Fred H. Deacon on William Street.

Mr. and Mrs. Leonard George Seames are shown following their recent marriage in St. Thomas' Anglican Church, Belleville. The bride is the former Miss Patricia Margaret Musselman, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Ross Musselman of Belleville. The groom is the son of Mr. and Mrs. George Seames, also of Belleville.

SEAMES — MUSSETT

White chrysanthemums arranged in candelabra and white satin bows the pews in St. Thomas' Anglican Church, Belleville for a recent lovely wedding when the Reverend Canon C. B. McConnell, rector of the church, united Miss Patricia Margaret Musselman, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. L. P. Musselt, to Leonard George Seames, son of Mr. and Mrs. George Seames also of Belleville.

The traditional wedding music was rendered by the church organist.

For her marriage by her father, the radiantly lovely bride wore a floor-length bridal gown of Chantilly lace and tulle over tulle and taffeta featuring a molded bodice of French lace with scalloped lace neckline accented with sequins and tiny seed pearls and long fitted sleeves lily-pointed at the wrists. The mid-calf bouffant skirt of tulle over taffeta was accented by lace appliques. She wore a crown of rhinestones and seed pearls with an oval silk illusion veil appliqued with French lace embroidered with tiny pearls and carried a bouquet of pink roses and white stephanotis centred by a white satin bow.

Mrs. Barbara Smith of Carrington, as matron of honor, was attired in pal blue brocaded taffeta with full overskirt of pale blue chiffon, with white accessories and carried a nosegay of pink roses mingled with white mums.

The bridegroom was attended by Mr. Ronald Smith of Cannifton

THE FAMILY COUNCIL

Jane S. — My sister insists upon comparing our babies, day by day.

Peggy R. — They're the same age, and it's fun. Jane's too sensitive.

Jane S. — Both my sister and I had babies at about the same time, in fact, their birth days are three days apart. We talk to each other almost every day over the phone, and all Peggy wants to do is compare the two kids. She asks me what my Susie did the day before, and it's always something her Bobby did a week before — and it's better!

She tells me babies who cut their teeth early are smarter, knowing that hers has four while mine has only one. She always wants to know how much Susie eats, and that's the cue for her to say Bobby eats twice as much. I love Peggy, and I think my little nephew is adorable. But why can't we just enjoy the babies instead of running a race to see which one is supe-rior?

• • •

Peggy R. — I think it's wonderful that little Susie and my Bobby are the same age. It makes it so interesting to compare the way they develop. When I talk to Jane I always want to know about her baby as I'm apt an idea of how mine is doing.

Jane gets annoyed at this. Perhaps it's because Bobby weighs so much more than her Susie. I can't help it if my baby is growing faster than hers. She shouldn't take it personally. She can't help it if Susie only has one tooth and Bobby has four. She'll catch up.

I get so wrapped up in my baby that it's good for me to discuss somebody else's. I'm sorry Jane is so sensitive. I only ask questions to learn more about babies.

• • •

The Council: Jane objects to being "straight man" for her sister's gloats. Peggy's endless questions seem, to Jane, not to brag.

prompted by sincere interest in how Susie's doing, but by a compulsion to brag about how much better Bobby is developing. We think she's right.

Nonie Hastings writes: prompts Peggy to see the baby as gauge of who's the better mother. Isn't comparing babies unscientific! It's cruel because it hurts competing mothers and infants into a competitive stream in order to bolster a young mother's ego. If Peggy needs to establish her superiority over Jane, she should vie with tennis rackets or crossword puzzles, not with human beings. And it's unscientific because all babies differ in their speed of development. Peggy's baby is not "ahead" of Jane's. He's just ahead of himself, compared to a month ago.

It's best to nip the comparing business in the bud. In any conversation, but it makes little sense. And in the case of Jane, it makes for discomfort and annoyance. Peggy had better shape up as individual differences. She'll learn about growth lags and growth spurts. The little butterfly can suddenly grow tall and lean. "The fat baby" can suddenly lose fat. The 10-year-old who towered among her classmates and seemed headed for a life in the Tall, Tall Shoppes, stayed a big 10-year-old height and 10-year average. As to early teething, it's no sign of superior intelligence. Look at baby beavers. They have a mouth full of teeth and still can't avoid turning into fur coats.

If she daily telephone calls continue to irritate you against Jane, reduce them to every other day and even less seldom, until Peggy's questions indicate she's really interested in Susie's baby, not in how to brag ahead. And get your info on babies from your pediatrician, not from Peggy.

The side-by-side growing up of their babies should be a joy. Peggy should not use it as an opportunity to hurt her sister. She should analyze her needs and questions, not to brag.

SPEAKING of MANNERS

WHAT'S YOUR E.Q.?

Unless at a wedding follow-a-bride's-bouquet, when escorting guests to their seats. Usually, you're better briefed about what's expected, than are the guests. Do you know the correct way to accompany an usher? To find out, see if you can answer these questions correctly:

1. When an usher escorts a woman to her seat, which arm does he offer?

2. If a woman arrives with her husband, what is the procedure for accompanying the usher down the aisle?

3. If a woman is to be seated on the left side of the church, should she then take the left arm of the usher?

4. When a man arrives alone, how does he walk down the aisle with the usher?

5. If several women arrive at the church in a group, should they wait in the rear until an usher escorts each to a pew?

6. When two women arrive together, should they be ushered to their seats?

7. When is the proper way for the groom's parents to take their seats?

8. When is the bride's mother to appear, how is she escorted down the aisle?

Answers:

1. A woman guest is always escorted to her seat on the right arm of the usher.

2. The wife walks down the aisle on the right arm of the usher and her husband follows a few paces behind.

3. No. She always takes his right arm. At the pew, the usher will extend his left arm to cross in front of him into her seat.

4. The lone gentleman guest walks down the aisle alongside the usher. He does not take his arm.

5. No. The usher offers his arm to the eldest in the group and the others walk behind them to the pew.

6. The usher escorts the elder to her seat first, then returns and escorts the younger down the aisle.

7. The child walks beside his mother and the usher, while the father brings up the rear.

8. The usher walks beside the oldest man in the group and the others walk directly behind.

9. A special usher is designated to take the mother of the groom to her seat on his arm. The groom's father walks a few steps in back of them.

10. The bride's mother takes the groom's right arm and both proceed down the aisle. When the mother is seated, the signal is given for the processional to begin.

Foxboro H-S Plans for 'Spring Fair'

The February meeting of the Foxboro Home and School Association was held in the school auditorium with Mrs. Bradshaw presiding and a goodly number of parents present.

The receipts of two dances, $18.00, were handed to the treasurer.

Mrs. Bradshaw said she had been approached as to the Home and School Association providing a public address system. It is possible TV for the school. However, no action is to be taken on either of these matters as it was felt that the school is not far from a telephone and there are not enough educational programs on TV during the school hours at least, to warrant the spending of that amount of money.

It was decided to again have a "Spring Fair," with plans for same being made at the next meeting. It was also decided to sponsor the school band with regard to the purchase of a new duplicator.

NEW H. S. STUDY COURSE

Following the business Mrs. Tucker introduced the new program and gave a bit of interesting information on the new course of study for those entering high school. She also introduced Mr. Ross Woodcock, one of the girls who took part in the public speaking. Therefore, he gave some interesting points on the life of Alexander MacKenzie.

Jennifer Morris was the next speaker introduced and spoke on "Etiquette" giving some excellent advice on the "do's and don'ts" of good manners. Jennifer, incidentally, placed second at Canniffon and now goes to Belleville to represent them.

Mrs. Rose's room provided the music for the evening with some delightful singing. "A group of girls sang "Jack Frost," followed by a similar group of boys singing "The Three Sons." The girls again sang "Oh, Susie, What Can the Matter Be?" The boys' next selection was "Ten Little Indians" which was followed by two groups joining in the singing of "The Polk Dance."

SPEAKER

Mrs. Tucker introduced Cpl. Elliott, who spoke on the life of Sir John A. Macdonald.

Mrs. Bradshaw took charge of the meeting following Carol Elliott's speech and announced that a panel of members from the Home and School Council will be present at the March meeting, March 27, also a panel of representatives from the Children's Aid Society will be present at the April meeting. These should be interesting meetings. Please, members, come out and support each dedication.

The social convenors, Mrs. J. Hill and Mrs. Churchill, provided a delicious lunch during the social hour.

Oven Dinner With Fish

by Mary Moore

It may have been the weather. It may have been the setting. There is no doubt about the result. The men differed dishes of baked haddock I served disappeared like juicy steak. That's all the evidence I need.

Before I started my cooking for Ash Wednesday I had a conference with the fishman in our community. I asked what fish was the most popular. "Haddock — both fresh and smoked. I sell 4000 lbs. of haddock a week here and will sell 6000 lbs. or more a week during Lent." Is a one-coast store that knows how it whale of a lot of fish.

I bought both fresh and smoked haddock and was determined to bake them because I was having a baked pudding for dessert.

Here is my oven dinner menu this for the "meat" if you want a fish treat.

The Bible reading from 1st Corinthians was read by Mrs. Wellman, Mrs. W. Neal gave the opening prayer and Mrs. Pratt, Little Helpers' secretary, reported there had been three sick visits and 12 cards sent.

Business was discussed and it was voted to give the Dorcas secretary money for baby, also to send pledge and dues in and purchase material for sick and shut-ins. A committee was formed to investigate same. Remainder of plans were made for the oyster supper.

The first part of the study book was given by Rev. Fleming, "Explore the Meaning of Christ as Light." The Scripture was in charge of Mrs. M. Tanner, who had as her theme, "Valentine's Day." Mrs. Wellman gave a reading, Mrs. B. Eggleston a solo and Mrs. Tanner read the meaning of Valentine's Day and conducted a contest.

A delicious lunch was served by the hostess, bringing an enjoyable meeting to a close.

Eight Byelections May Prove If British Govt. Still Enjoys The Confidence of Electors

By ROD CURRIE

LONDON (CP)—Eight byelections within the next few weeks will provide the widest sampling of opinion since the Conservative government became involved in Common Market talks the unpopular pay pause and the controversial Commonwealth immigration bill.

But the feeling among politicians apparently is that none of these problems at present hits closer enough to individual voters to influence the election results.

Mark Arnold-Forster, political correspondent for The Sunday Observer, writes:

"No one expects the citizens of eight constituencies to prove definitively whether the nation wants to join the market.

"What they could do, however, would be to prove whether or not the government still enjoys the electors' general confidence."

The first test will be in Lincoln March 8 with Orpington, North and Orpington voting March 13. Dates for the other five have not yet been set but all except that in Middlesbrough West are expected before the budget is brought down, probably in April.

The Conservatives are defending in Orpington, Blackpool defending in Orpington, Blackpool North and Middlesbrough West; and political observers consider it highly unlikely that they will be defeated. Labor, also on the basis of its strong majority in the last elections, is considered secure in Pontefract and Middlesbrough East.

Derby, Stockton-on-Tees and Lincoln previously were won by Labor but the slim majorities make these byelections border cases. The inclusion of a Liberal candidate in the Lincoln contest, and it is likely in the other, could weaken the Labor position.

Despite the surprising strength of the Liberals in the last two years, political pundits say it is improbable that they could win any of the coming contests.

The Liberals have caused most embarrassment to the Labor Party in byelection politics by having dropped them to third place in a number of byelections, largely qualified observers feel this trend indicates dissatisfaction with the government and the opposition more than a definite swing to the Liberals.

Both Conservatives and Labories are pleased that the first of the elections is set for Lincoln. They feel that if they can humiliate the Liberals—and, on present form, it seems they can—they may cut into Liberal support in the other constituencies.

The campaigns, just getting under way, already have brought some rather uncharacteristic tactics, particularly in Lincoln where Laborite Dick Taverne, a handsome 33-year-old barrister, is setting the pace.

He has signed up seven beautiful daughters of seven leading Socialists to run a Daughters' Day campaign among the young ladies of the town. And he has opened his campaign rooms—We've got Dick Taverne in Lincoln Town—throughout the city's 100-odd pubs.

The Conservatives' rather inept attempt to promote Percy Grieve backfired. Even Tory supporters couldn't help giggling when the slogan—Grieve for Lincoln — vote Conservative—appeared scattered around town.

The Liberal candidate is Patrick Russell, 34, an economics tutor.

UNDECIDED ON ECM

Public opinion on the government's decision to negotiate with the Common Market countries with an eye possibly to joining the economic community still is generally confused, mainly because Labor party has not taken a stand on the issue.

The pay - freeze scheme to keep wages more in line with production and exports has been extremely unpopular. But now that a relaxation of the plan has been promised for April and the unions of railwaymen and postal workers, among others, have reached compromise agreements, much of the hostility has gone out of the argument.

The Immigration bill, termed unfair by the Labor opposition because it indirectly affects mainly unskilled workers from other Commonwealth countries, caused a split among the Commons but, observers say, probably won't influence many individual voters.

Standing in the House now is: Conservatives 365; Labor and supporters 263; Labor-Independent 6; Liberal 6; Independent 2; Vacant 8.

Remarks That Give Weight Watchers a Slow Burn

By HAL BOYLE

NEW YORK (AP)—Remarks that give weight watchers a slow burn:

"Well, Elmer, you've already lost one pound—now you've got got three more to go.

"I hear he has to weigh himself on two bathroom scales—one under each foot."

"We ought to do something special for his birthday. How about baking a cake and putting a piece of melba toast?"

"You're doing fine, Mr. Wallow. You've taken off another quarter of a pound this week. Now start eating so you can keep it. At this rate in another three years you'll be down to within 15 pounds of your normal weight."

"Would you mind taking this plate back to the kitchen, waiter? The gravy's too cold. And try to tell the chef not to put a little more on. I like cooler of the dogs."

FRIENDS ARE FIENDISH

"Mind if I take some of those French fries off your plate, Elmer? I know you aren't allowed them."

"And this pill is to cut down on your appetite, Mr. Wallow . . . This pill is to make you feel less nervous . . . This pill will help you from dreaming about food at night . . . And this pill is to, . . ."

"Why don't you go to my doctor, Elmer? He lets you have four pieces of bread a day — one piece at breakfast, twice a week, plus ice cream on Sundays."

"Gee, I sure do envy you, Elmer. I eat . . . and eat, and eat—and I can't put on an ounce to save my life."

"Oh, dear, did you burn your finger? Let me put a little butter on to soothe it. It's been so long since you've had any butter."

"I'm sorry, Mr Wallow I've stretched this tape measure as tight as I can, and you still have a size 46 waist!"

"I can't understand it, dear I'm sure I left a pint of cream and half a deep-dish apple pie in the refrigerator last night and this morning they're both gone."

TRY AND DIET

"Why don't you go to my doctor, Elmer? His patients lose weight on a diet of bananas, fruit cake, peanut butter, crackers and pork chops."

"Yeah, Elmer looks as fit as a fiddle—a bull fiddle!"

"Please quit pulling in your stomach so hard, dear. You're so red in the face I'm afraid you'll bust over."

"Gosh, I don't know what happened. This fat guy next to me asked you for a lettuce and tomato salad without dressing and when I ordered a ham sandwich and a double thick chocolate malted milk—well, he just fainted and fell off the stool."

COLD FOR THE PRAIRIES—Below-normal temperatures are predicted for most of Canada west of Quebec in the 30-day outlook of the United States weather bureau for March.

The outlook is based on long-range predictions and is not a specific forecast. A change in weather pattern may produce major errors.

Heavy precipitation is expected in most areas except the west coast. Normal precipitation is given in inches of rain; one inch of rain equals 10 inches of snow. (CP Newsmap)

In-Laws Slighted Over Wedding

DEAR DORIS:—My brother-in-law is about to get married on Saturday and my husband is to be his best man. However, my future sister-in-law has not asked or invited me to be a bridesmaid or maid of honor.

I feel this is utterly wrong. I think under the circumstances my husband should have refused the invitation on the grounds that his wife was not invited to be in the wedding party. I told this to my husband and he told his brother what I said.

DORIS CLARK

He in turn brought a tiny book on etiquette for weddings. He was trying to excuse the whole situation and his fiancee on the basis of what it said in this leaflet, that the maid-of-honor should be a sister, relative or close friend. He underlined this and left it lying about for me to read!

I should like to tell them if they are wrong. I seem to be unable to convince my husband.—HURT!

• • •

DEAR HURT:—The girl in the case has a right to choose her best friend for the job. Even if your brother-in-law waffled it different, it would not be his place to change things.

The etiquette book showed rare insight and tact. You should, of course, be placed with other relatives or close friends at the reception.

Don't start hard feelings in the family by starting burn.

DEAR DORIS:—Recently you published a letter from a widower who signed himself No Future.

For many, many years there has been a very great need in this city, and everywhere for that matter, for an organization for people such as No Future—people who have lost their partners and find themselves with no social contacts, and nothing to do in their long, lonely hours.

Recently here in Kingston a group of interested people met and formed the Over 40 Club. It is for all unmarried men between the ages of 30 and 65, strictly a social group, non-political, non-denominational, and definitely not a lonely hearts club.

We feel that by helping other people to overcome some of their problems, we can help ourselves serve ours. Loneliness is best overcome by being with people who have shared similar experiences and forgetting one's own personal problems among friends.

Interest in the 39 Club has been keen.—MRS. R. H., Kingston, Ontario.

DEAR MRS. R. H.:—Sounds good. Just what do you do when you meet. Two's one more and we will pass the idea on through the column.

• • •

DEAR DORIS:—I went with a fellow for a few years once and it ended with an experience that left me nervous and disinterested in men.

I am in my thirties now and lately a single fellow a few years older than I has shown interest in me, but I keep telling him I am not interested in going out with anybody. He has been very persuasive and has said a lot of nice things to me and also things to make me feel sorry for not wanting to be friendly.

My mother is very concerned about me, but I guess it is up to me to make up my own mind. Do you think that I am doing a wise thing or should I go out with him to see what he is like? We are both on the shy side.

I would not want to go through the same experience again. —FRUSTRATED.

DEAR FRUSTRATED:—Are you a women or a bear-skin?

Just because you picked a rotten apple, you don't have to throw out the whole barrel and starve to death! Fill dare you to date him once and see if you know how to act.

Income Tax Explained

Written and designed for the taxpayer who is not in the employ of the income tax services of a professional accountant or visit an Income Tax Office.

By C. A. MILLEZ

Former supervising assessor Income Tax Department.

There is one section of the Income Tax Act that costs a number of taxpayers quite a sum each year because they are not knowing of its existence.

This section states that the taxpayer does not get tax deductions withheld from at least three quarters of his income shall pay his tax for that year in quarterly instalments. The first instalment is due on March 31, and the others on June 30, September 30, and December 31. If on making up his tax return after December 31 he finds that he has overpaid his tax, the balance of the overpayment will be refunded.

If the taxpayer is one who has never paid tax quarterly, he has two methods of computing what he should pay each quarter. The first method is to pay on the dates shown above, one quarter of the tax he paid in the previous year. The other is to estimate his income for the coming year, compute the tax on it at the current years rates and pay quarterly one-fifth of it on the dates.

If the taxpayer is one who should have paid quarterly and failed to make such payments, he will be charged interest. Interest on these payments that were overdue is computed at 5% of that year. This installment interest is charged regardless of the fact that the taxpayer may have paid his tax in full for the year when he filed his return.

The Income Tax department has a special form for computing instalment payments and the taxpayer should request it before sending in the payment due on March 31. It is usually the taxpayer who is in the first year of retirement that gets caught by this section of the Income Tax Act.

Question? I am now retired and have no other than pension income. Will the Income Tax Office accept my pay-as-you-earn?

Answer: In the case of no tax deductions on your income, you are liable to pay instalment tax for the year and pay it in quarterly instalments.

Question? I have just received my assessment notice and I see an amount added to my tax, labelled as interest. What is meant by this?

Answer: You apparently should have paid your tax in quarterly instalments. This interest is on the amount that you should have made and were overdue as of December 31.

Question? I have an investment policy where I pay in full at a fixed sum each year. Can I deduct these payments on my tax return?

Answer: No. It is a capital outlay.

Brazil Is Great, Sprawling, Frightened Giant Tottering Toward Day of Reckoning

The difficulties are complicated by prospects of an election campaign next summer to name a new Congress.

University Dean Gives Reasons For Recent Upsurge in Graduate Studies at Canadian Colleges

By BOB TROSKIE

EDMONTON (CP) — Canada, a sparsely - populated country and the United States for a large proportion of its university staffs, are not training or produce more of its own but rely heavily on other countries for underdeveloped countries, says Dr. A. G. McCalla.

Dr. McCalla, dean of graduate studies at the University of Alberta, described these as the two major reasons for a recent upsurge in graduate studies at Canadian universities.

The first installment is due on March 31, and the others on June 30, September 30, and December 31. If on making up his tax return after December 31 he finds that he has overpaid his tax, the balance of the overpayment will be refunded.

Nikita Loves Music, Opera And Soccer

NEW YORK (AP)—The only in - law of Nikita Khrushchev who is a Soviet citizen is premier's personality lies in his peasant origin. "When there is a new person in power . . .

Aleksei I. Adzhubei's views are published in a copyrighted interview in This Week magazine. Adzhubei is editor of the Soviet government newspaper, Izvestia.

In a series of questions about Khrushchev's personal life, Adzhubei gave these answers:

"He reads a lot. His favorite authors are Russia's 19th - century writers—Pushkin, Gogol, Chekhov. Tolstoy is his favorite.

"He loves music. His favorite composer is Tchaikovsky. He likes to go to the opera and ballet.

"He likes to watch soccer.

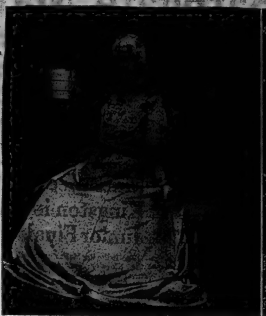
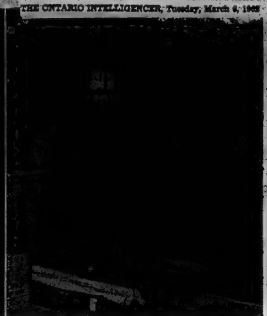
In various times in Khrushchev's life, Adzhubei said, he worked as a coal miner, locksmith, metal worker, farmer and mill-worker.



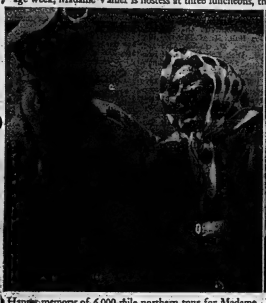
Adzhubei said Khrushchev often writes his own speeches and is the type of person who makes up his mind quickly,

Her Excellency, Madame Georges P. Vanier



Canada's Gracious First Lady

Her Excellency, Madame Georges P. Vanier, wife of the Queen's representative in Canada, has been first lady of the land since her husband became Governor General in 1959. During these years she has met thousands of people. Many remember her as a gracious hostess at state functions; others, as leader of a group of school children singing a we-want-a-holiday petition to His Excellency during a visit to a pulp mill. All remember her as a woman of vital character and warmth. For Madame Vanier, devoted mother of a daughter and four sons, is no less proud or fond of her much larger family—18 million Canadians. She remembers her 1961 northern tour with her husband in terms of "those wonderful people", treasures a shawl given her by inmates of a Quebec women's prison whom she visited "because I wanted to". Happily, Madame Vanier's deep affection for people is mirrored by Canadians from coast to coast.



Madame Vanier in gown she wore for opening Parliament. Only child of Justice Charles Archer (Quebec Superior Court) and Mrs. Archer, she was christened Pauline.

Representative of Canadian Red Cross in France after 1944, Madame Vanier has always had welfare work interest. Here, she talks to Eskimo boy in Churchill hospital.

A Busy And Useful Life Is Led By Madame Vanier

Her Excellency Madame Georges P. Vanier moved into the 50-room Ottawa residence of Canada's Governor General, Rideau Hall, upon her husband's appointment to his vice-regal position in September, 1959. The tightly-planned, official and social life she leads as chatelaine of Government House might exhaust many women. Madame Vanier seems to thrive on her busy schedule. She is a woman alive with interest. When Madame Vanier enters a room stuffiness flies out the window. Visitors nervously awaiting an audience find their qualms vanish when introduced. Foreign dignitaries relax in her friendly welcome. The reason is no secret. Madame Vanier simply likes people, all kinds of people, and is intensely interested in them and what they do. Like her husband, whom she married in 1921, she is Canadian born (Montreal) and completely bilingual.

Educated in Montreal's Couvent du Sacre-Coeur and later by private tutors, Pauline Vanier was the only child of Justice and Mrs. Charles Archer. In 1919 she was introduced to 21-year-old Georges Vanier, then an officer of the Royal 22nd. Regiment. One year after their marriage they left Rideau Cottage on the grounds of Government House where they were living and began 30 years of service overseas. From then on, except for brief periods at home in Canada where two of their five children were born, their life was centred in Geneva and London. From 1939 to 1940 Madame Vanier lived in Paris where her husband was Canadian Minister to France. After France fell, they lived in London for a year, Quebec City two years and then back to London where General Vanier was envoy to several European governments in exile. Later, the North African landings took them to Algiers with General de Gaulle.

At the liberation of France, General Vanier was appointed Canadian ambassador to France. Returning to France with her husband, Madame Vanier, long interested in welfare work, at once energetically established an office in the Canadian embassy to carry out active relief work for the stricken people left by the tide of war. In recognition of this work, the French later honored her with the Jacques Cartier Medal. In 1953, when the General retired from diplomatic service, they returned to Montreal where Madame Vanier continued with her social work and her husband served once more with his old regiment.

The only time the Vaniers gathered together as a whole family was in 1946, in Paris. Today, their daughter Therese is a pediatrician in Boston, U.S.A. Of their four sons, Bernard is an artist in Paris (married with one child), Jean, a philosopher in Portugal, Georges, a Trappist monk at Oka, Quebec, and Michel is an officer in the regiment of which his father is still an active colonel, the Royal 22nd. Regiment, the famed "Van Doos."

As first lady of Canada, Madame Vanier brings to her position graciousness, understanding, humor. Fond memories of her northern tour with her husband include the time at Fort Simpson, Northwest Territories, when, seeing a group of Indian children dancing, Madame Vanier asked what kind of a dance it was. A rain-dance, she was told. Why do you want it to rain? We don't want you to go away, and if it rains perhaps you will have to stay another day. And rain it did, too!

For relaxation Madame Vanier turns to quiet hours with her husband whenever their duties allow. Another favorite relaxation is the greenhouses of Government House with their flowers in bloom the year round. The petit salon which she redecorated is gay and bright with color and the fresh look of Ottawa Valley knotty-pine panelling. Madame Vanier's lady-in-waiting, first cousin and companion is Madame Louis Berger, with whom she grew up in Montreal. Now, she assists Canada's first lady in arranging the official round of luncheons, dinners, receptions, parties and numerous other appointments which go to make up the busy life of the vice-regal occupants of Ottawa's Rideau Hall.

RARE, MEDIUM, WELL-DONE

By Geo. H. Carver, Sports Editor

Efforts to revive the old Central Ontario Senior Baseball League will be made again this year—in fact some spadework has already started, according to Ken Soden, manager of the Belleville Kenmore Baseball Club.

Mr. Soden told this agent the other day that he has sent letters to baseball officials in Kingston, Oshawa, Peterborough, and Lesside, Toronto, regarding possibilities of entries. If replies are at all favorable a meeting will be called to discuss organization.

The Kenmore, 1960 Ontario junior "A" baseball champions, and runners-up in 1961, won the championship of the Lakeshore Baseball League going away last year prior to their entry in OBA junior "A" playdowns.

It was the first time in years that a city baseball team had played in an Eastern Ontario organization. It was a difficult that embraced teams of varying calibre that resulted in a lack of competitive strength in some instances.

According to Ontario Baseball Association president Jack Carson of this city, who has been active for years, and a number of players of these squads are now over the junior age hump. Besides each city has a quota of older players playing in city and district leagues who could form the nucleus of a senior club.

If the respective strength of junior clubs of these centres is any criterion, a senior circuit would produce teams that would have an equality of ability. "I do not believe there would be a "weak sister" in the group.

Formation of a senior league in this part of Central Ontario, would give baseball an added boost and I sincerely believe that fans in all participating centres would "go for it."

Hence the blessing of OBA president Carson who said he would bring it to the attention of the OBA annual meeting scheduled for the Hotel Genosha, Oshawa, on March 17th.

Mr. Carson, who has or will soon terminate a highly successful first year as "president of the board" of the OBA is seeking his second term at the March 17th annual. Jack is recognized as one of Ontario's outstanding baseball officials and there is little doubt in his mind his higher levels that he will be given his second year "behind the wheel."

He deserves it because he has earned it. His subordinates say his direct approach to problems, his ability to make quick decisions, usually the correct ones, and his refusal to deviate from proper protocural action, has gained for him the respect and esteem of the association in general.

And as in hockey the sun of the paid baseball player appears to be setting. The fact is some top senior centres have already sunk below the horizon. The top-ranking Intercounty League, long the plush "amateur" circuit of Ontario, is having its trouble.

London and Hamilton have withdrawn from the league, the former because it has no sponsor, Hamilton because it will not meet player salary demands. Guelph says it will not participate in a four-team league and at the moment Listowel, Kitchener and Stratford are the only clubs who have stated they will enter teams.

So it would seem the handwriting is on the wall. Top bracket baseball is going through a cycle, and like its puck-chasing counterparts seems destined to pack up its troubles in the old duffle bags and start from . . . scratch again.

Referee Knocked Cold

Everybody Had a Brawl

MEDICINE HAT, Alta. (CP) — A major brawl and a spectators' boo-boo attack on the referee ended a Saskatchewan Senior Hockey League playoff game here Monday night.

Larry Plante of Medicine Hat Monarchs and Wally Blaldsell of Moose Jaw Pla-Mors, who won 6-3, were given misconduct penalties for their part in the brawl, which broke out in the last minute of play.

Referee Harry Barratt was attacked by fans as he left the ice. One spectator late renewed the attack in the referee's room. In both cases police intervened.

Bud Syverson of the Monarchs received a misconduct in the hectic final minute of play for felling the referee with a cross-check.

Spectators got into the act in the third period after Blaisdell tripped Grant Hall behind the Lazzi.

Monarch net and in turn was boarded by Barry Goldberg. Plante leaped from the penalty box to get Goldberg.

Plante and Blaisdell renewed their feud in the hallway between the two dressing rooms. Moose Jaw players who tried to give Blaisdell's rescue were stopped by fans.

The remaining 36 seconds of the engagement were played after police got order restored.

Macs Meet Kingston in Junior Finals

The Belleville McFarlands and the Kingston Frontenacs will meet for the OHA Eastern Junior "B" hockey league championship and the George "Red" Sullivan Trophy.

The best-of-seven series will open in Belleville Friday night at nine o'clock with the second game slated for Kingston on Monday at 8.30 p.m.

The hard-luck Peterborough Mounties were eliminated from the round-robin semi-finals series last night, despite a 6-3 victory over Kingston in Peterborough.

Peterborough's win last night left all three clubs tied with two wins and two losses apiece in the round-robin play.

As was agreed before the semi-finals got under way, all ties had to be settled in the goals-scoreby method.

Belleville with a goals average of .516 and Kingston with a .515 average, qualified for the finals. Peterborough with a .440 average, was eliminated.

Following is the final round-robin standing.

'Think I Can Stop Him'

Boomer Named Hull Roadblock

MONTREAL (CP)—The only active National Hockey League player to score 50 goals in a single season says Bobby Hull has "a good chance" of equaling the mark this season.

Bernie (Boom Boom) Geoffrion said in an interview, however, that he wants the checking assignment against Hull in Montreal Canadiens' remaining games against Chicago Black Hawks.

Hull needs seven goals in seven games to tie the record held jointly by Maurice (Rocket) Richard and Geoffrion.

But, said Geoffrion, "I think I can stop him from scoring against the Canadiens anyway."

In 63 games so far this season, Hull has amassed a total of 49 goals.

Richard was first to reach 50 during a 50-game schedule in 1944-45. Geoffrion, who played second fiddle to Richard among Canadiens' right - wingers for nearly 10 years, equalled the mark during a 70-game schedule last year.

LESS PRESSURE

"I figure Hull's got a good chance to make it," Geoffrion said. "He's got the confidence. . . . The other teams will be watching him from now on but I don't think he has as much pressure on him as I had last season.

"We (the Canadiens) were fighting for first place right up to the last game of the season, so I didn't pick the Hawks are sure of finishing in third place.

"I figure he'll be more at ease than I was."

Hull is ready to do our best to stop him, but if he makes it, I'll be happy for him."

Hull is a hockey player, a man who plays the game the right way. He's a clean player, and a lot of people will be glad to see him do it."

Services Dart League Results

Dover's Men's Wear blanked OPP 5-0, 11-0 and 7-0 in Belleville Services Dart League games played last night.

In other action, Arthur's Jets topped OEC No. 1 8-3, Hobby Shop took a 7-4 win over Wilf's Restaurant, Coke Specials whipped ANAF 9-2, LaPalms edged the Legion 6-5, Sheltons dumped Lucky Lews 9-2 and the Wildcats defeated Rexdox 7-4.

Woodstock Ousts Waterloo

WATERLOO (CP) — Woodstock Athletics advanced into the OHA-Senior semi - finals when they downed Waterloo Tigers 6-4 in the sixth game of their best-of-seven series Monday night before 900 fans.

They meet the winners of the Bradtroy - Chatham quarter-final series.

Buddy Horne led the Woodstock attack with two goals. Toby Black and Gerry Theberge bit for the others.

The game saw a chair, a toe rubber, programs and a second puck tossed on the ice during frequent hassles.

Except for the early part of the second period when Charlie Brooker scored and the Tigers tied it and threw other good chances, the Athletics had the situation well in hand.

Horne scored the first of the six games played, Woodstock was the second, the third, then won the remaining three.

The Tracks

LINCOLN, R.I. (AP)—The byword at weather-beaten Lincoln Park, one of the few tracks in the U.S. that operates all year round, is "The Show Must Go On."

"We'll figure we'll be more at ease then I was."

"Hull is ready to do our best to stop him, but if he makes it, I'll be happy for him."

Hull is a hockey player, a man who plays the game the right way. He's a clean player, and a lot of people will be glad to see him do it."

But Lincoln's program Monday when two horses and riders fell in the second race.

The scorecard for a meeting scheduled to open Feb. 17: One full day's racing and a new start of another out of 15 days. Lincoln will try again Wednesday.

Two snowstorms and a chip in temperatures that left the course under a cover of ice have forced cancellation or rescheduling the previous high of 11 lost days in a season.

Think Senior Hockey Doomed

So What Else Is New?

VANCOUVER (CP) — Grant Warwick, aging warrior, says senior amateur hockey in Canada has deteriorated to a point where it may not be alive in a few years unless drastic steps are taken.

Warwick, formerly with New York Rangers of the National League and playing coach of Penticton V's, 1955 world amateur champions, said in an interview Monday:

"I hate to think of what will happen if the Canadian Amateur Hockey Association doesn't take a new outlook on senior hockey.

Many of our top senior players are being recruited by the United States and the CAHA stands idly by."

CITIES A ROSTER

Warwick cited the roster of the U.S. team entered in the 1960 world tournament starting Wednesday at Colorado Springs, Colo.

"When five Canadian - born players are listed on the U.S. team, it's about time some action is taken. It's ridiculous. Next thing we know there'll be Canadians playing for Poland."

Canadians on the U.S. team are defenceman Brian Mackay, 26, of Warroad, and forwards Don Hall, 31, of Toronto, Reg Rosentry, 27, of New Liskeard, Ont., Dick Roberge, 26, of Rosthern, Sask., and Ken Johannson, 25, of Duluth.

"We're having enough trouble selecting strong teams to represent Canada. We don't have our own boys playing against us," said Warwick.

"I'm not knocking Galt Terriers, but there was once a time when a single club produced good enough players to win the world championship for Canada. We (Penticton) picked up only two players from our own league when we won in 1955."

The Terriers, in the Ontario Hockey Association senior series, drafted eight players from other clubs for this year's tournament.

Sweeney Seeking Second Title

NEW YORK (AP) — Bill Sweeney of Springfield Indians, seeking his second straight American Hockey League scoring title, holds a three-point lead over teammate Brian Kilrea going into the last month of the regular season.

Sweeney picked up four points last week, Kilrea scored five points. Sweeney has 87 points on 30 goals and 57 assists. Kilrea has 84 on 19 goals and 65 assists, a league high.

League statistics released today show four other Springfield players among the top 10 scorers — Jimmy Anderson, Floyd Smith, Bruce Cline and Billy McCreary. Smith tops AHL goal-scorers with 36.

Reds Cullen of Buffalo Bisons is third with 81 points. His brother, Barry, also with Buffalo, and Willie Marshall of Hershey Bears are tied for fourth with 75 points each.

Marcel Paille of Springfield has the lowest goals-against average, 2.66 in 36 games.

Four Rinks Tied 1-1

Ontario Gives Alberta First Loss

By JACK SULLIVAN
Canadian Press Sports Editor

KITCHENER, Ont. (CP)—One shot, the last of a hectic and somewhat frustrating day for Ontario curlers, got the Ontario rink the nod Monday as curling buffs were busy picking him for goat's horns.

It gave Ontario a fighting chance to win its first Canadian title in 23 years.

The 30-year-old, slightly-built Toronto curler made the big play and sent the defending champion Alberta rink to its first defeat. It also created a traffic jam at the top of the standings after two fairly exciting rounds highlighted by a morning to enjoy to observe the rules and desist from sliding over the hog line on deliveries.

LAST ROCK COUNTS

Placed in an almost impossible situation, Secord rubbed out Alberta's final-end shot to count two and edge the Edmonton rink, skipped by potato farmer Hec Gervais, 5-7. That left Ontario, Alberta, Northern Ontario and British Columbia with 1-1 records behind Manitoba, Saskatchewan and New Brunswick, which ended the opening-day games with perfect 2-0 marks in the round - robin tournament.

Quebec and Nova Scotia, which drew bye, follow with one loss and Newfoundland and Prince Edward Island share the bottom rung with two straight losses.

Secord, far off his game, practically handed Manitoba a 6-5 extra-end victory in the first draw. He was heading in the same direction against Alberta in the second round until his fantastic last-ended Alberta's shot rock to give Ontario two and the game.

In the 10th end just about every one of the 2,767 crowd at Memorial Auditorium doubted his strategy when he tried a takeout with Ontario lying one. Three stones, bunched about the four-foot ring, scattered and Alberta with shot. Gervais drew in for a double to go ahead 5-4.

ALBERTA LAY THREE

In the 12th Alberta was lying three after the first rock by Gervais, who earlier had been called on the carpet by umpires for sliding beyond the hog line when he beat British Columbia 10-9 in the first round.

Second drew in to count one and the Alberta skip laid his second down about three inches in front of two Ontario stones. Second drew in perfectly to knock the Alberta rock against an Ontario stone and score the double.

A loss would have sent Ontario to the bottom of the standings but now, with an even break against two formidable opponents, Ontario's foursome has to be considered a power. Second was matched against Newfoundland and the Richardson family from Saskatchewan today. Manitoba, skipped by 26-year-old Norm Houck of Winnipeg, followed its first - draw victory over Ontario with a 10-6 win against Nova Scotia. It had a third-round bye and then was to tackle Alberta.

The Saskatchewan foursome, seeking a record-equalling third Canadian title after first - place finishes in 1959 and 1960, disposed of P.E.I. 9-7 in the first round and followed with a 14-4 rout of Northern Ontario, which opened with a 13-7 victory over Newfoundland.

Reg Stone's B.C. rink came back in the second round of the 11 - round tournament to beat Newfoundland 11-6.

New Brunswick took advantage of a terrific letdown by Quebec skip Bill Armstrong to win 10-6 after being down 5-0 going into the sixth end of the first round, then walloped P.E.I. 17-4.

Big tests are still to come but no one here is taking the easterners seriously.

Today's two rounds were set for 9:30 a.m. and 3 p.m.

HITS AT SENATORS

WASHINGTON (AP) — Representative Herbert Zelenko (Dem.-N.Y.) introduced a bill in Congress Monday aimed at preventing the Washington baseball club from using the government-owned District of Columbia Stadium this year. The bill would ban use of the stadium to a party to a contract resulting in segregation among its employees. The congressman has complained that the Senators' Negro players must live in segregated parts of training camp towns.

Metals Nip Lightfoots By Point

The Belleville Lightfoots rallied desperately in the second half of the game but fell one point short here last night as they dropped a 63-62 decision to the Belleville Crawford Metals in a Bay of Quinte basketball league tilt.

The Crawfords' built what appeared to be a commanding 43-15 lead by half time but in the second half the Lightfoots took over and crept up steadily on the winners. Lightfoots never did catch the Crawfords as time ran out with Crawford still in front, 62-61.

Ted Batchelor paced the winners with 28 points, Swain boosted 14 and MacDonald 12 as the Crawfords once again came up with a changed lineup.

Gary Davis topped the Lightfoots with 16 points while Don Smith had 13 and Glen Reynolds 10.

In the second game of the double-header, at Moira Secondary School, the loop-leading Trenton Wilcons defeated Belleville Northern Electric 64-35.

Wilcons took at 26-17 lead at half time and increased their margin over the remaining half.

Wilf Borden led the Trenton scorers with 27 points, followed by Warren Whitley with 16.

Harry Greer and Lou Orazietti were top men for Northern, each with eight points.

Wynn Wants That '300', Needs Eight

SARASOTA, Fla. (AP)—Early Wynn is only eight short of the 300-victory mark that separates great pitchers from good pitchers. Because bursitis and the gout threatened to end his career prematurely last summer, he is taking the gradual approach in spring training here this yes.

"Certainly, the 300 means a lot to me," the 42-year-old Chicago White Sox righthander said in an interview Monday. "It's not a life-or-death thing but after all, not too many have accomplished it. It has been a long long road. I think I won No. 1 with Washington in Philadelphia in 1941 and No. 200 with Cleveland in 1955. I'll remember No. 300, yes siree."

Chicago manager Al Lopez sees no problem for Wynn, except the persistent arm trouble. "If his arm is all right, it won't be a question of winning eight more," said Lopez. "It will be 15 or 18 or maybe 20."

Wynn strained the arm last May 26 pitching against the Yankees in New York.

Habs May Call Up Billy Carter

MONTREAL (CP) — Montreal Canadiens haven't decided whether to call up a replacement for centre Henri Richard, who is out for the balance of the National Hockey League season and the Stanley Cup playoffs with a broken right arm.

But if help is needed, the man likely to get the call is Billy Carter, 22-year-old centre with Hull - Ottawa Canadiens of the Eastern Professional Hockey League.

"Right now Carter is the best man we've got," managing director Frank Selke said Monday.

Toe (coach Toe Blake) will make the final decision of course, but we'll look into it thoroughly to see whether or not we really need some help."

Richard's arm was fractured between the wrist and the elbow when he was knocked into the boards by defenceman Marcel Pronovost of Detroit Red Wings during a game here Saturday night.

Carter was with Canadiens at their pre-season training camp and had a whirl in the NHL with Boston Bruins last season. He was used sparingly by the Bruins and didn't collect a point in eight games.

Training Camp Experiment

Als Plan Two Quarters

By MARVEN MOSS

MONTREAL (CP) — Montreal Alouettes, a football club that sputtered on the attack last year for lack of a capable quarterback, will experiment with a twin-quarterback system in training camp this summer.

Coach Perry Moss made the disclosure Monday in an interview after a press conference called to introduce 21-year-old Sandy Stephens, the all-American quarterback from Minnesota the Als signed Jan. 25.

"I've had this idea in the back of mind for a number of years and now I feel I have the personnel to make it work," said Moss, whose club finished last in the Eastern Football Conference in 1961 despite one of the country's best defences.

"We'll give it a whirl in training camp and I'll decide which one will shelve it."

Moss plans to try Stephens at one of the spots and is, the other, either Joe Francis or Gerry Thompkins, a couple of holdovers who had trouble moving the club last year, apart from a few spurts.

OBVIOUS ADVANTAGES

The advantages of a workable offensive formation with two quarterbacks as potential receivers for the snap from centre are obvious. Breaking in different directions with faking, it would be difficult for the defence to set itself to meet the play.

But the system has not gained popularity because, it could easily prove as confusing to the offence as to the defence.

Stephens signed with Montreal for three years on a no-cut basis for a reported $20,000 a season plus a bonus.

He spurned offers of more money from New York Titans of the American Football League and Cleveland Browns of the National Football League mostly on account of what he thought about Moss' twin-quarterback project.

"I'm sure as long as I'm one of 'em," he replied.

Freese Breaks Ankle

NEW YORK (AP)—Manager Freddie Hutchinson of Cincinnati Reds, defending National League champions, is faced with his first on-the-field crisis of 1962. He must find a replacement for slugging third-baseman Gene Freese.

Freese broke an ankle in the Reds' inter-squad game Monday and Hutchinson indicated he will give rookie Cliff Cook a chance to take over.

Freese's right ankle was broken sliding into second base. Doctors said he also suffered from torn ligaments inside the ankle and a dislocation.

Cook is walking into a lion's den. The 25-year-old infielder has flunked two tests with the Reds, but may just have been a slow starter. He was voted the American Association's most valuable player last year, playing for Indianapolis, where he batted .321 and hit 38 home runs.

Cook's only competition will be vitally needed to compensate for the loss of Freese, 28, who doctors say will miss the first two months of the baseball season. Freese had his finest major league season in helping the Reds to the 1961 pennant. He hit 277, slammed 26 homers and drove in 87 runs after being acquired from Chicago White Sox of the American League.

Pitchers Jack Sanford and Pete Ramos signed their 1962 contracts Monday. Sanford agreed to terms with San Francisco Giants for a reported $25,000, a token raise for his 13-9 National League record, and Ramos ended his holdout with Minnesota Twins by taking a slight cut from the $20,000 he got a year ago. Ramos had an 11-20 American League mark last season.

Piersall Loses No Time

Hits the Headlines Early!

POMPANO BEACH, Fla. (AP) — Centrefielder Jimmy Piersall of Washington Senators baseball's stormy petrel, says he is "stunned and hurt" by charges by teammate Gene Woodling that he is getting preferential treatment in training camp.

Woodling, the Senators' player representative, said Monday Piersall, the club's highest-paid player, got a room to himself and demanded special eating money and bed boards.

"Who does this guy think he is — Joe DiMaggio?" Woodling asked.

"There's nothing personal in this. I'm all for him. I hope he hits .350. I want to help him and I'll bend over backwards to do it. But when it comes to discipline and rules, he's a little crazy.

"Piersall has won 30 flights, lost two and drawn one.

"Piersall's loss left him 23-7-1. It was the second time he's been stopped.

Cleroux, 206, battered Logan, 205 from the opening punch. His record, set in left following a freaky right, opened a cut over the loudoun's right eye. Each had a bloodied nose before the first round was over.

BOTH EYES CUT

Cleroux cut Logan's other eye early in the second round and Logan's face was blood-smeared from then on.

The cut over the right eye required several stitches and will prevent Logan fighting for perhaps six weeks.

The fight drew $7,080 gross and $6,269 net, of which each fighter took 25 per cent.

Promoter Benny Ford was so disgusted with the small crowd — held down by a long downpour that ended just before fight time — that he said he didn't bother to count the tickets.

Sports Snapshots

By BRUCE McLEAN

VANCOUVER (CP)—Starting pistols will fire simultaneously across Canada March 10 to start the first event of Operation Tokyo, a national swim meet among nearly 3,500 youngsters.

Almost to the second, swimmers competing in the first of 33 events will hit the water at 10 a.m. PST or its equivalent in the other time zones at swimming club clubs from Victoria to Halifax.

As they are completed, results of the races will be relayed along teletype circuits to Montreal. There they will be fed into computers which will cough up the names of the winners.

"It will enable youngsters to compete at a national level without leaving their home clubs," said Dick Jack, director of Operation Tokyo.

AIM AT OLYMPICS

First held last year, the telegraphic meet gets its name naturally enough. It is aimed at stimulating and developing Canadian swimmers for the 1964 Olympics at Tokyo.

Jack, secretary of the B.C. section of the Canadian Amateur Swimming Association, said it will be restricted to boys and girls under 16 but, with few exceptions, only the more promising youngsters in the country will compete.

Eliminations for the meet have been under way for weeks at swimming clubs in about 16 cities.

The meet will be restricted to freestyle, butterfly, backstroke and breast stroke events.

Brokerage houses have helped speed up communications for the meet by providing free use of their coast-to-coast teletype facilities.

SHAKE COMPLACENCY

Results at the clubs will be telephoned to a brokerage firm in each city and sent to Montreal along circuits which hum with stock market quotations on weekdays.

The time for each swimmer in each event will be fed into the electronic computers which will produce results giving the national picture for relay back to the clubs.

"The idea is to give the boys and girls the feeling of national competition," said Jack.

"We have found that the arrangement makes it clear to all our youngsters just what the standards are right across the country."

It also tends to knock the complacency out of swimmers who coast along on the laurels they win at their individual clubs, he said.

Tessier Leads EP Race

OTTAWA (CP)—The top five scorers of the Eastern Professional Hockey League all held on to their positions last week.

League statistics released Monday showed former scoring champion Orval Tessier of Kingston Frontenacs picked up no assist to stay seven points ahead of teammate Tom McCarthy. Tessier has 42 goals and 48 assists for 90 points. McCarthy is the top marksman with 47 goals.

Milan Marcetta of Sault Ste. Marie Greyhounds struggled to send his hold on third place with one goal and two assists for a total of 69 points; Fred-Hill Hull-Ottawa Canadiens and Bob Attwater of Kingston Frontenacs with 66 and 65 points respectively.

Les Ronson's scoring streak ended Sunday in Hull after the Kitchener-Waterloo Beaver defenceman had piled up 17 goals and 20 assists in 21 straight games. The record of 23 games was set two years ago by Tessier.

Wolves Shade Kingston

By THE CANADIAN PRESS

Gerry Foley's big goal Monday night consolidated the rampaging Sudbury Wolves' hold on fourth and last playoff spot in the Eastern Professional Hockey League.

Foley's goal gave the Wolves a 3-2 victory over Kingston and stalled the faltering Frontenacs in their bid to get back a share of first place with Kitchener-Waterloo Beavers.

The Wolves, now 13 points behind Kingston and Hull-Ottawa Canadiens, have a 12 - point cushion over fifth - place North Bay Trappers. Sudbury has 12 games remaining in the 70-game schedule. North Bay 18, and the two clubs have four games to play against each other.

The winning goal was strictly a northern effort. Foley, a Sudbury native and American League veteran, was assisted by Sammy Burton, also from Sudbury, and Neil Forth of North Bay.

The Wolves, who have won four and tied one of their last five starts, moved into a 2-1 lead in the first period on goals within 30 seconds by Lou Jankowski and rookie Bob Dillabough.

Pete Panagabko tallied for Kingston in the second and Tom McCarthy, the league's leading goal-getter, tied it up in the third with his 48th. Foley broke the deadlock a minute and 50 seconds later.

Sudbury out shot Kingston 34-17 as 2,200 fans sat in.

Tonight the Canadiens play at North Bay.

Documentaries Produced By National Film Board Help to Dispel Ignorance

By RUKMINI DEVI
Canadian Press Correspondent

BOMBAY (CP) — Screen documentaries produced by Canada's National Film Board are being purchased by the film board's Asian branch in various cities of India to enable those interested to borrow the documentaries. There is at least one outlet in each of the 15 states and some have two.

Educational and cultural institutions have been extensive users of the productions and film critics of Indian newspapers have commented enthusiastically about their technical standards.

The children's film corner in New Delhi regularly shows Canadian documentaries to its gatherings. The corner, which organizes about 20 shows a month, has been given equipment by the film board.

Among the documentaries currently in demand are "Land of Promise," "Days of Decision," "Ezra Mir, Indian documentary director whose films have won many international awards, says that "for creativeness, realism and imaginative handling Canadian documentaries are among the best in the world."

Indian language versions of some 25 Canadian documentaries now are under preparation. The expenditure is being financed out of the sale of the films in India. To start with, they will be produced in eight languages — Hindi, Bengali, Gujarati, Marathi, Malayan, Tamil, Telugu and Urdu.

To most Indians, Canada is just a romantic geographical name — a fabulously beautiful land of lush plains, towering mountain ranges and sparkling streams. For the average citizen the mention of Canada brings to mind gallant mounted policemen and picturesque Eskimos.

After seeing on documentary film the leader writer of a Hindi language paper of Delhi is reported to have remarked:

"Looking here are people apparently more advanced than ourselves. Yet, how little we know about Canadians!"

Biography of a Highway Will Be Special Program

By CYNTHIA LOWRY

NEW YORK (AP)—A couple of years ago NBC producer Lou Hazam presided over the making of a beautiful, reverent and unusual television program: "Way of the Cross."

The program was a retracing of the route followed by Jesus on His way to the Cross. It already is considered a television classic.

Among the side-products of that effort was the opening of a new, fresh approach to the documentary for Hazam. It is a path that lies between "Way of the Cross in Jerusalem to U.S. Route 1," but the producer is applying the lessons learned in the first to the latter. The result will be a biography of a highway, a special program to be shown March 29.

Instead of concentrating on a person, the program will star the 2,200 miles of road that starts at Fort Kent, Me., just south of the Canadian border, and ends at Key West, Fla.

With the camera following its meandering course down the eastern seacoast, Hazam has an opportunity to dip into U.S. history — the revolution in New England, the civil war south of Washington.

It will also show the differences in architecture — clapboard houses with widows' walks on top to Southern belle-type plantations — regional regional accents from the flat, nasal twang of the Down-East-ers to the hush-puppy inflections of the land of cotton. It will talk with people from Maine's lobster pudding to Florida's key lime pie.

After U.S. Route 1: American Profile, Hazam's next subject for biography is the River Nile —the whole length of the world's longest waterway.

Julie Harris, Human Being On Fire, the Ideal Actress

By HAL BOYLE

NEW YORK (AP)—Julie Harris, a human being on fire, do. is many a constant game with eternity.

She lives by a kind of "double-or-nothing" chance.

"If you approach whatever you do with the idea that this might be your last game, your last challenge to do it right," she said, "everything becomes terribly exciting. You can't get bored."

Miss Harris has so successfully transmitted her own quality of inner excitement to audiences that she has won nearly 20 acting awards. Her fellow performers say that one of the best of living actresses is kind and her a fine wife.

Julie, who recently completed a film role in Requiem of a Gunfighter, is starring tonight in a Shot in the Dark, an early run of the present Broadway season.

Onstage, Julie has a quicksilver quality that seems likely to play a French maid or Queen Victoria. She can portray both seem real. Offstage, she is a somewhat shier chameleon. She is small, slender, shy and speak and given to birdlike gestures. You can sense the controlled intensity in her, the hidden flames that fired her at the age of 13 to be a great actress. Her flames still burns brightly.

"I'm afraid my biggest defect as a person is my drive to be a perfectionist," she said. "Sometimes a person who wants everything to be exactly right and to do everything exactly right . . . forgets the limitations of human frailty, even sometimes forgets love.

"After all, you cannot really reach perfection. You can only try to. When I feel that I have

Red Skelton's Show to Be Expanded to Hour Next Year

By BOB THOMAS

HOLLYWOOD (AP) — How he does he do it?

That's what the entertainment world has wondered about Red Skelton, longest-lasting of TV's comedians.

Skelton is rocketing through his 11th year in television. Last week he signed a new six-year contract, with CBS that will send his Tuesday night show expanding to an hour next season.

The new contract was announced after Red had returned to work following a hospital siege, one of several during his TV career.

The doctors' diagnosis: Overwork, change of altitude. The had just finished a stand at Harrah's Lake Tahoe, Nev., kickback from a mild sedative. The prescription: Rest, relaxation.

Outlook: He'll get neither.

When I caught up with Red, he was rehearsing a TV show at his studio. He took the lunch hour off and sent down to his second-floor hideaway to talk about the past and future.

"The doctors said all I needed was some rest," he mused, lingering the over-present cigar

"I've put $4,500,000, in this studio, and it cease right out of my pocket. I'll be damned if I'm signing the payroll for the studio. It means $8,000 a week. So you can see that I've got to keep working."

Red said gleefully of what he might do if he did quit the TV grind.

"I'd like to travel and paint," he said. "There are all kinds of things I want to learn. For instance, I want to find out about Scandinavian cooking. I know why they are fussy. I understand the Swedish and Finnish chow-down, but I haven't been able to figure out why the Scandinavians can be so fussy and yet get big laughs."

That's the key to Skelton's success. He's constantly dreaming how that he can top it, to double his output next week. Nor will he cut up during the summer. He will play the New Orleans pleasure-spot circuit for a month of dates, that will bring him $200,000.

To get back to my question: How does he do it?

The answer seems to be that making people laugh is not just a profession for Red. It's a dedication.

A nige percent rise in 1951 exports to a record peak gave Canada a tegile surplus of $37,-800,000, the first surplus since 1952.

The surplus—excess of exports over imports—compares with a $37,100,000 trade deficit in 1950. The 1950 unfavorable trade balance was the 9th in a row of annual deficits.

Graph shows Canada's trade position from 1949 when the surplus reached $261,000,000. (CP Newsmap.)

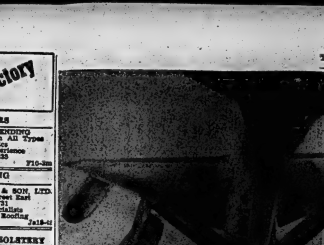
Steel Industry In Nova Scotia Fully Discussed



By THE CANADIAN PRESS

The fate of Cape Breton's all, ing steel industry lies in the hands of the Nova Scotia government, Premier Robert Stanfield of Nova Scotia said Monday.

The province told the Nova Scotia legislature his government is negotiating with Domin, ion Coal and Steel Corporation for a new condensed steel mill at Sydney. But success of such a mill would depend on whether Dosco builds a new steel mill in Quebec.

If Dosco doesn't open a sheet mill in Quebec, Mr. Stanfield said, it will lose a potential out, let for steel produced at Sydney, leaving economic feast, bility of the projected Sydney mill in doubt.

Dosco's plans for the sheet mill at Contrecoeur, near Mont, real, were shelved when the Lib, eral government of Prime Min, ister Jean Lesage indicated it wanted part ownership of any new steel enterprise in Quebec. Since then reports have indicated the Le-sage government would prefer an integrated mill, producing steel rods, bars and sheets.

Developments in other legisla, tures:

Edmonton — Mike Maccagno (L—Lac La Biche), opening de, bate on the Alberta budget, said it gives a distorted picture of what the Social Credit govern, ment plans to spend on educa, tion in 1962-63. He said the gov, ernment really intends to give only $15,000,000 more to edu, cation, not the $8,000,000 quoted.

SPENDING HEALTH PLAN

Regina — Health Minister W. G. Davies said Saskat, chewan's Medical Care Insur, ance Act as it stands allows the medical profession to supply care without in any genuine or valid way injuring their profes, sional status." He criticized re, fusal of the Saskatchewan Col, lege of Physicians and Surgeons to discuss or negotiate the plan with the government. The col, lege opposes the plan, which is to take effect July 1.

Quebec — Establishment of a medical faculty at Sherbrooke to deal with the problem of hou, sing traffic in Quebec city is recommended in a report re, leased Monday by the municipal affairs department.

St. John's—Highways Minis, ter R. W. Rowe said construc, tion will start this year on the last major bridge project in Newfoundland's portion of the Trans-Canada Highway, east of Stephenville on the province's west coast. The last concrete bridge over the Gambo River near Gander will replace a tem, porary wooden structure re, cently threatened by flooding.

Labor Congress To Move Into Bitter Scrap

OTTAWA (CP) — A special vice-presidential committee of the Canadian Labor Congress will move later this month into the bitter scrap between the Woodworkers and Carpenters Unions over the right to repre, sent Newfoundland loggers.

A reliable source says the ri, val unions have been summoned to Ottawa for a closed hearing March 15.

Four of the CLC's top officers were handed the job of investi, gating the rival claims of the two unions to the important Newfoundland logging jurisdic, tion.

Their task is to get to the bot, tom of the dispute in an effort to avert a serious rift in labor ranks that could reverberate through the mid-April convention of the CLC in Vancouver.

The committee, headed by Pratd H. Hall of Montreal, top negotiator for non-operating rail, way unions and a CLC vice-president, was set up last Jan, uary.

ALSO VICE-PRESIDENTS

Other members also vice-presidents of the congress, are William Mahoney of the Steel, workers Union and Hart of the Auto Workers Union and William Jenoves of the Brick, layers Union.

The dispute confronts the CLC with a major dilemma: how to keep peace within labor ranks without losing either the 36,000, member Woodworkers Union or the 65,000 - member Carpenters Union.

The International Woodwork, ers of America has accused the Carpenters Union of raiding its Newfoundland jurisdiction.

Any union found guilty of raid, ing faces automatic suspension from the central congress and runs the risk of formal expul, sion at the CLC convention.

The Woodworkers Union has hinted strongly that it will walk out of the CLC unless the Car, penters Union is told bluntly to withdraw from Newfoundland. So far, the Carpenters Union has refused to back out and has pressed its efforts to represent the loggers.

Britain Says Next Election Here To Decide Canada's Role in World

MANCHESTER (CP)—A Brit, ish commentator says the real issue in the next Canadian elec, tion will be "what sort of Cana, dianism" can be achieved.

In the third article of a series, David Holden writes in The Guardian that the present gov, ernment probably will see the re, solving of most fundamental de, cisions about Canada's future role in the world.

Then, he says, the mist around the Canadian image will begin to clear.

In six three-column articles, headed Canada in Search of an Identity, Holden starts by saying how, to a British visitor, Canada always seems a "pale, romantic ghost" of the United States, a "misty place seen, greating cousins gone to plant, their seed and now flag among the dying relics of Indians and Eskimos."

Canada lacks tangibility. No image of Montreal "strikes upon

Canada Branded Sinking Of 'I'm Alone', Rum-Ship, Act of Piracy on High Seas

By PAT USSHER
Canadian Press Staff Writer

The schooner and the coast guard cutter fired each other across the heaving waters of the Gulf of Mexico.

Then the wind-swept March air was punctuated with gunfire as the cutter opened fire with her four-pounder.

Within minutes the schooner was sunk and one of her crew was drowned.

The victim was the I'm Alone, a Canadian-registered rum-runner. Her attacker was the United States Coast Guard cutter Dexter. The date was March 22, 1929.

The sinking blew up a storm between Ottawa and Washington. Sharply worded notes were exchanged.

The United States claimed the I'm Alone was first intercepted in American territorial waters. Her master, Capt. John Thomas Randell, maintained that he was on the high seas where "none has jurisdiction of my ship but me."

CHARGED PIRACY

Canada branded the sinking an act of piracy. Washington contended that the action was justified on the grounds of hot pursuit.

The I'm Alone, out of Lunenburg, N.S., was flying the Canadian Red Ensign.

Andrew Mellon, wealthy secretary of the U.S. treasury of the United States at the time, said the I'm Alone had been a notorious liquor smuggler for years and was designed and built for that purpose.

Eventually an international arbitration commission of two jurists, one from each country involved, was established. And two years later, when the dust had settled, the ill-fated vessel was almost forgotten except by those directly involved, as it issued its findings.

The outcome: The United States apologized to Canada, the Canadian government and paid $25,000 compensation to Capt. Randell and his crew.

The sinking was a highlight of the lawless prohibition era in the United States, a 13-year period lasting from 1920 to 1933 during which supplying thirsty Americans with liquor became a career for many Canadians.

AMERICAN-OWNED

The I'm Alone got into the picture in 1928 when she was purchased at Lunenburg by a man named Big Jamie Clark, acting for two New York bootleggers. The cost was $18,000.

Randell, a dark, dapper, confident, excitement-loving skipper from Newfoundland, was hired to command the schooner at $400 a month. The captain, then nearly 50, had sported a dinner jacket, a tail coat and six dress jackets in his baggage when he went aboard.

The first voyage was in October of that year. Randell loaded the I'm Alone with liquor at St. Pierre, the French island in the Gulf of St. Lawrence, and sailed for the Gulf of Mexico. He had orders to rendezvous with launches operated by bootleggers 30 miles southwest of Marsh Island off the Louisiana coast.

While Randell waited at the rendezvous Nov. 28, the Coast Guard cutter Wolcott came up her after nightfall and headed into Belize, capital of British Honduras. He set out again Dec. 7 and this time the mission was completed.

The I'm Alone made a second delivery Dec. 31, 1928, this time after loading at Belize, and carried out several similar trips without incident during that winter.

REJECTED ORDER

The climactic episode began when Capt. Randell took aboard 2,000 cases of rum, brandy and whisky at Belize in mid-March. The I'm Alone with her 11-man crew approached the Louisiana coast March 20. Here Capt. Randell waited at the rendezvous point, the Wolcott approached. This time the captain of the Wolcott ordered the I'm Alone to heave to for boarding.

Randell refused. The Wolcott trained her gun on the schooner. After a lengthy verbal exchange across the water, the Coast Guard cutter's launch came aboard the I'm Alone. He maintained the schooner was within territorial waters — 12 miles from the coast by United States interpretation. Randell firmly retorted that he was on the high seas, about 15 miles from shore.

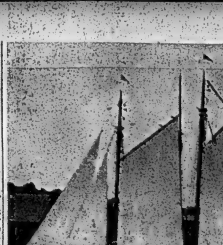
The parley ended inconclusively.

A few hours later the Wolcott again ordered the I'm Alone to heave to. Once more Randell refused. The cutter started firing at the schooner but a shell jammed in her four-pounder gun. Observing this, Randell headed the I'm Alone south, away from the coast.

The Wolcott pursued the rum-runner for the next 36 hours. March 22 dawned windy and stormy. Capt. Randell saw a second Coast Guard cutter, the Dexter, approaching.

The Dexter's captain ordered the I'm Alone to halt.

"I'll see you in hell first," Randell retorted.



Then the firing started. Shells whistled through the sails and rigging of the I'm Alone and bore into her hull, some below the water line. Machine-gun or rifle bullets whined across the deck, showering the crew with splinters.

The liquor-laden ship was quickly holed and began to sink. Lifeboats were lowered and the six crew abandoned ship. Randell jumped just before the I'm Alone sank.

The boatswain, Loon Malaguy from St. Pierre-Miquelon, was drowned in the turbulent seas. A member of the Dexter's crew dived into the water and Malaguy's body was taken aboard the cutter. The other survivors crew members were picked up. Randell and the survivors were taken to New Orleans and held in custody for two days at the U.S. customs house there before charges against them were dropped for lack of evidence of criminal activity.

Vincent Massey, then Canadian minister in Washington, filed a claim for $386,000 against the American government.

Canada's formal protest in effect asked the United States to prove that the Coast Guard had not committed an act of piracy. The U.S. insisted that it had.

RUMRUNNER SINKING STIRRED STORM — The sinking 50 years ago of this Canadian-registered schooner, the I'm Alone, in the Gulf of Mexico erupted into an international incident between the United States and Canada. The I'm Alone, a rumrunner out of Lunenburg, N.S., was sunk by a U.S. coast guard cutter. Six years later the U.S. formally apologized and paid $25,000 compensation to Canada and $25,686 to the schooner's captain, and crew. (CP Photo).

It cited an anti-smuggling treaty negotiated between the United States and Canada in 1924 which stipulated that each country had the right to challenge any ship suspected of smuggling, provided it was within one hour's steaming from shore.

Eventually the diplomatic storm calmed and in August, 1929, five months after the sinking, the disputing countries named Eugene Lafleur, KC, of Canada, and Justice Willis Jay Davanter, of the United States Supreme Court to investigate and submit recommendations. Later Chief Justice Taft of the United States Supreme Court made both commissioners.

Capt. Randell gave up running as a career after the I'm Alone was sunk. He took a series of marine jobs, eventually settling in Washington, with his family and died in Halifax in the winter of 1944, aged 59.

The two commissioners issued their findings on the incident on Jan. 5, 1935. They held that the sinking "could not be justified by any principle of international law." They also concluded that the I'm Alone, despite her official papers and registration, was "de facto owned, controlled and at the critical time managed" by persons who were all, or almost all, United States citizens and who employed her for rum-running.

Mr. Justice van Devanter and Chief Justice Duff called on the United States to apologize to the Canadian government for the sinking, to acknowledge that it was illegal and to pay the Canadian government $25,000 in compensation.

Additionally they awarded compensation totalling $25,686 for Captain Randell and members of his crew or their legal heirs. The sum of $7,986 went to the captain; $10,185 to Amanda Mainguy, widow of the drowned seaman, for herself and their three children, and smaller amounts to seven other seamen or their heirs. The commissioners ruled that no compensation should be paid the owners for loss of the ship or cargo.

Sixteen days later the U.S. complied with the findings in a note from State Secretary Cordell Hull to William D. Herridge, Canadian minister in Washington.

The long-drawn-out incident finally was closed. The first was uttered with gunfire. The last one was written with pen and ink.

Believe Three Wanted in U.S. Now in Canada

OTTAWA (CP) — The RCMP has asked Canadians to be on the lookout for a heavily-armed American trio being sought by the FBI in connection with multiple bank robberies, in one of which a bank guard was slain.

The RCMP warns that "extreme caution" be exercised in the apprehension of the trio identified as Bobby Randell Wilcoxson, 32, Albert Frederick Nussbaum, 27, and Jacqueline Rose, 18.

"There is some suggestion that these individuals now may be in Canada," said an RCMP circular containing pictures and descriptions of the two men and a woman, who is reported to have with her a six-months-old boy.

The three were reported to be armed with a double-barrelled sawed-off 12-gauge shotgun, sub-machine-guns, hand grenades and anti-tank guns.

Wilcoxson is on the FBI's list of 10 most wanted fugitives. All three use aliases.

DROVE GETAWAY CAR

The woman, a slender fair-complexioned girl who changes the color of her hair often, is known to have driven the getaway car following the armed robbery perpetrated Dec. 14, 1960, at the First Federal Savings and Loan Association of Buffalo," the RCMP circular said.

She is "attractive, wears heavy makeup, and appears to be 22 to 25 years. She herself is extremely erect."

Her hair is described as reddish blonde or brown "but she has been known to have it dyed blonde and black. She has a third-degree burn scars on both arms from elbow to shoulder and from neck to waist.

Wilcoxson works as a farm laborer, painter, carnival attendant and on other similar jobs. He is of medium build, has dark brown hair, an artificial right eye and a burn scar on his left cheek.

Nussbaum, an expert gunsmith and locksmith who was pilot and repair aircraft, has a tattoo of a snake entwined around a dagger in his upper left arm. He wears glasses.

Police said the two men use rented cars and aircraft while traveling and generally stay at separate hotels and motels, favoring the better class accommodation."

BUILDS TESTING "BRAIN" — John Quee, 11, an eighth-grade public school student at Toronto, has built a skill-testing machine which is used in the classroom by his teacher. Employing 50 electrical circuits, the machine presents students with 10 questions and four possible answers. A right answer lights up a white bulb, a wrong answer a red one. (CP Photo).

Rustproofing?
Rambler spills more than others use!

Here in Canada, drivers experience some of the worst weather and driving conditions in the world. Most rust and corrosion, which start inside body panels and girders, is caused by the salt spread on our roads. To eliminate this problem, here's what Rambler is doing about it.

GALVANIZING Side body panels below the doors are galvanized. This area is constantly exposed to salt.

DEEP-DIP The entire car body is submerged six times into huge tanks. Each time a solution cleans, scours and prepares the surface of the metal.

PRIMER DIP The car is dipped again, right up to the roof, in rustproofing primer paint. Hundreds of gallons surge inside girders and pillars, reaching all corners, crevices and curved areas. This is more rustproofing than any other Canadian car gets, and more spilled, literally, than others use. The body then receives a second primer which is sprayed on. Well over 15 pounds of rustproofing primer now coat the steel. After this, the primer paint is baked on.

TRIPLE ENAMELLING A chip-resistant, salt-resistant super enamel is sprayed and baked on. A second and third coat follow immediately, then baked to a durable gloss.

SEALING A corrosion-inhibiting wax compound is sprayed inside girders, rocker panels and fenders. A sealer compound is also sprayed on critical underbody areas to provide additional protection.

The Canadian Rambler is the most completely rust-proofed car in the world. Visit your nearest Rambler dealer soon. Take a test drive for the final reason why Rambler is Canada's best car value.

POWERS WITH U2 MODEL — Pilot Francis Gary Powers holds a model of the U2 plane as he appears before the Senate Armed Services Committee in Washington. It was from a plane of this type Powers parachuted into Russia in May, 1960. (AP Wirephoto).

U-2 Spy Pilot Vindicated, Free to Choose Own Life

WASHINGTON (CP)—U-2 spy pilot Francis Gary Powers is free to choose his own life with the aid of some $50,000 in back pay after being vindicated and described by senators as a courageous American.

The final chapter of Powers' high-flying drama over Russia—which led to the collapse of a summit conference — unfolded before the Senate armed services committee Tuesday.

Fingering a small, slender-winged model of his photo-espionage plane, the soft-spoken Virginian told the hearing he didn't know precisely what caused his plane to crack up at 68,000 feet near Sverdlovsk, in the heart of Russia.

He had heard a "whump" and could remember "feeling, hearing and just sensing an explosion." There was a slight forward movement to the plane and looking up from his instruments he could see an orange color everywhere.

"I had never seen anything like this before . . . I felt that the explosion was external to the airplane."

BELIEVED SHOT DOWN

While this was all the explanation Powers could offer for the mysterious break - up of his plane, Congressman Carl Vinson, Georgia Democrat, told reporters later that intelligence experts believe the craft was hit by a Russian ground-to-air missile.

Testimony by Soviet charges the 32-year-old Powers — who freely admitted he was an officer in the employee of the U.S. Central Intelligence Agency — said he had not been ordered to commit suicide through use of a poisoned needle if caught by the Russians.

Instructions given him were that if captured he was to avoid revealing without resistance and if necessary tell the truth about his mission. The needle was to be used at his discretion in case he tortured for some reason.

Powers' recital of his efforts to destroy the secret equipment in his stricken craft, his agonizing fight to get out of the U2 and his parachute descent while riding his parachute down interested congressional senators and spectators.

He testified that when his effort to destroy the equipment failed he decided to tell the Russians he was linked with the CIA but withheld some vital information.

PRAISED BY CIA

Even before Powers testified the CIA said in a report the pilot had lived up to his instructions and "his obligations as an American."

Powers filled in with vivid detail highlights of his spy flight.

SEEK OCEAN ACREAGE AID FOR FISHERMEN

Farm Improvement Loans Act Extended

OTTAWA (CP)—Newest idea by an opposition MP:

Ocean acreage payments for hard-pressed fishermen.

"One dollar per cubic mile of ocean," Perth Howard (CCF—Skeena) proposed in the Commons Tuesday night after stating that drought-stricken Prairie farmers on three occasions have been paid $1 an acre up to a maximum of $200 per farmer.

Up for debate was a government measure to extend the Fisheries Improvement Loans Act for another three years from June 30, 1962. The ceiling on individual loans is $4,000 and the interest rate five per cent.

MPs from the Atlantic provinces and British Columbia didn't laugh off Mr. Howard's suggestion. Some of the sharpest criticism of the government in this field came from two Maritime Progressive Conservatives.

Robert S. MacLellan (PC—Inverness - Richmond) said Canadian fishermen need help just as much as underdeveloped countries in Asia receiving Canadian aid under the Colombo Plan.

SEEK CREDIT BODY

Both he and W. L. M. Creaghan (PC — Westmorland) said the Fisheries Improvement Loans Act has been of little or no use and that a credit corporation for fishermen is needed.

A resolution, preparatory to a bill, to extend the act was approved.

Also approved was a resolution to extend the life of the Farm Improvement Loans Act for another three years from coming July 1, 1962.

In the midst of the farm and fisheries debates, Prime Minister Diefenbaker announced that federal byelection will be held Sept. 10 in the Ontario riding of Waterloo South and the Quebec constituency of Nicolet-Yamaska. No date was set for a byelection for the third vacant Commons seat, Mackenzie River.

ASKS HIGHER CEILINGS

On the farms loans measure, Hazen Argue, Saskatchewan former Commons leader of the CCF - New Democratic Party group, and his recent colleague, Arnold Peters (CCF — Timiskaming), urged the loan ceiling be increased to $10,000 from $7,500. Interest on the loans is five per cent.

Mr. Fleming said the present ceiling is "reasonably adequate" under present conditions, but conceded that conditions "could change."

LIBERAL ACCUSES GOVT. OF BAD BOOKKEEPING

Opposition Takes Floor in House

TORONTO (CP)—The opposition had its day in the Ontario legislature Tuesday as the members used the traditional freedom of the budget debate to touch on a wide variety of subjects.

The estimates for the department of agriculture were approved during the day and night sittings.

During the debate opposition members spoke on bookkeeping by the government, urged an inquiry into the dismissal of two Don Jail guards and criticized plans to bolster farm prices.

Ross Whicher, Liberal financial critic and member for Bruce, accused the government of using phoney bookkeeping in its accounts and of concealing years of mounting deficit behind reports of nominal surpluses.

"This government has been cooking the books," Mr. Whicher said in a two - hour speech, "and the time has come to inspect the kitchen."

During his speech had projected the budget figures to pre. 1951 when current expenditures of $1,800,000,000 by 1971, a deficit that year of $320,000,000 and a net capital debt then of some $4,130,000,000.

QUESTIONS FIGURES

Mr. Whicher said that while Provincial Treasurer Allan claimed a surplus of $2,000,000 for the fiscal year ending March 31, 1961, there actually was a deficit of $60,000.

In four of the last years "the government showed a deficit in the real cash position instead of a surplus as was claimed."

He said a careful reading of the recent annual report of Provincial Auditor A. A. Cotnam "leaves little doubt that the auditor does not approve and does not agree with the arbitrary and misleading distinction which this government draws as to where the current and capital accounts."

It is clear that the budgets presented by Conservative governments for the last two generations have not been geared to the specific task of promoting growth, but have frequently worked against economic expansion."

He accused the government of failing to establish priorities in the expenditure of funds and said the budget should be used "as an instrument to make the growth of Ontario's economy."

SEEKS INVESTMENT

Allen Beach, Toronto — Toronto Woodbine) urged large-scale investment by the federal and provincial governments to compensate for low levels of private investment in the Canadian economy.

He suggested "carefully-planned, long-term program of public investment" in such things as roads, schools, hospitals, houses, parks, sewage works and power facilities.

Earlier in the day Mr. Bryden asked a full and impartial investigation into the recent dismissal of two guards at Toronto's Don Jail even if it meant "dragging the Don dry" about one of the guards.

Mr. Bryden had been suggested to him that "perhaps it would be better to let the matter die alone because the dirt about this

Final Negotiations Started On Algerian War Cease-Fire

CP from Reuters-AP

EVIAN, France—Algerian insurgents today began final negotiations here with France on a cease-fire to end the 7½-year Algerian war.

The insurgent delegation arrived here by helicopter across Lake Geneva from Switzerland to join French negotiators at a resort hotel here where the talks are being held.

To protect both delegations from possible action by right-wing extremists opposed to an independent Algeria, armored and anti-aircraft units in the area were put on alert.

Despite widespread expectations that a peace agreement would be reached soon, violence and bloodshed continued unabated in Algeria. Tuesday's toll there was 24 killed and 32 wounded as the rightist European Secret Army Organization bent on keeping French control of the territory, continued terror raids and the Moslems responded in kind.

The two negotiating teams led by Louis Joxe, French minister for Algerian affairs and rebel Vice - Premier Belkacem Krim—met in the Hotel du Parc, overlooking the lake front in this Alpine summer resort. Both

Provincial Lotteries Become Lively Political Topic

OTTAWA (CP)—The question of provincially-run lotteries becoming a lively topic in federal political circles.

Quebec Premier Jean Lesage set the ball rolling a week ago when he disclosed his government is preparing to establish a lottery and has been negotiating with the federal government to obtain necessary amendments to the Criminal Code.

Prime Minister Diefenbaker said all provinces will have to be consulted on any amendment to the code and has made no comment about a possible date for a dominion - provincial conference on the subject.

This prompted a precisely-worded question which got a precisely-worded answer in the Commons Tuesday.

J. P. DesChatelets (L—Montreal Maisonneuve - Rosemont) asked "whether the minister of justice will say if the conference will be called before Parliament is dissolved for a general election.

"No," said Mr. Fulton, "the ministry will not participate."

A member of Parliament from Quebec, meanwhile, said the public mention of the word "lottery" during a weekend address by Mr. Lesage riding drew more applause than possible solutions to the unemployment problem.

But in other provinces, lotteries have often been considered a moral problem.

Thousand Men Left Jobless As Douks Wreck Power Line

NELSON, B.C. (CP)—Three charges of explosives ripped a 300-ton steel tower into Kootenay Lake Friday, creating an area-wide power failure which has left 500 to 1,000 men out of work for weeks, possibly months.

The blast was described by owners of the tower as "a major act of industrial sabotage." It occurred in the south-central area of British Columbia, where bombings have been blamed on the radical Sons of Freedom Doukhobor sect. No one was injured.

The tower, nearly 400 feet high, supported two miles of power transmission cables that formed part of an 81-mile link to one of East Kootenay's most important mining developments.

The line across the lake, 30 miles northeast of here, was the shortest the longest in the Western world. Three giant cables the tower supported weighed 45 tons.

When the detonations came at 10:30 p.m. lights snapped off along the entire power system of the Consolidated Mining and Smelting Company. Some company installations at Kimberley ground to a halt.

The villages of Riondel and Creston and several nearby communities were blacked out.

Officials said the pig-iron and chemical fertilizer plants at Kimberley and the Bluebell

Gases More Humane Than Bombs, One Just Makes Limbs Drop Off

TORONTO (CP) — One of Canada's leading experts on chemical warfare says some recently-developed poison gases are more humane than explosives.

Dr. M. K. McPhail, head of the physiology section of the Chemical Warfare Research Centre at Suffield, Alta., said the newest gases aren't designed to kill.

Instead, they cause "blindness, inability to walk, persistent vomiting, diarrhoea or a combination of these."

Dr. McPhail, speaking Tuesday to the Toronto branch of the Chemical Institute of Canada, said some of the newer gases are "a mass-produced form.

"The sources of the gases were as varied as their effects. One fungus which causes the victim's limbs to drop off comes from a grain fungus; others come from the poison sac of a toad, the flower of a cactus and from mushrooms.

He said the top-secret Suffield plant is mainly concerned with finding antidotes for chemical warfare.

POLIO VACCINE, MOUTH VARIETY, TO BE MADE

Will Be Available For Use in Fall

OTTAWA (CP) — A painless "down-the-hatch" method will be available to Canadians this year to obtain immunization against poliomyelitis.

Health Minister Monteith announced in the Commons Tuesday that licences have been granted by his department for the manufacture in Canada of oral polio vaccine of the live virus variety.

"The new vaccine represents another, great medical breakthrough and one which may, in effect, result in the almost complete eradication of paralytic polio in this country," he said.

Live virus vaccine is not administered with a needle as is the dead-virus salk vaccine. One has a cubic centimetre of the tasteless live liquid vaccine—about one-sixtieth of an ounce—is placed in a small quantity of milk or water with an eyedropper and taken as a gulp.

The live vaccine will be produced in Canada by the Con-

Storm Raises Killer Tides On U.S. Coast

At Least Eleven Dead In Winter's Worst Gale

NEW YORK (AP)—The remnants of a killer storm, shorn of snow and freezing rain but strong in battering winds and inundating tides, continued to lash the populous northeastern United States today.

The storm, for the area's worst of a veering winter, hurtled up the eastern seaboard Tuesday, piling up to three feet of water in some inland centres and flooding vast coastal areas.

At least 11 deaths were attributed to the storm. At least that many more were missing and hundreds had been evacuated. Damage was expected to run into the millions of dollars.

Wind - pushed tides rumbled three to five feet above normal, today promised little relief for the coastal areas flooded at the height of the storm. It was these tides that accounted for 6 lion's share of the deaths.

At Dover, Del., five children—members of the John A. Waters family—were drowned as they started to flee the flooded shoreline of Delaware Bay. A sixth child was missing and presumed drowned.

TWO COUPLES MISSING

Two New Jersey couples were washed away and drowned during Tuesday night when a coast guard amphibious vessel evacuating them was smothered by a 10-foot wave near Beach Haven Inlet.

There were other known storm dead in New Jersey, Maryland, Virginia and North Carolina — through drownings, electrocutions from fallen wires, highway accidents and heart seizures.

Shelters were closed in many places, and thousands of homes were without power or heat.

Atlantic City, N.J., and Ocean City, Md., were cut off from the mainland at the height of the storm when winds reached 75 m.p.h. and 20-foot waves poured ashore. Part of the famed steel pier at Atlantic City was torn away.

The 40-foot yacht Guinevere, out of New York, was missing in stormy seas off the South Carolina coast with three persons aboard. Off the New Jersey coast, a destroyer in tow with the disabled broke loose and ran aground.

DOVER, Del. (AP)—"Mother, they're all dead."

Mrs. Virginia Waters, 27, recalled these words from her daughter, Alisa, 9, after high waters from the flooded shoreline of the Delaware Bay swept away six other Waters' children as they tried to flee their home during a severe storm.

Five children drowned. The sixth was missing and presumed drowned, Coy Mrs. Waters, her husband, John A. Waters, 41; Alisa, and a brother, John Jr., 5; and Mrs. Waters' blind mother, Mrs. Mamie Whittington, 57, survived.

"She (Alisa) didn't know us when we were in the hospital," Mrs. Waters said. She kept telling us, 'Mother, they're all dead.' She knew. She knew."

Waters said the water was so high by the time the family was awakened by their car that he saw no chance to drive away safely. He said the family sat in the car and waited for the tide to fall from Delaware Bay.

He recalled that by his wife and John Jr. finally struggled — nearly spent — to a high house mounted on stilts. He said he was saved by his wife when both were stranded under water by a heavy wave as they headed for the building.

"She dragged me to a spot where I could get my head above the water," said Waters.

"I got her in the building, got my son out and the car and started back for the rest. I was going to start back but my wife kept hollering that I wouldn't make it. I did have my doubts."

WAVE SWEEP CAR

Waters, his wife and John Jr. were stranded at the shocking house and had to wade perilously across the car, containing Mrs. Whittington and the other seven children was swept out and dragged across the Waters' front lawn by the heavy seas.

Waters said the windows of the car were down and he saw the children "reaching out" to crawl from the auto.

"I knew I couldn't help. I must have broken his hold," said Waters. "I knew he was gone but I didn't tell my wife."

Waters said he shouted to the other children to leave the car and go with him.

Then he saw a rescue boat coming, a boat he knew. It took him, his wife and John Jr. to safety.

Residents of the Delaware National Guard pulled Mrs. Whittington and Alisa from the car.

Four of the children were found dead in the car. A fifth, Mary Susan, 11, was found in Dover Monroe, 12; Rose, 6; Wayne, 4; Charles, 3; and Gabriel, 15 months.

Eugene was missing and presumed drowned.

Wants Sidewalk Replaced Before Muddy Season

A reminder to city council that the muddy season will shortly be with us and that replacement of a sidewalk torn up to allow installation of a sanitary sewer could be replaced as soon as possible, has been received at city hall from the Ontario School for the Deaf.

The letter, read at this week's meeting of council was referred to the public works department for action.

The sidewalk along the south side of Dundas Street was torn up last fall to allow the installation of the sanitary sewer and as yet has not been replaced.

Mr. J. G. Demeza, superintendent at the O.S.D., stated the letter was just a reminder to council that the walk as yet had not been replaced.

"The muddy season will soon be with us and our students will have no choice but walk when they go to Church or to swimming classes at Albert College," he said.

The city works department has promised the matter will be looked after.

Snow Removal Costs Below Last Year

Close to 30 inches of snow fell in the city during February, but snow removal costs in Belleville so far this year are running slightly below those for 1961.

City Engineer Malcolm Turnbull stated today that total costs for all phases of winter control so far this year are about $28,000, or about $1,000 below the figure for the comparative date last year.

The $28,000 figure is for snow removal, snowplowing of the streets and sidewalks and all sanding operations.

Total cost of snow removal for last year was $32,459, the engineer stated.

Legal Technicalities Hold Up Cleanup Operations in Block

Legal technicalities are continuing to hold up cleanup operations at the burned out Ben Safe block on Bridge Street East which was destroyed by fire several weeks ago.

Following an inquiry by Alderman Les Digby, city council was told Monday that responsibility of certain walls of the gutted building was holding up demolition operations. It seems that while three walls of the structure are wholly owned by the Safe property, the west wall is jointly owned with the adjacent building.

Alderman Digby mention..d the matter two weeks ago declaring that the wrecked building and blocked-off sidewalk created a hazard for pedestrians who are forced to use the street at this point and asked that something be done about it.

At that time it was stated the holdup in cleaning up the debris was caused by a delay in insurance adjustment.

Now it seems the delay is being continued because of legal difficulties.

A total of 403 Hastings county hog producers turned out at three polls Tuesday to elect seven committeemen to the ladners' committeemen.

The above seven committeemen will elect one man to represent the county in the No. 2 District of the Ontario Hog Producers Association.

Plainfield saw the largest turnout of hog producers at the polls with 196 votes being registered. At Madoc there were 113 votes polled and at Stirling, 90.

'Rocket' Star Attraction at Kiwanis Meet

Maurice "Rocket" Richard appears to be as much of a star attraction off the ice as he certainly was on it judging by the capacity, indeed overflow, attendance of local Kiwanians and their sons yesterday afternoon at the Kiwanis Centre for their annual father-son dinner.

The popular Canadien "Flying Frenchman" was the guest speaker for the occasion and gave a brief address, outlining his hockey career from the time he took part, as do so many Canadian youngsters, in organized sports hockey in Montreal through his junior hockey days in Verdun to his becoming a star with the Montreal Canadiens from 1942 on.

Following his address a lively question and answer session followed for the junior set present.

Mr. Richard urged the lads to play hockey for the game's sake and all the time and advised them that nothing comes easy. He recommended that they participate in other sports as well as hockey in order to best develop their athletic ability Tennis, swimming and baseball were the three sports which he especially commended to boys wishing to develop their reflexes and abilities to the full.

There was no special formula or coaching involved in becoming a hockey player, he speaker suggested. The game comes naturally to one as a result of lots of hard work and much practice, he stated, and urged those developing to become good hockey players to stick at it and put everything they had into it and the sports he recommended.

Asked whether there was no special coaching received by either himself or his brother Henri, also well known hockey players of them. It was Maurice's personal efforts and hard practice which achieved this end and this was the same procedure which he could recommend to future hockey stars.

Mr. Richard was introduced by Ken McDonald and thanked by Kiwanian Dick Chambers. Following the program, which was under the direction of Ron Godden, there was a mass banter around Maurice for autographs on the recently donated ice hockey sticks which were then collected amongst the boys.

President George Hall conducted the regular portion of the meeting.

leaving between 800 and 1,000 people stranded. Hundreds of men out of work. The huge Cominco smelter at Trail was also affected, with its supply of ore concentrates cut.

A Cominco official released at Trail said work on replacing the power line towers is likely will start immediately, "but officials expect the project will take probably several months."

"The situation may be relieved by the possibility of receiving limited supplies on a temporary line within a shorter time," he added.

FOLLOWS PATTERN

The incident followed the pattern of dozens of other bombings in the Kootenay Valley, although it far surpassed in size anything Hiller has done.

Seventy-two members of the Sons of Freedom sect are on trial here on bombing and arson charges. Fourteen have been convicted and sentenced to jail terms of up to 28 years.

Normal Age For Retirement Set at 65

The normal retirement age for city of Belleville employees will be 65, it has been decided by the council on the recommendation from the council personnel committee.

This week council passed a recommendation approving the 65 year retirement age and by which allows retirement up to 70 years upon the will of council.

Personnel committee chairman W. E. Jarvah said the present 65 year retirement regulation was to cover persons who would be forced to retire on health reasons before reaching 65.

Although the normal retirement age is set at 65, with council consent any city employee may continue to be employed from year to year until he reaches the 70th year.

Speaking to the recommendation Mr. Jarvah said the 65-year retirement age was also in conformity with the city pension plan.

And referring to the enforcement of retirement age of 70, Mr. Jarvah said "only one person reaching this age had "outlived his usefulness on any payroll."

Blind Convict Leaves Prison After 29 Years

KINGSTON (CP)—Jack Hoff, 59-year-old blind convict, paroled after years of negotiations, shuffled out of Kingston penitentiary today and drew his first breath of free air in 29 years.

Hoff was arrested to life imprisonment in 1933 in the slaying of his Romanian wife when she ran off with another man. He had attempted to take his own life also but the bullet fired into his head severed an optic nerve, leaving him alive but blind.

Hoff was released after Rev. J. O. Moyer of the Church of Providence in Toronto volunteered to be secretary of his mission to look after the blind man for the remainder of his years.

Other convicts serving life sentences during the time Hoff was jailed were released long ago but no agency could be found to insure accommodation for Hoff.

Prison Warden David McLean said Jake received news of his parole with deep emotion.

"The world won't seem that much different to him," Mr. McLean said. "He had a radio in his cell these years and sound was his main source of information about things around him."

Late Senator Took Bribe Jury Is Told

NEW YORK (AP)—A federal prosecutor told a jury Tuesday that the late Senator George S. Bender, Ohio Republican, took a $100,000 bribe to kill a stock fraud investigation.

Bender at the time was special assistant to the secretary of the interior in the Eisenhower administration.

Assistant U.S. Attorney Gerald Walpin told a jury that oil promoter Samuel Garfield of Clare, Mich., paid the money to Bender, Oct. 31, 1955, one of 10 persons and four firms on trial on federal charges involving the United Dye and Chemical Corporation, now known as Chemoil Industries Corporation.

Defence lawyers accused Walpin of "wild and inflammatory reflection upon a man who knows is now dead."

The government said the stock conspiracy began in 1953 and continued until last summer, when the defendants were indicted. The public was said to have been defrauded of $2,000,000.

Walpin claimed two other defendants shared responsibility for the bribe attempt. He named them as Harold Buell of New York, president of Chemoil, and oil investor Irving Pasternak of Denver, Colo.

As outlined by the government, the case involves the defendants involves intricate stock manipulations and the alleged misleading of the public on earnings and prospects of uranium dye and chemical.

Front Street Building Burns, 3 Families Are Homeless, Loss Estimated at $30,000

TRENTON — Fire last night swept through the Front Street premises occupied by Quinte Plumbing and Heating, leaving a shell of a building in its wake, three families from the apartments above homeless and more than fifteen shop workers out of work.

The fire, which was reported at 5.10 p.m., was first discovered by Jake Brant, one of the apartment tenants. Mr. Brant told a reporter that he opened the door to his apartment and was met by a dense cloud of smoke. He attempted to return downstairs but his retreat was blocked by smoke. Mr. Brant said that he then smashed in the front bedroom window of his flat, from where he was rescued by means of a ladder.

In a matter of minutes after the fire was discovered, all available men and equipment from the Trenton fire department were on the scene, rather short time later, Fire Chief Sos Vance had called for aid to the Belleville department and one truck and men, led by Fire Chief Gerald Vance arrived at the fire in short order.

For a matter of hours or more, a dense cloud of smoke enveloped the entire downtown area of Trenton, could be seen from Prince Edward County across the Bay, Sparks from the wind-fanned blaze, showered down on the roofs of a terrace, and a Canadian Pacific freight train, east of the fire scene, were on fire and required water soaking.

Firemen stayed at the scene for more than six hours.

The building which was flanked by empty lots, stood on part of the site approved by federal government engineers for the location of a new federal building. It was owned by Archie McNeil and Dan Toppling Today, Mr. Topping said that the estimated $30,000 loss was partially covered by insurance.

Mrs. Douglas McMurter, the former Carolyn Brant, a bride of a few months, had been attending gifts and trousseau in the fire.

Mr. and Mrs. McMurter lived with the latter's father, Jake Brant. Mrs. McMurter was almost carried away from the fire by firemen, who feared when she was overcome by smoke. She was taken to the home of relatives.

It is not immediately known how many persons occupied the apartments above the ruined shop.

The cause of the fire has not been established but it is believed that it started in one of the upstairs apartments.

Undesirable TV Programs, 'Low Grade Movies' Blamed For Juvenile Delinquency

TRENTON — D. I. MacKinnon, probation officer at Belleville, speaking to the members of the Trenton YWCA Auxiliary on Monday night, told the parents present that many of the delinquents, examined before by juveniles, could be laid at the door of the influence of undesirable television programs and "low grade movies", "Juvenile crime" is usually not very original", said the speaker, "but the young mind soaks up ideas like a sponge. Many children spend as much time watching TV as they do in school, and not all TV programs are suitable for children to watch, I suggest that parents should censor television programs with more care."

Mr. MacKinnon said that "comic books contribute to the juvenile delinquency picture. He said that a child who was found watching TV in a gang group would quite often do something to some other child to himself. Unless a child is made to feel "wanted" and a part of the family, he may stray into delinquency in one form or another. Mr. MacKinnon said that many juvenile delinquencies could be termed "symbolic acts" rather than "crime for crime's sake." The child, he said, is often protesting against circumstances and environment.

Mr. MacKinnon advocated that children be brought under the influence of the church on Sunday School, at an early age.

"Our criminal code was built on the principle of moral code", he said; "The influence of religion had a great deal to do with the child's attitude to life. If everyone observed the Ten Commandments, there would be no crime".

Mr. MacKinnon said that certain "conditions" were "conducive to delinquency" when it applied to juvenile crime. The child must be protected by having his case heard in juvenile, rather than open court.

One bright side of the picture, said the speaker, was that the number of repeaters was comparatively small. He said that once the child's case had been "brought into" the open", the child and his parents received "constructive help" and that was the way it must be done about the situation.

Mr. MacKinnon also said that the incidence of juvenile crime in Belleville is appreciably low. Referring to Hastings County, (omitting Trenton) he said that

East Side Site For Federal Building Urged

TRENTON — Joe Dale and Lorne Meak, representing a number of east Trenton businessmen, came before the Trenton Suburban Planning Board last night to suggest that the B. W. Powers coal yard, north of the Trenton Community Gardens area, be the site of the new federal building for the town.

Mr. Dale, the spokesman, apologized to board chairman Dr. W. A. L. McDonald, and other board members for not consulting them on the subject before.

He pointed out that many people referred to the proposed building as "the new post office", while it would be, really, a "federal building," containing a post office, customs office and other government agencies as the employment office.

Mr. Dale said that the site was also ideal for American yachtsmen.

Using the coal yard for the site of the new building would do away with the "coal dust" policy in Trenton's tax structure, said Mr. Dale, adding that merchants in the vicinity of the post office pay a five percent reduction in taxes.

Mr. Dale suggested that if the federal government could be induced to buy the yard for $100,000, part of the cost across involved could be sold to the Trenton Public Utilities Commission for use as parking space or for the waterfront beautification program advocated by the planning board.

Mr. Dale also voiced the fear that building up a shopping centre in the vicinity of the Loblaw store, east of the town, would take most of the business away from the west and east side shopping districts.

"We won't need a second bridge in Trenton then," said Mr. Dale, "Everyone will have to cross it."

"Has anyone asked the property owners here if they would be willing to sell the land to the federal building board?" Mr. Dale asked the board chairman.

Dr. McDonald admitted that the board had not been consulted in the choice.

"I've stated publicly, as an individual, that I thought more building might have been put into the choice of a site," said Dr. McDonald, "and the board would be prepared to do study on different locations and would welcome your recommendation, if it were asked."

Dr. McDonald told the delegation that the board acted in an advisory capacity only to council, and that it had no very little for the eastside group.

"I guess we started at the wrong end of the horse," observed Mr. Dale, as he and Mr. Meak took their leave.

Pre-payments Of Taxes High

TRENTON — Tax Collector C. O. Alan Weaver reported to Trenton Council last night that purchases of pre-payment tax certificates this year were greater than for any single year in the past five, in all, more than $125,000 having been purchased to date.

Mr. Weaver said that this statement on the advice of my solicitor to council and also because it was easy to find in the ledger, than by memory, by saying that, and what had been to think I meant was quite different.

"My main sorrow was that my wife couldn't be here. I am sorry that I was there and it caused a lot of adverse publicity to the town."

SAVANNAH, Ga. (AP)—Civil defence authorities say about 60 persons are homeless as a result of a fire which levelled a two-square-block area near downtown Savannah Tuesday. No injuries were reported.

man was liable to come out before the public.

Ray Edwards (L—Wentworth) said a private company might well be able to handle outstanding loans to junior farmers more cheaply than the provincial government.

In discussing the $180,000 estimates for the Ontario junior farmer loan branch of the agriculture department, he said the branch's work has been wound up since the federal government's farm credit corporation took over such loans some years ago.

Told some 3,200 loans are outstanding, he replied: "I don't think any organization should continue to have a staff this large to handle this number of loans," and suggested a trust company could handle it for less.

U-2 SPY PILOT

over the Ural Sea he saw two objects coming at him from time to time might come from Russian jets launched for him. "I don't think they ever got close," Powers replied.

When he had landed by parachute he saw another parachute in the sky, not a part of his plane's equipment. At the time, he said he speculated it might be a Russian agent coming to help him. He said he thought he was part of a fired Russian rocket.

The Russians claim a rocket shot down the plane. Powers apparently was convinced it was a rocket.

His first reaction was to reach the "destruct switches." These are connected to a 2½-pound charge set to damage the photo, equipment.

While Powers never made it clear whether this also would destroy the plane, Rep. Barry Goldwater (Rep. Ariz.) said such a charge would have been highly damaging to the plane it self. Goldwater is a reserve air force general.

SPACE TOO TIGHT

Powers said there was a good reason why he neglected the pilot ejection mechanism provided in the plane.

"In this particular aircraft there isn't much clearance between the pilot's head and the top of the windshield . . . and I had used the ejection seat at that time I would probably have cut both legs just above my knees."

Instead, he said, he opened the canopy, released his safety belt and was thrown half way out of the plane. He tried to get back into the aircraft, but the destructor switches but couldn't. Quickly "somersaulted" and he was floating free.

Getting from his parachute at about 10,000 feet, he came up a small map, opened up a coin purse, identification, a pin and dropped the pin loose in his pocket.

Powers said he tried to invent a story that he was off course from the Russian agent, but say it as they had found the poison needle, the map, the coin purse, Russian rubles and other equipment.

NOW MISTREATED

He was questioned as much as 10 to 12 hours daily for some time to get the full story.

Did the Russians misquote him in saying said he made a terrible mistake by flying at a reason over Soviet soil and was sorry?

"No, that wasn't a misquotation. I made this statement on the advice of my lawyer in counsel and also because it was easy to find in the ledger, than by memory, by saying that, and what had been to think I meant was quite different.

"My main sorrow was that my wife couldn't be here. I am sorry that I was there and it caused a lot of adverse publicity to the town."

Two Conferences on Education

Sunday the second Canadian Conference on Education opened in Montreal.

Monday there arrived at our desk a report of the Ontario conference on education held in Windsor last November under the auspices of some fifteen organizations.

This thick report (157 pages) and the wire service reports of opening addresses at the Canadian Conference provide far more material than can be mentally digested quickly. Fortunately, through the courtesy of a local high school principal, we had had an opportunity to read the report of the Ontario conference a week earlier. The result, though, is to leave us with vague misgivings.

We have always considered that what should be taught in our schools was the business of everybody in a democracy; how it should be taught is the business of the professionals, the teachers. We see no reason to alter this conviction, in theory; but in practice, perhaps it would be helpful if we left the whole question, what should be taught as well as how it should be taught, to the teaching profession. What the teachers would decide is not clear. Wide clearings of opinion are not made; but at least the scales do not appear to be so heavily weighted in any direction as to eliminate the possibility that other, opposing, theories will be given careful consideration. Amongst laymen, however, there has arisen an alarming unanimity of opinion that our main need is for an increase in vocational training at the secondary school level. It is not surprising that this opinion should be reflected in governmental actions.

This view stems largely from changing conditions in industry. Automation is demanding an ever increasing proportion of skilled employees. It is predicted that young people just entering the labor force may have to be retrained two or even three times during their working years. For some reason, nobody seems to interpret this prospect as creating an added demand for certain skills as a reason against, rather than for, increased vocational training in the schools. Among the sponsoring organizations of the Ontario conference last November were the Canadian Manufacturers' Association (Ontario Division) and the Ontario Chamber of Commerce. We cannot escape the conviction that some of their members are more concerned about meeting present needs for qualified employees than they are about what we consider the aim of education. That, though, is not surprising, for there are at least three commonly held theories as to the aims of education.

First, and most widely held in all probability, is that it is to enable a boy or girl to earn his or her own living. Such an ability is essential. But is it anything more than the by-product of the educational process? A striptease performer is very handsomely paid to teach a girl to disrobe in public, are we "educating" her? Is there any essential difference in what we are doing if we teach her brother some more productive skill? Is this education?

Rev. Henri V. Legare, rector of the University of Ottawa, delivered a keynote address in French at the Canadian Conference on Education Monday. He held the whole purpose of education is to give the student an insight into the meaning of his life in the world and after it. He made this statement as part of a plea to keep religion in education—but we see no real difference between his view and those who plead for instruction in citizenship, a much commoner demand amongst those interested in Canadian education today. This is a second view of the aim of education.

The third view, it seems to us, was advanced by Dr. Neville Scarfe, dean of education at the University of British Columbia, speaking in English to the same conference. He urged "greater emphasis on the thinking process, on creativity, on self-directed inquiry, on problem-solving techniques." We find much outlook room in several parts of the report on the Ontario conference last November, especially by teachers. For instance, in a panel discussion S. G. B. Robinson, general secretary of the Ontario Secondary School Teachers' Federation, said: "There will always be the need for the person with the mind trained to observe data objectively—who thinks sequentially, and who reaches conclusions logically and unemotionally."

It is because this view appears to be more common amongst teachers than amongst laymen, and because it is the view with which we agree, that, against our principles and against our own inner promptings, we are prepared to withdraw permanently from the debate on education, if all other laymen will do likewise, leaving the field to the teachers.

Strictly Personal

'Wipe That Look Off Your Face'

By SYDNEY J. HARRIS

Peter De Vries, in one of his amusing books, mentions that when he was a boy in school his teachers invariably ordered him to "wipe that look off your face."

He was always puzzled and hurt by this command "because that was no look, it was just my face." A delightful frame of sympathy went through me when I read his words, for I have suffered the same unjust fate all my days.

There is something about the cast of my face — as there also must be about Dr. Vries' — that makes me look supercilious and aloof, cold and disdainful. I have been accused of giving this impression when I was not aware to accept the fact that it must be so.

Yet the inner man does not feel that way — and here I am sure I speak not only for De Vries and myself, but also for millions of others who unwittingly look like the Sphinx on the Nile Sands ordering another gross of horse-radish.

When I meet strangers, or persons I know only casually, I feel quite ashamed while defensive about the shyness. As a consequence I smile a lot to hide such feelings, I suppose, my face assumes an expression of distant sympathy and undistributable world-weariness.

No doubt, this whole unfortunate mix-up has originated in some kind of fear, directly traceable to some childish experience. Whatever its cause, it changes the friendly little puppy inside to a startlingly different face to the feeling, on the outside.

To cure myself of this sorry scheme of things, those of us who have this syndrome also need to forget people's names and faces, and to walk past them on the street without sight or recognition. Indeed, it pains me to confess I was once so absorbed in an imaginary conversation that I passed my own parents and brother on one day, and did not pause until my father had turned back and given me a sharp rap on the skull.

There is some fear of engagement with the other person at the bottom of this — a fear of aloofness. With some people such fear has the effect of alcoholism; with others it takes the form of heartiness; with still others it results in detail in attack and belligerence. In all cases it is a means of resisting accessively to the need for personal engagement.

Whatever the psychological explanation, it's about time the world understood that those of us who can't wipe those looks off our faces aren't trying to hobnob anybody. That's the last thought in our minds — at least, for most of us. De Vries may be different — I met him once many years ago, and he seemed awfully aloof and distainful to me.

Cabby Given $4 Banknote

Buffalo News

A $3 bill may be the epitome of phoniness but in Canada a $4 bill has been uncovered that is so real it is almost fake. Seems a Montreal cabby accepted a few years ago from a man who couldn't pay a $2.10 fare. Checked up the bill turned out to be an authentic 1846 issue of the Bank of Upper Canada. The cab driver has kept it hoping for the day when it will be beyond what he has already been offered.

And the moral of this story, of course, is that the next time someone offers you a $3 bill think twice before you throw it in his face. You can't even trust a phony these days.

Healing Art Exemplified

Montreal Gazette

In an age when the world seems so deeply and bitterly divided, and angry, and anxious, there is something reassuring when nations combine to share their mercy and knowledge. The flight of Dr. Wilder Penfield from Montreal to join in a consultation on the case of Prof. Davidovsky in Moscow asserts the universality of medicine as the healing art that sees in no patient only someone in need. Co-operation came from Moscow in the special plane to aid Prof. Landau; were sent from Great Britain and from Montreal.

Prof. Landau, a noted scientist, and a Bolshevik, the first Lenin Prize, suffered serious brain injuries in a motor accident. Dr. Penfield after discussing the case on the telephone with Prof. Landau's doctors, flew from Montreal to be present at the bedside. He has been called in also from previous occasions, in medical conferences, and his research work at the Montreal Neurological Institute is known and honored among Russian doctors.

Perhaps no one may yet be certain what the outcome of this particular case may be. But there is something of healing for the whole world in this kind of fellowship and helpfulness. It is a reminder of what real and true civil action could mean.

'I Am Go' Is Defended

Ottawa Journal

It had to come, and it has come. The Manchester Guardian quotes, but does not name, a British politician who calls himself a "chauvinist" about his mother tongue — and says that the astronautical phrase, "I am go," makes his flesh creep. (We view askance the chauvinism of any Englishmen who uses so chronically French-rooted a word as "chauvinist". It would be different if the word had been worn into an English shape, as a "gardy-loo," the cry of the 18th century Edinburgh housewife when emptying a slop bucket into the street, was worn from "gare de l'eau.")

"A-OK" may be a bit thick. But an Associated Press reporter has a right to think it may serve you a clue that he is up to date, if he does.

If this is the case, it may be a bid for attention — and it can become a habit. By careful watching (truly a chore!) and noticing his slightest slip-up you may be able to help break the habit.

In any event, consult your doctor to rule out the possibility of any physical disorder.

Dear Dr. Molner: I was told I have a polyp in the large intestine. Is there any difference between a polyp and a diverticulum? And is surgery the only way to get rid of polyps? — M.F.

Difference? Yes, indeed. A polyp is a growth, usually mucous surface. A diverticulum is a sort of pouch. Surgery is the only way to remove polyps, but it is comparatively simple. Since polyps are in the intestinal tract (as distinct from polyps in other parts of the body) have a rather bad reputation for being (or becoming) malignant, it's well to get rid of them.

The Soviet Union has been pushing ahead with bold new plans for Arctic development— and these appear to be far ahead of anything yet achieved in Canada. The Soviet north is being rapidly developed, supporting a number of large centres and a considerable population.

Where Are We Going?

Dution Advance

Most people today are working fewer hours per week more labor-saving devices than at any time in history. But instead of providing more relaxation and time to enjoy the finer things of life we are living and working at the fastest clip ever. A good question for which no one appears to have the answer is — "Where are we going — so fast and so far?"

Rumination by a Child Usually Becomes a Habit

By JOSEPH G. MOLNER, M.D.

Dear Dr. Molner: When my baby was small he spit up, just like any other child. Now at seven months he doesn't just spit up; he brings it up little by little throughout the whole day. — M.H.

From the letter, I'm not sure whether this is drooling, or whether the baby is bringing up food.

If it is just saliva, probably it will clear up in time.

If, on the other hand, it is a matter of bringing up food, then some causative trouble in a physical sense is present. Obstruction of the gullet or stomach can cause this sort of thing.

There's another trick that some of the little tykes can perform. It's called rumination — a willful regurgitation of food.

In such cases facial expressions or movements of the mouth may give you a clue that he is up to such a trick.

If this is the case, it may be a bid for attention — and it can become a habit. By careful watching (truly a chore!) and noticing his slightest slip-up you may be able to help break the habit.

In any event, consult your doctor to rule out the possibility of any physical disorder.

Dear Dr. Molner: I was told I have a polyp in the large intestine. Is there any difference between a polyp and a diverticulum? And is surgery the only way to get rid of polyps? — M.F.

Difference? Yes, indeed. A polyp is a growth, usually mucous surface. A diverticulum is a sort of pouch. Surgery is the only way to remove polyps, but it is comparatively simple. Since polyps are in the intestinal tract (as distinct from polyps in other parts of the body) have a rather bad reputation for being (or becoming) malignant, it's well to get rid of them.

Dear Dr. Molner: My obstetrician prescribed some pills for constipation during my pregnancy. It is now several months after the birth of my baby and I am still dependent on them. Otherwise I become painfully constipated. — Mrs. R.

Use of them temporarily is understandable. Some people do have this trouble in pregnancy. On the other hand, if you didn't have constipation before, there's no valid reason why you should have it afterward.

My suggestions: Taper off on the pills, every other day at first, then every third day. Try for some definite time each day for bowel action, before or after a given meal, morning, evening, or whenever suits your physical rhythm.

Drinking three to four extra glasses of water a day often does wonders. If you still have trouble, then glycerine suppositories can help.

Dear Dr. Molner: My son is almost 16 but has hardly grown at all for two years, and is not very large for his age. He also has a very deep voice. They think he has some thyroid trouble. Is it possible? — Mrs. B.

It's possible. There are other causes of dry skin, and there have been cases in which a son not growing as tall as one might prefer. Within very narrow limits, the height is governed by heredity rather than by anything else. Usually, he'll also well known that some boys grow tall at their height early; others have a growth spurt later. It isn't too intricate a job the way you describe voice, and other glandular activity. Unchecked, the deep voice's the time to start treatment. If it's normal, then accept the fact that he is and will be as short as Nature intends him to be, and that there's still time for him to grow some growing.

CROWD OUT FEAR

There is nothing in the world that so inspires one as a calm person — one who brings peace and restfulness.

So much in life is a mass of confusion that when we find one who understands, that person becomes an anchor of great worth and beauty. Just one friend like this, or perhaps two or three, is quite enough to make life worth while and all that it brings with its petty worries and troubles.

Such a human being does more than anything else to crowd out fear.

And, after all, is fear not the first big hobgoblin that the Christian religion were given brought into human life history and immortality. They didn't know what fear was.

They had fear. It makes one brave to help others to be brave.

Just lately, you may have noticed various references to the affinity between mathematics and music. This, of course, is an old principle in the theory of music. But we had never known it to be. Mathematics may be on the move. Maybe mathematics is the delusions of grandeur. Give 'em an inch, and they'll take a mile.

The next thing we are likely to hear is that spiders are mathematicians. The web is only a by-product. Why can't they spin their intricate webs? See, must

SCOTT'S SCRAP BOOK

STRENGTH FOR THE DAY

DR. EARL L. DOUGLASS

THINK ON THESE THINGS

Alonzo Stagg, the famous football coach and trainer, did not retire until he was 98. Why should he have retired? He still had vigor and vitality. The calendar is the poorest thing in the world to consult when one is speculating on retirement. The thing to ask is whether or not you have any more usefulness in you, and what you are best suited to do now that the age digits have begun to pile up.

Stagg was a stickler on the matter of self-discipline. He put his foot down hard on liquor for any of his "boys." He held that the abuse of the body never goes with athletic achievement. He was hard on overeating in his rules. Instead of being criticized and murmured against for this firmness, he was idolized by "the boys." When other men had retired and were sitting out in the sun, frustrated and unhappy as they tried to fill their time with petty trivial errands, Stagg was out on the field giving his orders in his kindly but firm manner, and turning out some of the world's best athletes.

What marvelous characters the human race produces once in a while. Everybody cannot be a leader, but we can all follow the good rules of a wise leader and really turn in, at the end of a career, a good score card. But we can't do the rules we are willing to discipline ourselves. Life has a plan. Nature has laws. The soul has a destiny. Think on these things.

Dr. Penfield Wants Children Taught a Second Language, Education Council Told

MONTREAL (CP) — Dr. Wilder Penfield, one of Canada's most outstanding citizens, wants children to be taught a second language early and intensively.

Dr. Penfield proposed Tuesday night that French and English-speaking parents exchange children for short periods, that French and English-language schools share the same playgrounds, and that children of one language be supervised at play and at school by people of other languages.

The author and retired neurosurgeon told the second Canadian Conference on Education he had done extensive work on the speech mechanisms of the brain during his research at the Montreal Neurological Institute.

Children quickly pick up languages. Getting them used to another language when they are four to 10 years of age takes them through the language first stage, and the rest of the work would just be expanding vocabulary.

Dr. Penfield also announced his retirement from the honorary chairmanship of the conference, and proposed that the conference be replaced by a permanent body to be called the Canadian Education Forum.

URGES FEDERAL AID

He said federal aid to education is essential, and should be given in the form of national scholarships to students and a nation-wide system of grants through a non-political agency for research in the sciences and humanities.

This would prevent federal-provincial quarrels over jurisdiction in education.

Another plan to eliminate jurisdictional disputes was put forth by Professor Roland Parenteau of the University of Montreal.

He said an interprovincial agency set up by the 10 provinces could raise the money necessary to finance education across Canada. This would keep the federal government out of the field of education.

Mr. G. E. D. Wilson, medical health officer of Kingston, attacked the high school health education system. He said during a panel discussion that the years of repetition on care of teeth, hair, nails, sleep and posture—already dealt with in elementary grades—are largely unnecessary. He proposed that health education be ended after a short course of four to six periods early in the ninth grade.

Dr. Wilson said there is too much emphasis in school sport on winning and on exploiting the superior athlete. It was more important to encourage mass participation in a variety of games.

TOO MUCH GEOMETRY

Professor John Coleman, head of the mathematics department at Queen's University, said the forced teaching of geometry to every student in high schools is useless to most of them.

Straight monotonous memorizing of geometrical principles that few will ever use discouraged students and it was certain that the over-stress on Euclidean, deductive geometry will be reduced.

It was even conceivable that geometry would be dropped completely as a separate subject.

A Quebec attitude to new developments in society was put by Gerard Pelletier, editor of the Montreal daily, La Presse.

Quebec will never be content to live with compatriots who think of Canada as an English-language country and education should prepare children to live in a pluralist society, he said.

"In Canada we have the opportunity to give our children a second culture. What use do we make of this opportunity? Not only does the majority in this country disregard it, but it often even tries to paralyze the expression of French culture in federal organizations where it has rights. . . ."

naught, Medical Research Laboratories of the University of Wisconsin and the Institute of Microbiology and Hygiene of the University of Montreal. Sufficient quantities will be available before the start of the polio season in June or early July.

As in the case of the Salk vaccine, the cost of providing live Sabin vaccine will be shared on a 50-50 basis by the federal and provincial governments.

The announcement was welcomed by Paul Martin (L—Essex East) and H. W. Herridge (CCF—Kootenay West), in reply to Mr. Martin, Mr. Monteith said that each batch of vaccine will be subject to examination by the department before being released for use.

Mr. Monteith said it is not expected that the live vaccine will replace the Salk vaccine at the outset. Salk would continue to be used because of the outstanding success it had achieved and because it has been built into child immunization programs.

The live vaccine would be used as a booster dose for the majority of persons who have already been immunized with Salk. It would also be an initial immunizing agent for those who have not received Salk.

Canada is one of the first nations of the world to license the live virus for protection against all three types of polio.

Licenses have been issued in the United States for the manufacture of live vaccine which will provide protection against types 1 and 2 of the disease. Type 3 polio is responsible for between 60 and 70 per cent of paralytic polio cases.

Health Minister Dymond of Ontario said in the legislature at Toronto his department has ordered a supply of the live vaccine and "will distribute it free of charge" to local health boards.

He said limitations in supply at present will force restriction of the supply to children three months of age and over together with other members of the same family.

He said such family groups are the "most vulnerable" to polio infection.

"In due course, perhaps even next fall, it may be made available to everybody," Dr. Dymond said.

Late Opening For Navigation Is Forecast

DETROIT (AP) — The U.S. weather bureau said today the most extensive ice coverage of the northern Great Lakes in recent years indicates a late opening for northern lake shipping ports this year.

In a pre-season shipping condition forecast, the bureau said the coldest weather occurred last week with temperatures ranging from 30 degrees below zero over Lake Superior and northern parts of Lakes Michigan and Huron.

Augmenting an ice threat to an early opening of northern ports was the bureau's 30-day forecast calling for much-below-normal temperatures over Lake Superior and below normal temperatures over the other Great Lakes.

Probability charts, based on February mean temperatures, indicate April 15-30 as probable opening dates for Green Bay, Duluth and Sault Ste. Marie ports; April 20-25 for Mackinac; April 15 for Buffalo and March 25-29 for Cleveland and Detroit.

Pope Will Walk With Priests And People

VATICAN CITY (AP)—Pope John will walk with the priests and people of Rome in Lenten processions this year but in a way not followed by a pontiff for two centuries.

In previous years, Pope John walked in Lenten processions in various Roman Catholic churches and in the squares adjoining them.

This year, it was disclosed Monday, he will revive the custom of "collecta" and "stationaris" churches, participating in processions from one church to another.

A "collecta" church is the gathering or collecting point for the clergy and worshippers joining in the procession. The "stationaris" church is the one to which the procession walks.

Pope John has revived many old Vatican customs since he became supreme ruler of the Roman Catholic Church in 1958. He was the first pontiff to walk in a Lenten procession in dozens of years.

The 80-year-old pontiff will first participate in a Lenten procession today, Ash Wednesday. Afterward, he will walk in a procession on each of the next five Sundays.

Francis Gary Powers Lived Up to Terms of Employment, Obligations as an American

WASHINGTON (AP) — The United States Central Intelligence Agency reported today that pilot Francis Gary Powers lived up to the terms of his employment and "his obligations as an American."

The House of Representatives armed services committee made public the report on the case of the pilot whose photographic reconnaissance plane came down deep within Russia in May, 1960.

Based on an exhaustive investigation by the CIA and an advisory board, the report cleared Powers of yielding under pressure to tell more than he was authorized to say to his Soviet captors.

The intelligence agency said Powers and other U-2 pilots and other U-2 pilots were authorized to "surrender without resistance and adopt a co-operative attitude toward their captors" should evasion not prove possible and capture appear imminent.

U-2 pilots, moreover, were instructed that they were "perfectly free to tell the full truth about their mission with the exception of certain specifications of the aircraft."

FOLLOWED INSTRUCTIONS

The report found that Powers followed these instructions and that what he was authorized to do in admitting his previous U.S. Air Force service and his employment by the Central Intelligence Agency.

This statement was the first official acknowledgment that Powers was employed by the CIA, although there had been little doubt.

The report said the poisoned needle carried by Powers, and mentioned in his trial in Moscow, was "intended for use primarily if the pilot were subjected to torture or other circumstances which in his discretion warranted the taking of his own life."

"There were no instructions that he destroy himself suicide and no expectation that he would do so in these situations just described," it added.

The report said there was no evidence to support a belief that Powers' predicament was brought about by "pressure from or defection to the Russians," it also ruled out the possibility of sabotage.

The intelligence agency reported that Powers told investigators that he could have reached the "destruct" switches which would have set off an explosive charge in the plane.

The report noted to attempt Powers' explanation that although he could have pulled the switches, he could not, at that time, get into position to steel himself from the doomed and failing aircraft.

Powers was released by Russia Feb. 10, in exchange for master Soviet spy Rudolf Abel.

The CIA statement said competent experts had studied Powers' description of his experiences when he and his plane were buffeted by an explosion at high altitude "and have concluded on the basis of scientific analysis that a U-2 plane damaged as he described would perform in its descent in about the manner he stated."

Stations Open After Seven In Toronto

TORONTO (CP)—For the first time in 14 years motorists can get gasoline directly from the pumps at Toronto service stations after 7 p.m.

Several service station operators Tuesday night took advantage of a decision by a committee of the Ontario legislature that the city's early-closing by-law for gasoline service stations is invalid.

The legislature's private bills committee based its decision on a Supreme Court ruling which found a similar bylaw in Ottawa invalid.

Police here said they have no instructions to take action against stations found open after 7 p.m.

Farewell Dinner Honors Staff Member

Last evening a surprise farewell dinner was held at Hotel Quinte in honor of Mrs. Mercy Wallace, of the decoration department of the Ontario Intelligencer by 16 of her co-worker friends.

Mrs. Follwell, who has been employed by the Intelligencer staff for nearly four years is leaving shortly to assume her new duties with the unemployment office of the Civil Service, here.

Following the invocation, and proceeding a most bounteous a-la-carte meal, Mrs. Eula Burley, mistress of ceremonies, proposed the toast to the guest of honor.

The dinner completed, a time of camaraderie was enjoyed around the long table, with girlish peals of laughter breaking forth at intervals, attesting to the delightful time.

Before a brief address, in which regret at Mercy's leaving and best wishes for success and happiness in her new vocation, was expressed, presentations of a beautiful, three-strand mara thoracelis, with matching earrings, on behalf of the decorating guests, and a heart-shaped gold container of her favorite perfume, were made by the social editor, Mercy feelingly expressed her appreciation, both for the gifts and for the good wishes which accompanied them.

Sudan Missions, Child Evangelism Topics at LMF

On March 1st, the L.M.F. of Parkdale Baptist Church met at the home of Mrs. Angus Hannah, Rossmore. There were 24 ladies present. Mrs. Snyder presided, opened the meeting with a welcome to all.

Following a period of choruses, the Scripture was read: Chronicles 12-22 was read.

During the business session a number of items on the agenda were successfully dealt with. Mrs. Snyder and Mrs. Bawlings will be the two ladies representing Parkdale Baptist Church at the World Day of Prayer on March 9th. Service to be held in the Presbyterian church at 3.00 p.m.

SUDAN INTERIOR MISSION

Mrs. Mitchell, missionary convener, chose the Sudan Interior Mission for her talk and gave a few highlights of the work of this organization. It was founded in 1893 by the Rev. R. Bingham, D.D., and has since spread all across the Continent, with more than 1,500 missionaries, a publishing house, a children's home, and armed forces' mission, a summer conference centre, its own language school, a great magazine, S.I.M. also has its own radio station ETWA, in Nigeria, with programs in 36 languages and over 100 taped broadcasts. ELWA not only covers the entire African continent but is heard also in the Middle East, Europe, behind the Iron Curtain and in lands 10,000 miles away.

Hudson Taylor, of the China Inlands Mission, testified that the only explanation of the remarkable history of the S.I.M. is found in Psalm 126:2, "the great source of power."

A short accounting of the evangelistic work of Dr. Jack Scott, a recent guest speaker at Parkdale Baptist church, was given by Mrs. H. Robinson. Mrs. Foster, devotional convener, introduced Miss Josephine Francis as the guest speaker for the devotional period.

CHILD EVANGELISM

Miss Francis, is the director of "Child Evangelism" in East Central Ontario. She told the ladies how the movement originated. It was started in the USA by a Mr. Overholtzer, in 1937 who believed that children could be led to Christ. Today, Child Evangelism has spread from U.S.A. to most of Canada, there are offices in every province excepting Alberta. The Maritimes are just now beginning to get interested in the idea. There are missionaries working with Child Evangelism in 80 countries and it is a movement which is rapidly expanding as its ideas and ideals are taught.

Miss Francis' devotional talk was based on the gospel of St. John 21:15-23. It is the account of Jesus telling Peter to feed his lambs.

Mrs. Foster read a poem entitled, "The Soul of a Child" and concluded this period.

An interesting highlight was provided when the ladies surprised Mrs. Charles Kemmer with a "Stork Shower".

A time of fellowship followed with refreshments being served by the hostess and her helpers.

The Experts Say
Publication So Popular Entire Run Is Exhausted

By EDNA BLAKELY

OTTAWA (CP) — The women's bureau of the federal labor department has come up with a "best seller."

It's a booklet entitled Vocational and Technical Training for Girls, offering suggestions on training at the high school, post - high school and trade school levels of education.

The publication proved so popular that the entire run of 5,000 copies has been exhausted. Requests for further copies poured in at such a rate that it was necessary to print a form letter turning them down.

Marion Royce, director of the women's bureau, hopes the booklet can be revised and published again later this year.

"It would seem from the response that this is the kind of information people need," she said.

Miss Royce stressed that the 45-page booklet is "a book on training, not employment possibilities."

MORE MARRIED WORKERS

In its foreword, she writes:

"The occupational world is changing constantly and at a rapid pace. New types of work that require special knowledge and skills are opening up. Even in familiar occupations like nursing, office work or teaching, requirements have altered and in many cases have become more exacting.

"The world of work holds challenge and opportunity for girls who are ready to get the necessary education and training. . . .

"For a long time it was taken for granted that a girl would give up her job on marriage, but nowadays there are more married than single women working for pay in Canada.

"The girl of today who takes a job is likely to continue in the labor force or, if she leaves it for family responsibilities, the chances are that she will return at a later stage in her life."

Later statistics show that approximately 40 per cent of the female labor force is married. This does not include widowed or divorced women.

HAS WIDE CHOICE

The booklet outlines more than 60 fields of work and lists the various courses available in all parts of Canada.

"It used to be that a girl had very little choice in deciding upon an occupation," Miss Royce writes. "She might be a teacher, a nurse or work in an office. Even now, many girls choose these familiar occupations. . . .

"However, when they are making decisions and selecting courses of study, it is important that they be introduced to the many new opportunities open women in the working world, not only in such traditional women's fields as health, welfare and education but also in areas of work less usual for women, for example, some of the occupations for technicians in industry.

"Too often a girl's choice is restricted because of not knowing what training facilities and opportunities are within her reach."

Therefore, the booklet devotes a chapter to skilled trades such as watchmaking, bookbinding, fur garment making, hotel administration and commercial photography.

Miss Royce urges women to "find work in a field in which one has adequate training and competence."

BC Woman Thinks She Is Heir to Large Fortune

Favored Fabric

DUNCAN, B.C. (CP) — For more than 40 years Mrs. Margaret Louisa Harte has been living with a dream—a dream that she is heir to an unclaimed $525,000,000.

The great - granddaughter of an Irish farmer whom she believes died of cholera before he could claim his fortune, she has been trying to piece together accounts of an incident in 1837.

She first heard of it from her father, the late John Joseph Eagleton, when he was a student at Cobourg, Ont. Mrs. Harte, in later years sought information from Scotland Yard, Canada House in London, the Lord Mayor of London and several private investigation firms.

Mrs. Harte says the name of a ship which left Dublin for Australia to Southern Ireland or the name of a bank in Liverpool, England, could be the answers to the puzzle.

It started in 1837 when Michael David Daniel O'Keefe was sent to Tasmania for alleged theft. He was subsequently found innocent, set free and in his wanderings discovered a gold mine.

SENT GOLD BARS

The story goes that Michael sent back to his nephew Michael Patrick O'Keefe in County Waterford, Ireland, bars of gold which at that time were worth £20,000 each.

However, the skipper, reaching the coast of Dungarvan Bay, was told there was a cholera epidemic ashore. He sailed instead for Liverpool, where it is believed a lawyer put the gold in a bank and told Mrs. Harte's great-grandfather to come and claim it.

Mr. O'Keefe went to Liverpool but all banks were closed because of the epidemic.

"He went back to Ireland where he and his family except a daughter died of cholera," said Mrs. Harte, who is now in her late 60s. "Horrified by the epidemic, the 16-year-old Katherine O'Keefe left her homeland by Canada.

She married Francis Eagleton in Quebec.

Mrs. Harte recalls that in 1855 her father read an advertisement in a Winnipeg newspaper which asked descendants of Michael O'Keefe to claim the money.

DEMANDED MONEY

Mrs. Harte's grandmother consulted a notary public in Lindsay, Ont., but the same mysterious reason the letter she received in reply demanded she put a sum of a few dollars to that of the gold in a bank at Lindsay.

Mrs. Harte's father's story, she recalls today, mentioned a similar letter which had been sent to her great - grandfather in Ireland.

The letter was proof to legal right to the gold, she said.

Another O'Keefe, a first cousin of Mrs. Harte's grandfather, founded a brewery in Toronto.

Since 1890 the direct descendant of Michael O'Keefe and the heiress to the fortune has been living on the west coast. Only Mrs. Harte's daughter and grandchildren are left to share the money.

Although the gold was worth £20,000,000 at the time, she believes it has since increased its value 10 times.

SPEAKING of MANNERS

PATRICIA LEWIS

DON'T FLAUNT YOUR KNOWLEDGE

Do you have a head for facts and figures?

If so, you're a wise person if you know how to keep that special knowledge within bounds. The human encyclopedia can get himself into bad social trouble and often does.

Something frequently happens to a person whose head is full of miscellaneous and unclassified information, such as the date of the founding of the Second Ming Dynasty.

He remembers it as unconnectedly urge to straighten out all other people, even if you have to twist their necks to make them face the facts.

Here's the way it goes:

First Person: "We were driving down the highway in this terrible snow storm when our car skidded into the opposite lane."

Second Person: "Yes, it was awful. Then we got about three inches of snow."

You: "No, it was four and one-half inches. I remember reading about it in the paper."

Second person: "Some local paper said it was three inches."

You: "That was two nights later. And it was actually three and three-quarters inches."

First Person: "Well, just then another car came from nowhere . . ."

You: "The temperature was 31. There was rain mixed with sleet and a quarter inch of ice underneath. I remember that real snow storm of 1948."

First Person: ". . . and smashed into the side of our car . . ."

You: "Fourteen inches of snow fell in less than two hours."

First Person (who couldn't care less): ". . . and we were all killed."

You: "Up in New England, they don't get 3½ snow unless there's three feet of it on the ground."

First Person and Second Person, thereafter, will think twice before asking to you about any subject that might contain facts.

One hostess I know invites a fact-filled friend to her home only when there are no other guests around. She's fascinated by the array of information on almost any subject, yet she admits that her interest in him is academic because few if any others care to cultivate.

I think it's perfectly good manners to correct someone who misrepresents a situation but there's a glaring mistake in a statement. But there are ways of doing it tactfully, without being a nuisance and without spoiling your own enjoyment.

As the saying goes, a little knowledge goes a long way. But sometimes a lot of knowledge will get you nowhere, socially speaking.

THE FAMILY COUNCIL

Mark S. — I need my hi-fi equipment more than the kids need their toys.

Eleanor S. — He's too much a child to be left with. I shouldn't deprive the kids.

Mark S. — I get home really beat from my day in the competitive department store. I work for. I'm a family breadwinner. Then in the evening I want to be unwind, stretched out with a long drink and listening to my hi-fi recordings or FM-radio. But that's when the children's TV programs rule the roost. And my wife thinks I'm a brute to ask the kids to turn off that junk.

Eleanor S. — Mark is a man of his castle, but it's my torture-chamber. Because our living room is so small, we keep the recordplayer and TV in the den. There's no reason why the kids can't be taught to take turns with me in the use of that. They can tune in all they want when I'm not home. They have all afternoon to watch. Eleanor Boone and Mark Trail, for entertainment I'm entitled to.

Mark S. — I'm a real hi-fi addict. He runs to his music-room, the program is then set for Yogi Bear at 6:30, and the older ones come in following their favorites, the 7 o'clock cartoons, and the adventure stuff. Then there's always a big to-do, with Mark charging at the kid to have the den to himself.

Why can't he cool his heels until then, or go to the living room while I prepare dinner for the family? It has the whole weekend to wallow in his music.

The Council: If a man's home is his castle, then naturally he is the "queen" who rules there. But as king, Mark, your first thought must be of the rights of your subjects and as Shaw also, leaves you pretty much alone. Where you should be ready that den looking in! So let's see what changes, with Eleanor's cooperation, could be wrought inside the castle to offset the "cure" long enough to work out more democratic ways of obtaining it.

Dinner Party Held on 25th Anniversary

WELLINGTON — A most enjoyable dinner party was held at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Bernard Reed in honor of their 25th wedding anniversary.

The party was arranged by their daughters, Mrs. Del Galvin of Toronto and Miss Eleanor Reed, at home. The rooms were most attractive, decorated with pink and white streamers and many lovely flowers. A beautifully decorated anniversary cake, flanked by silver candelabra with pink candles was the centre of attraction on the dining room table.

The honored guests received many lovely gifts, including a set of silverware, a gift from their family.

Guests were present from Toronto, Whitby, Picton, Bloomfield and Wellington.

Foxboro WI Sponsors Euchre Party

Recently a most successful euchre party, sponsored by the Foxboro Women's Institute was held in the school auditorium. A good crowd, making up (11) tables, was in attendance.

Prizes were won by the following people: Mrs. C. Bamber, high; Dawn Thomas, low; C. Cassidy, high; Allen Johnston, low; W. Johnston, traveling lone hands.

This time, as a change, a prize was given each man and each lady of the couple and were "skunked" first. This prize was won by Dawn Thomas and Allen Johnston.

The next euchre party, (held every two weeks) will be held on Wednesday with Historical Research group of the Institute in charge.

CHRIST CHURCH A.B.W.A.

The March business meeting of the Afternoon Branch Woman's Auxiliary of Christ Church, Belleville, was well attended. The president, Mrs. H. Pitt presided. Mrs. J. Wright was pianist.

The treasurer's report was most gratifying.

As the "Pledge" is the first collection of every W.A. member, the members voted to honor the payment in full and also other obligations. Money was also voted to the Canadian Hospital Appeal (to Pangnirtung). This was discussed by Miss E. Golden, Diocesan Dorcas secretary.

The recent W.A. tea was successful socially and financially and the gratifying result reflects much credit to the conveners, Mrs. G. O'Brien and Mrs. R. Golden and all the others who contributed to a successful afternoon.

Mrs. G. G. Wright, educational secretary, introduced and discussed the new study book, "Collectors Items" — a fresh look at the collects by the Very Rev. Nordbeck, Dr. Burke, D.D.

The World Day of Prayer Service will be held at St. Andrew's Church at 3 p.m., March 9th. This service will be followed by Christian Women in 146 countries and the theme will be "God's Love for the Whole World." All are urged to attend.

After the meeting closed, refreshments, provided by Mrs. M. T. Campbell, were enjoyed by all.

CHILDREN DROWNED

DOVER, Del. (AP) — Five children, members of the same family, drowned Tuesday as they tried to flee the flooded shoreline of Delaware Bay. A sixth was missing and presumed drowned. All were members of the John Waters family of Bowers Beach, about 10 miles southeast of Dover.

Young Couple Recipients of Many Gifts

WELLINGTON — On Saturday evening about 50 friends and old neighbors from Swamp College gathered at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Baden Alves, to honor their daughter and husband, Mr. and Mrs. Bob Johnston, with a miscellaneous shower.

A social time was spent, after which Mrs. Allan Pettingell read a suitable address to the honored couple. The Misses Kathy Alves and Susan Pettingell carried in a basket filled many times with pretty and useful gifts which were presented to the newlyweds.

After Karen and Bob had opened all the gifts they both voiced their appreciation for the kindness shown them.

Mrs. John Watt, Mrs. Allan Pettingell and Mrs. Andrew Allison, the sponsors of the party, served delicious refreshments.

Marilyn Sherwood of Nelson High School in Burlington, winner of first prize, holds her championship cherry pie and the coveted trophy presented each year. Mary Moore, one of the judges, gives the recipe today, exactly as it was submitted and followed by Marilyn.

Canadian Gastronaut First Prize Winner In Cherry Pie Contest

by Mary Moore

Dr. R. K. Larmour of Maple Leaf Milling Company made the presentation of a handsome cheque to Marilyn Sherwood of Nelson High School in Burlington. Since the National Bakeoff took place on the same day as Astronaut Colonel Glenn's Takeoff into space, he aptly named her Canadian Gastronaut.

Besides being a good baker Marilyn is beautiful and thoughtful too for she asked the chairman to bring her Home Economics teacher, Shirley Cumming, to the platform to share the kudos.

Here is the recipe for the Cherry Pie that won the National championship exactly as Marilyn gave it.

Pastry: 2¼ cups sifted cake and pastry flour, 1 teaspoon salt, ¾ cup shortening, 5-6 tablespoons ice water.

Method: Sift and measure the flour. Add salt and sift into mixing bowl. With pastry blender cut in one-half of the shortening until it is the size of cornmeal. Cut in remainder until particles are size of peas. Sprinkle mixture with water, a tablespoon at a time, mixing lightly with a fork and adding only enough to moisten all the flour. Put dough on wax paper and press into a ball. Chill while preparing filling. Roll out approximately two-thirds of this dough for the bottom crust of the pie. Roll out the remainder and cut into strips and leaves for the top. Pour filling into pastry lined pan. Cover with a lattice top.

Filling: 2½ cups frozen cherries (thawed and drained), ¾ cup cherry juice, 3 tablespoons cornstarch, ¾ cup cherry juice, ¾ cup white sugar, ¼ teaspoon almond extract, ¼ teaspoon lemon extract, ⅛ teaspoon salt, 2 tablespoons butter, red food coloring.

Method: Drain cherries, heat ¾ cup of juice. Mix cornstarch with ¼ cup cold juice. Add to heated juice and cook until thick. Add sugar slowly, to hot mixture and just let come to boil. Remove from heat and add lemon extract, almond extract, salt, butter and suitable amount of food coloring.

Successful Living

(A Canadian Social Worker Helps with Human Problems)

To Move or Not to Move

DORIS CLARK

DEAR DORIS:—My sister, a recent widow, would like my husband and me to move to her city, to be near her. I am unhappy because she is so lonesome. But my husband will not buy a house in the city; he says we can all live in her home. She thinks otherwise.

Alternative—My sister could live with us and rent her home, but my husband and I do not get along. He is stubborn and miserly, so I was forced to work and assume all financial obligations. Our social life is non-existent.

Another Alternative—I could leave my husband. In that case I would lose financially as he has banked his money.

Or else—I could get work for one year in the city and if I liked it, maybe we could get him to come.—BEWILDERED.

DEAR BEWILDERED—I'm bewildered too. How did this switch about money happen? Does he bank all he earns? Does he plan to "take it with him?"

Your letter leads me to think you two have no reason for continuing to live together—unless you are thinking about the bank account. If so, take comfort in the fact that a wife has dower rights to one-third of the estate when the other half dies, anyway.

I believe I favor the "or else" proposition. This would give you a chance to see how you like city life with your sister. And to see whether Hubby could indeed weather it alone.

DEAR DORIS:—I am 14 and so is my boy friend. We like each other very much, but there is only one trouble. My parents don't like him. They say they have heard things about him from their friends.

My boy friend says they are not true and I believe him. My parents also think I am too young to go out with boys. What do you think?—TROUBLED.

DEAR TROUBLED—Parents have a way of being right about such things. If they don't like the boy, you had better not date him for a while.

As for whether you should be going out with boys at all, I would say that mixed parties are O.K., but individual dates are not good—yet.

Wesley UCW Donates $100 For Oil Burner

The regular group meeting of the United Church Women of Wesley United Church was held at the home of Mrs. H. Rutter with a good attendance.

Mrs. Stewart opened the meeting with a meditation on Faith. Mrs. Meyers took charge of the devotional period which was based on "True Brotherhood." The Bible reading was given by Mrs. Rutter and Mrs. Meyers read a poem, "Not Lost" and led in prayer.

The president presided over the business meeting. The treasurer reported a good amount on hand.

It was decided to donate $100 to the board to help purchase a new oil burner and $20 to the flower and card fund.

Mrs. Rutter gave the group a lovely quilt top made by her sisters.

An invitation from Centenary Church to attend the "World Day of Prayer," was read.

Mrs. Crosbie read a "Japanese Story" from the study book.

The ladies are holding a pot-luck supper in the church this month. The next meeting is to be here at Mrs. R. Baker's on March 27th. After closing the meeting an auction sale, followed with Mrs. Carter as auctioneer. The proceeds amounted to $14.75.

A social half hour was spent with the hostess serving coffee and cake.

Justice C. H. Locke Retires From Supreme Court in Sept.

By JOHN E. BIRD

OTTAWA (CP) — Mr. Justice Charles Holland Locke will retire from the Supreme Court of Canada in September after a distinguished 15-year term as a member of Canada's highest court.

The former Winnipeg and Vancouver lawyer will reach the compulsory retirement age of 75 for Supreme Court judges on Sept. 18. His successor likely will be named before the opening of the court's 1962 fall sitting Oct. 2.

Mr. Justice Locke will retire on pension. However, he does not plan to remain inactive and likely will practise law in a consultative capacity in Vancouver.

A quiet-spoken expert in common law, Mr. Justice Locke has been a member of the court during a period in which it has made many major and binding decisions that will govern future Canadian law.

ASKED TO WITHDRAW

Mr. Justice Locke and his colleagues are probably as little known as any major public figures in Canada. The nature of their work as members of a court of last resort make it necessary for them to remain out of the public limelight.

However, in November, 1957, Mr. Justice Locke bounced into the headlines through no fault of his own.

The late Lewis Duncan of Toronto, appearing before the court as counsel in a will case, asked that Mr. Justice Locke be excluded from a bench of five judges hearing the action. Mr. Duncan said he made the motion because he felt that in past years Mr. Justice Locke had entertained antipathy toward him.

The court rejected Mr. Duncan's motion, but Mr. Justice Locke withdrew voluntarily.

Mr Duncan was fined $2,000 for contempt of court and was ordered to apologize unreservedly in open court before he would be allowed to appear before it again. He paid the fine but did not apologize before his death in Toronto.

APPOINTED IN 1947

Mr. Justice Locke is one of three Supreme Court judges who served before the court became "supreme" in fact as well as in name.

He was appointed June 3, 1947, more than two years before Parliament abolished appeals to the judicial committee of the Privy Council in London. The two other judges who served prior to this Dec. 22, 1949, event are Chief Justice Patrick Kerwin and Mr. Justice Robert Taschereau.

Chief Justice Kerwin, a member of the court since July, 1935, is 72 and will retire Oct. 25, 1964, his 75th birthday. Mr. Justice Taschereau, appointed to the court in February, 1940, reaches retirement age Sept. 10, 1971.

Since his appointment to the court, Mr. Justice Locke has taken a special interest in cases from Western Canada. He has sat on the vast majority of Western cases heard by the court in the last 15 years.

TO RETIRE FROM BENCH — Mr. Justice Charles Holland Locke, a member of the Supreme Court of Canada for 15 years, retires in September at the age of 75. A former Winnipeg and Vancouver lawyer, he was born at Morden, Man., and is a veteran of the First World War. While on the bench he specialized in cases from Western Canada. (CP Photo from NFB).

this period ruled that sale of margarine is legal in Canada, that the Quebec padlock law was unconstitutional, that the Canadian Wheat Board's powers made it the sole marketing agency for Western wheat, oats and barley, and that unions are legal entities which can be sued.

Mr. Justice Locke was born at Morden, Man., son of the late Corbet Locke, judge of the county court of the southern judicial district of Manitoba. He was called to the Manitoba bar in 1910 and served overseas in the First World War with the 61st Battery of the Canadian Field Artillery. He was awarded the Military Cross.

After the war, he practised law in Winnipeg until 1928 when he moved to Vancouver. He was treasurer of the Law Society of British Columbia in 1944-45.

HOW WOULD YOU CHOOSE BETWEEN THEM?

The CARAT WEIGHT of these two diamonds is the same. Neither has visible imperfections . . . yet the actual value differs widely in each gem.

The degree of CLARITY is one of the qualities which determines the worth of any diamond. There are more than a dozen categories of perfection which separate the flawless, "perfect" diamond from the stone with inclusions — even if these are invisible to the naked eye.

CUTTING — its accuracy and style — controls the brilliance of a stone and greatly affects its value.

The traditional color of a diamond is called white, or colorless. Tinges of brown or yellow, which devalue from this standard, decrease the worth of a stone.

COMPARE BEFORE YOU BUY

Come in and let us explain the difference, the time will be well spent if you are considering the purchase of a diamond. Terms of course.

General Election Could Wipe Out Calls for Two Byelections on Sept. 10

OTTAWA (CP) — Federal byelections in two ridings in Ontario and Quebec have been called for Sept. 10—though a general election call could wash them out.

Prime Minister Diefenbaker announced the date in the Commons Tuesday for voting in Waterloo South and Nicolet-Yamaska, both formerly held by Progressive Conservatives.

The choice of Sept. 10 caught a lot of Parliament Hill observers flat-footed. They had been speculating that Mr. Diefenbaker would set a June byelection date in these ridings to test the political climate in the two vital provinces with an eye to an autumn general election.

The latest twist left some of them wondering if the prime minister may be eyeing Monday, Sept. 30 for the big vote.

The two byelections will be held only if the 54th Parliament is not dissolved before then.

They would fill vacancies left by the death of William Anderson, member for Ontario's Waterloo South, in his Commons office last June and the resignation of Mines Minister Paul Comtois following his appointment as lieutenant-governor of Quebec Oct. 6.

The two ridings are mainly rural and agricultural.

Nicolet-Yamaska is in the Eastern Townships region of Quebec about 50 miles northeast of Montreal and had a population in the 1961 census of 44,248 centring on the town of Nicolet.

Waterloo South lies just south of Kitchener with Galt as its principal centre. The riding had a 1961 population of 47,641.

The byelections would fill two of three vacant seats in the Commons. The third is Marshenia River which was held by Liberal Mervyn Hardis before his death from cancer Oct. 18.

Mr. Diefenbaker told the Commons there will be no byelection in Mackenzie River until Parliament decides on a private members bill now before it which would add 4,000 voters in Keewatin and Fraudin districts to the sub-Arctic riding.

Liberal party sources look upon the byelection contest as real tests of strength. Waterloo South is a traditionally Conservative seat, won only once since 1900 by a Liberal. Mr. Anderson won it in 1958 with a 9,331-vote margin over two opponents.

Nicolet - Yamaska has a predominantly Liberal record but elected Mr. Comtois in 1958 by Mr. Comtois with 11,680 votes to his Liberal opponent's 7,219.

Speculation on an early general election was rampant last month when an immediate call could have brought on pre-Easter voting. It now is believed Mr. Diefenbaker will not issue the call before late April since the Easter holiday would interrupt the normal seven-week campaign.

A post-Easter call could bring no voting in June. If it is not held then, the summer vacation period when many voters are away from their home constituencies probably would make an autumn election more desirable.

Present standing in the 265-seat House is progressive Conservatives 202; Liberals 51; CCF-New Democratic Party 8; vacant 3.

Mother of Four Contends Catholic Church Broke up Marriage, Seeks $2,375,000

MINEOLA, N.Y. (AP) — An attractive blonde mother of four young daughters sued the Roman Catholic Church Tuesday for $2,375,000 damages. She contends the church broke up her marriage to a priest and is keeping them apart.

The suit was filed in State Supreme Court here by Mineola lawyer Mrs. Alice Ryan, 41, of Glen Cove, N.Y. She identified her husband as Walter Ryan, 51, former assistant pastor of the Glen Cove, N.Y., Catholic church.

Defendants include, in addition to the church, Francis Cardinal Spellman, Archbishop of New York, and the diocese of Brooklyn, Rockville Centre, Springfield, Mass., Worcester, Mass., San Francisco and Los Angeles.

A spokesman for the New York diocese declined comment.

Mrs. Ryan said in her complaint that she and Father Ryan were married secretly in Maryland in 1960, after which he left the church and worked briefly as a salesman in Fort Lauderdale, N.Y., where they bought a home.

CLAIMS ABDUCTION

She said her husband was abducted from their home April 1, 1965, "with force by means and aid of intoxicating beverages and liquors."

Mrs. Ryan said her husband returned May 15, 1966, and that "within 12 hours thereafter the defendants—except San Francisco, Los Angeles and Rockville Centre dioceses — again removed or caused to be removed Father Ryan."

Her suit contends, the defendants have since caused him to be located in monasteries with full knowledge of the marriage and the facts of the marriage. These acts were performed without his approval, consent, free will and wish of Father Ryan.

She said she had been unable to see him, that the defendants have refused to tell her where about, and that "she has been deprived of receiving proper support and maintenance and has been a public charge."

Mrs. Ryan said suit asks $375,000 for exemplary and punitive damages for herself and $500,000 each for her children—Teresa, 10, Alicia, 9, Donna Maria, 8, and Mary, 5.

The various dioceses were named defendants because Mrs. Ryan contends they are their members figured in the case.

Ship Returns From Havana, No Tobacco

TAMPA, Fla. (AP)—The motor ship Tropic Sea is back from Havana, but without its usual cargo: Tobacco.

W. M. Trader Lykes, which operates the motor vessel on a regular run between Tampa and Havana, said it did not take a tobacco in Havana because the foreign assets control division in Washington has threatened to seize ships bringing Cuban tobacco into the United States.

The Tropic Sea's empty hold was only one symptom of the effect the embargo is having in Tampa.

L. J. Shebel, manager of the local state employment service office, estimated that 80 cigar workers will be claiming jobless pay for today.

The Tampa cigar industry rests on a foundation of Cuban tobacco.

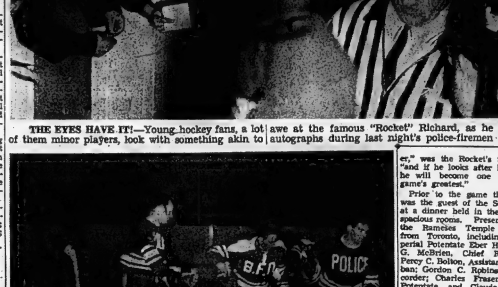
"Since the trade was cut off, cigar manufacturers have been looking for an acceptable substitute for what they call the irreplaceable Cuban leaf.

Exiled Cuban tobacco growers were reported grown a big test crops on non-Caribbean islands using Cuban seed.

Convict Found Inside Walls At Kingston

KINGSTON (CP)—A 1½-hour search of Kingston Penitentiary ended when a convict was where it started — inside the walls.

Prison authorities started their normal search routine after noticing that inside the 50-foot-high walls when Roger Robert Gerard, 24, was missing after roll call.



After checking all likely hiding places, Assistant Warden E. C. Atkins said:

"We're reasonably certain he's outside the walls."

Almost at the same time he was making this statement in the administration building across from the penitentiary a search crew flushed the convict from his hiding place inside the walls.

Within a minute the outside search was called off.

Sayard of Ville St. Michele, Que., was sentenced last March to 25 years in prison on 12 charges of armed robbery and assault.

'The Rocket' Presents 'McNevin Trophy' To Steven Moore Before Packed Arena

By GEO. H. CARVER
Sports Editor

There's nothing wrong with hockey hereabouts that a famous puck personality cannot cure.

Last night Memorial Arena bulged with its estimated 3,200 people of all sizes, ages and vintages.

Manager Jack Dickens estimated that some 500 were turned away.

Inside, the cynosure of thousands of eyes was Maurice "Rocket" Richard, the famous star of the Montreal Canadiens in the National Hockey League door of good will for the organization.

The "Old Lady of Market Street" hasn't been so many people since the balcony beckoned Farley Boys days at the CNR Diesels and Northern Electric teams.

The "Rocket," brought here by the Belleville and District Shrine Club, officiated at the annual hockey game between the city fire and police departments.

Shrine officials and members of the police and fire departments said that some 8,000 tickets were sold. All that were printed up to Monday night had found their way into the pockets of the "customers."

The amount that will go to the Shrine Club's Crippled Children Fund was not ascertained last night. A rough guess puts the figure at $3,000.

PRESENTATION FEATURE

One of the feature attractions of the evening was the presentation of the "Tommy McNevin Memorial Trophy" to ten-year-old Steven Moore, son of Mr. and Mrs. John Moore, of 40 Bongard Crescent.

The shining-eyed young champion picked from twelve other champions of the Belleville Minor Hockey Association Squirt Division, styly accepted the trophy and the accompanying miniature which will be his permanent possession. He is a member of Coach Harvey Dumas' Boston Prince of Wales school.

"This fine trophy is a tribute to the memory of a gallant young hockey player," said the Rocket prior to the presentation.

"It is given to the young fellow who exceeds in hockey, education and music appreciation. I am proud to present it to Steven with the sincere wish that his hockey and school life may be always successful."

The arena echoed and re-echoed to a rolling roar of acclaim. Excited youngsters, and there were literally thousands of them, cheered the young champion and the Rocket to the rafters.

Paper littered the ice, almost frenzied mopeds shouted their appreciation. Later some 23 of the luckier youngsters took home hockey sticks autographed by members of the National Hockey League clubs.

They almost mobbed the famous guest who signed hundreds of autographs during the Bruins team and a student at period intermission.

The "Rocket" was introduced from ringside by Jack Twomey, Way of Tweed, president of the Shrine Club.

The hockey "great" was brought here by the Shrine Club through the courtesy of the Montreal Canadiens' Hockey Club and its general manager, Mr. Frank Selke senior.

He arrived in the city shortly after noon Tuesday and, when he enforced a minor hockey game and took part in an ice show before 1,500 people.

GIVEN RECEPTION

After lunch the "Rocket" was taken to the Corby Distillery where a reception was held in the well-appointed lounge. Assistant distillery manager Shirmer George "Mickey" MacDonald proved a fine host. Distillery manager, Mr. Wilfrid Laporte was unable to be present due to illness.

Mr. Twomey, Shrine president Way and committee chairman Nobles Ralph Plumpton, Jack Allin, Tom Lewis, Dave Stephenson, Jack Both and others beside members of the press, radio and recreation commission.

Later the "Rocket" taped a radio interview with Jack Devine at Station CJBQ.

A number of young ladies of the Corbyville business office staff were introduced to the "Rocket." Included was Miss Carolyn Hull, sister of the Chicago Black Hawks' star, Bobby.

VERBAL BYPLAY

There was some amusing verbal byplay between Richard and Miss Hull.

"I don't think your brother will break my record," said the hockey star, eyes twinkling.

"I know he will," said Miss Hull, smiling.

"He is a great hockey player, was the Rocket's tribute, "and if he looks after himself he will become one of the game's greatest."

Prior to the game the star was the guest of the Shriners at a dinner held in the club's spacious rooms. Present were the Bamboos Belleville divers from Toronto, including Imperial Potentate Noor Hall, Ed G. McBrien, Chief Rabbany Percy C. Bolton, Assistant Rabbany Gordon D. Robinson, recorder; Charles Fraser, Past Potentate, and Claude Kaye-smith, aide.

President Way presided at the dinner, welcoming the distinguished guests. The Imperial Potentate spoke briefly praying Belleville and Belleville club's efforts for the crippled kiddies.

The Rocket left for Montreal immediately following the game. He will spend a two-day vacation in Puerto Rico.

In the hockey part of the evening, the long arm of the law had a little too much reach for the Firefighters and the Police walked off with a 4-2 victory.

The Firemen, led by fan-favorite Fred "Soupy" Smith, put up a game fight all the way however. They trailed 2-1 at the end of the first period and neither team scored in the second.

Early in the third, Lyle Wannamaker took a pass from Reg Christopher and tied the score 2-2.

Barry Titterson, shining light on the Police squad, scored the game-winning goal on a rink-length rush at 5:44 and added his second goal with Al Larocque assisting, to make it 4-2 at the gun.

Back in the first period, the winners jumped into a 2-0 lead on goals by Don Martin, with Titterson assisting and Jack Ebbes, on a pretty tactical play with Chuck Peters.

Referee Sandy Shiells who drew cheers every time he stepped on the ice for the firefighters put his club back in the bag when he scored on a play with Titterson and Ebbes assisting.

Both clubs went all out from start to finish. Coach Police Bill Stephenson, of the Police and A. L. Vance, of the losers, both coached as some excellent saves.

While the "Rocket" was dishing out nine penalties, including five to Firemen, of which Smith got two, Firemen Don "Bruno" McCurdy and Ted Hurst were busy trying to separate the hockey battlers, when tempers came close to erupting several times.

The boys parted best friends however and should have been mighty proud of a job well done.

A party of clowns entertained the large crowd between periods. Included were Messrs. Don Foster, Jim Irwin, Brian and Mike Smith, Bernard Boulier, Ted Wessells and Harold Poole.

Tom Hastings and Prime Edward Regimental Band rendered selections with "Red" and uniforms played during the evening and received a fine ovation.

Sold Sick, Crippled Cows To Slaughter House Says Dead Animal Collector

EASTVIEW, Ont. (CP) — A licensed dead animal collector testified Tuesday he sold dead, sick and crippled cows to a slaughter house at St. Onge, Ont.

Charles Woods of Mountain Station, Ont., was testifying at the preliminary hearing of Germain Menard, 45, and his sons Regent, 26, and Jean Paul, 23, on a charge of selling meat from dead animals as food.

Mr. Woods, who said he sold the animals to a slaughter house operated by the Menards, was asked if he had misled the Menards into believing the cows had been properly slaughtered and bled.

"It was dead stuff, sick stuff, crippled stuff," the witness testified. "(Menard) knew what we were handling."

Mr. Woods said he picked up one cow for $10 from a dairy farmer and sold it to the Menards for $40.

Another cow, killed by a train, was bought for $10 and sold to the Menards for $40, Mr. Woods said.

Another Licenced dead animal collector, Howard Adams of Kemptville, Ont., testified he purchased a dead cow Oct. 4 from a district farmer, for $20 and later sold it to the Menards for $40.

He said the Menards had not indicated what they intended to do with the meat.

The hearing was adjourned to next Tuesday.

Earlier, Dr. George McEwan, a federal health department chemist, testified how a chemical was used to trace meat from an old cow to a packing plant in this Ottawa suburb.

Dr. McEwan said that last October he and a veterinarian injected a substance known as napshibonic acid into an old cow on a district farm. The cow was then killed by an overdose of nembutal. He said the acid has fluorescent properties which show up in animal tissues under ultra-violet light.

Dr. McEwan said that 17 days later, RCMP officers seized some meat from Kipp Brother Packing Plant here and parts of the meat were found to contain napshibonic acid.

Two district farmers also testified that a man identified as Charles Woods had obtained dead cows from them.

Roland Sheridan of North Gower said he gave Woods a dead cow which had died of mastitis which had turned to gangrene.

Farmer Bud Malloy of Inkerman said Woods bought a cow which had died while giving birth to a calf.

"She was deader than stone when Charlie picked her up," Mr. Malloy said. "I got $10 for her instead of digging a hole and it was a lot easier."

Sales Tax Costing Sask. Business Legislature Told

By THE CANADIAN PRESS

Business in Saskatchewan towns near the Manitoba border has dropped as much as 50 per cent since last December, a Liberal backbencher told the Saskatchewan legislature Tuesday.

Bernard Gallagher (L—Yorkton) blamed the drop on the increase in Saskatchewan's sales tax to five from three per cent Jan. 1. Manitoba has no sales tax.

Mr. Gallagher suggested Provincial Treasurer A. E. Blakeney make a trip to border towns himself to see how business has declined.

In the hockey part of the game, which was played earlier in the evening, the long arm of the law had a little too much reach for the Firefighters and the Police walked off with a 4-2 victory.

OTTAWA (CP) — Government officials, relatives and residents of Ottawa sat side by side Tuesday at a crowded funeral service for the late Senator Carline Wilson (L — Ontario), who died suddenly Saturday following complications from a hip fracture last spring.

Business in Saskatchewan towns near the Manitoba border has dropped as much as 50 per cent since last December, a Liberal backbencher told the Saskatchewan legislature Tuesday.

Bernard Gallagher (L—Yorkton) blamed the drop on the increase in Saskatchewan's sales tax to five from three per cent Jan. 1. Manitoba has no sales tax.

Mr. Gallagher suggested Provincial Treasurer A. E. Blakeney make a trip to border towns himself to see how business has declined.

On any Saturday, he said, the streets of Calder, Sask., are almost bare while in neighboring Rolnik, Man., "you can't find a parking place."

He said as a result of the tax policies a "liberal border" had been built around the province. Between 1962-66 Saskatchewan's beloved something was wrong with its economy.

"This border is going to engulf the government when they next go to the polls," Liberal MLA predicted.

The increase in the Saskatchewan sales tax was brought about to help pay the cost of the province's medical - care insurance program, which goes into effect July 1.

Developments in other provincial houses:

Victoria — Attorney-general Robert Bonner repeated earlier statements that if necessary British Columbia could develop the Columbia River without an international treaty. "We are not thinking of doing anything contrary to the laws of this country," he said, "but simple precedence exists that Canada and the United States could come together in other ways."

Toronto—Ross Whicher, Liberal financial critic, accused the Conservative government of using phoney bookkeeping in its budgetary estimates, concealing years of mounting deficits behind reports on nominal surpluses.

Regina — Premier Ross Thatcher in tabling record budget estimates totalling $302,289,778 for the 1967-68 fiscal year repeated demands for new federal-provincial fiscal arrangements.

Fredericton — Provincial Treasurer Hatfield, Secretary in tables accompanying his budget speech, also indicated New Brunswick will set aside $50,000 for alcohol education and rehabilitation in 1968-69.

Britain Gently Prods U.S. Toward Summit Meeting

By HAROLD MORRISON
Canadian Press Staff Writer

Seeking the road of compromise, Britain is gently prodding United States towards the summit in a series of subtle moves that leaves the U.S. no alternative but to agree or risk the appearance of an Anglo-American split on points of minor issue.

The sum of these moves, together with Premier Kosygin's agreement to send Foreign Minister Gromyko to the Geneva opening of 17-country disarmament negotiations, is that an East-West summit is almost certain to take place, perhaps this year, even if little progress is made in disarmament talks.

President Kennedy has long maintained there should be no summit meeting unless there is indication of success through progress in the diplomatic valley. Gradually, he modified his view in recent months, to the point where he indicated his willingness to attend a summit meeting before June if this would help to avert the nuclear test-ban treaty could be completed ready for signature, or if world leaders could resolve "explicit points of disagreement."

In each step, Prime Minister Macmillan has taken a low approach in different worlds, and it soon was obvious to American authorities Macmillan each time went a little further than Kennedy.

Some American authorities were privately irritated with how one American commentator described as "one, again and again" British attempts to get president toward a new summit." But they said nothing.

The one subtlest came when London dispatches, which appeared inspired by the British government, suggested a test-ban agreement could be concluded without need for inspection and control in Russia because of new scientific improvements in U.S. detection. Disarmament chief William Foster, however, insisted on maintaining more—not less—inspection would be required.

British officials then revealed retreated a bit by agreeing some inspection might be necessary until a worldwide system of control posts is established, but the increase would be temporary.

The Anglo-American governments are reported still at loggerheads on how to handle the American view that inspection must also cover the possibility of digging a hole and preparing another series of nuclear tests.

The American officials already have concluded Britain is more interested in a summit than the U.S. and will try by every means possible to bring this about. They are most likely to risk an open split with Macmillan when they feel that when he needs all the international support he can get to offset criticism of his decision to resume nuclear tests in the atmosphere.

Anything New in Art Field Often Offensive to Lookers, But They Get Used to It

By BO STROMBERG

VANCOUVER (CP) — Anything new in art often is offensive to an onlooker until it becomes accustomed to it, says Lawren Harris, famed Canadian painter and a prime leader of the Group of Seven.

"As a matter of fact, all art is a series of reactions both from artist to painter and onlooker. The impressionist style of the Group of Seven produced violent reactions at first, then gradually people became accustomed to it and it was accepted.

"The same trend existed when abstracts first appeared. Even among artists there was violent reaction because no two people react alike to a painting.

"Modern painting allows an artist to express any subject. Often it is a turmoil of colors, but when features are painted out and the connection related it can be understood."

Harris, 77, and still the acknowledged leader of Canada's coterie of modernistic artists, has not let age interfere with his search for new means of expression in art. Neither has it diminished the rebel qualities that have often made him a centre of controversy.

SEEKS NEW FIELDS

Lawren Harris, 76-year-old impressionist painter, and member of the Group of Seven, is still seeking new fields of artistic expression. Born in Brantford, Ont., Harris studied art in Europe, worked in New York for a year, then returned to Toronto where he began painting street scenes and slum houses. He now lives in Vancouver with wife Bess, also a painter. (CP Photo).

SEEKS NEW FIELDS

At an age when most men stop to reflect on past accomplishments, Harris continues to seek new fields of artistic expression.

"My work has gone beyond abstractions. There's no way of telling what the next step is. When I begin a work today I have no idea what the finished product will look like until I'm almost finished.

"The key is design. You relate colors and gradually the subject or thing develops."

An assiduous painter, usually on a large scale, Harris works in a large, bright den on the ground floor of his two-storey home in the university district. In appearance he is distinctive and impressive, with a mass of white hair.

His residence sits on a hillside overlooking English Bay. A high bedge blocks the view to the road beneath, but cuts out across the bay.

Inside, numerous paintings by Harris and his wife, Bess, a top-ranked painter in her own right, hang on the walls or are tastefully grouped along the wall. They reflect the entire range of Harris's work. Originally a landscapist, he late, turned to non-objective compositions.

"I have no trouble working from one to another. In line and in colors I believe there is a great similarity between modernistic art and that of the old masters."

STUDY IN GERMANY

Lawren Stewart Harris was born in Brantford, Ont., in 1885, the son of Thomas Harris and Annie Stewart. His family was one of the Massey-Harris farm implement manufacturers. But this field did not interest young Harris.

"I made only two trips to the works, more out of curiosity than anything else."

He studied art in Germany from 1908 to 1911, returning to this continent to accept a job as an illustrator with a New York magazine. He returned to Canada a year later, painting street scenes and old houses in the slum and outskirts of Toronto.

Harris was not burdened by the financial worries that plagued many of his companions. He helped finance construction of the Studio Building in Toronto, which served as a headquarters for the Group of Seven.

The group, the most noted Canadian art body, was an informal association and did not exist in the sense of an organized society. Its members shunned established European art techniques to develop their own distinctive Canadian style.

For seven years they worked, much of the time travelling about Lake Superior and in Algonquin Park. During the summer they lived in a railway boxcar. It was moved to a new siding every three or four days.

'NATIONAL MENACE'

The group's first exhibit was at the Toronto Art Gallery in 1920 and critics labelled it "the hot-mush school." Besides Harris, the original in the group were three men still living — F. Y. Jackson, Fred Varley and Arthily Lismer — and the late Franklin Carmichael, J. E. H. MacDonald and Franz Johnston.

A member of Parliament took particular exception to Harris's northern landscapes and said they were a "national menace" because they would discourage immigration.

"We accepted the criticism as partly a compliment and we encouraged it," said Harris. "Our work tried to exhibit the savage landscapes of Canada. We were painting this country in its own terms, painting it as Canadians saw it and not as Europeans saw it.

"Later the National Gallery bought some of our work and that seemed to wake up Canadians to what we were trying to do.

"Today we are in an international style of abstractions. From the outside it may seem to be chaotic, but it is not. It could be a sign that art is disturbed and the world in a mess. Art has presaged it before. It is the same in architecture, in literature, and in music."

The Group of Seven later took in younger painters who were following a similar pattern and by 1933 became known as the Canadian Group of Painters. Harris became the first president and from 1936-47 was president of the Federation of Canadian Artists.

ONE-MAN SHOW

In 1962 he moved here and lectured at the School of Art. He has encouraged many young artists and did much to bring the work of Emily Carr before Canadians.

"She was the first Canadian painter to be decided influenced by West Coast landscape. You can't go anywhere in the woods but you recognize an Emily Carr."

In October, 1961, the Toronto Art Gallery honored him with a major one-man exhibition, the first time so honored by the gallery. He has received honorary degrees from professors from three Canadian universities and his exhibitions here and in Eastern Canada have attracted record crowds.

His most widely reproduced works include North Shore, Lake Superior, it now hangs in the National Gallery at Ottawa. Another is Shacks, which typifies the early period of his painting.

Harris's interest in art began early. As a youngster of eight he painted Christmas cards and sent them to relatives. At 12 he was taking weekly lessons and he chose study in Europe over enrolment in the University of Toronto.

Harris is the author of many articles interpreting art to Canadians and he has joined in a pool radio broadcasts to discuss art.

Oldest Daily Paper Publisher On Job on His 99th Birthday

VALDOSTA Ga. (AP)—Tuesday was just another day for E. K. Turner. This means coming to the office, seeing that things are running without abnormal kinks, opening the mail, chewing tobacco, and reading newspapers—one in particular, his own.

He didn't like the fuss being made about his birthday, but he has learned over the years to put up with it.

Turner, publisher of the Valdosta Times, was 99 years old yesterday. He notes with pride that he is the oldest active publisher of a daily newspaper in the United States.

He has been in the newspaper business all his life.

"I could set type when I was 12 years old," he said Monday in a rare interview. "I was a pretty good typesetter, too."

LANDED JOB

His adeptness at setting type by hand got him a job with the Hawkinsville, Ga., Dispatch when he was 19 at $40 a month.

After seven years at Hawkinsville, Turner went to Thomasville for seven months, then took a job in 1889 with the South Georgia Times, published twice weekly in Valdosta. He was still earning $40 a month.

"He was named general manager of the Valdosta newspaper in 1898 and was named publisher about 40 years ago, although he doesn't remember exactly when.

When the Times moved to its new building in 1958, the tobacco chewing publisher had one major complaint. His spittoon got lost in the shuffle.

The editor went right out and bought him a bright new one.

TORONTO (CP)—Timber Island in Lake Ontario near Picton has been declared a wilderness area by the Ontario government. Had Weakness for Adopting Children Nobody Wanted

TORONTO (CP)—Lew Walker and his wife Audrey had a weakness for adopting children nobody else wanted.

Yesterday the Walker family gathered from as far away as Germany and Nova Scotia to bury the man they called "dad."

Mr. Walker, a 52-year-old purchasing agent, died of a heart attack Saturday.

The death notice listed him as "Dear father of Fred, Ricci, Bill, Tom, Ian, Mike, Terry, Roger, Raymond, Stanley and Joan."

But for all those names, Mr. and Mrs. Walker had only one child born to them.

The rest—two of them blind, another colored — they adopted or took under their care as foster children.

FLIES BACK

Ricci, stationed with the Canadian Army in Germany, has been flown back for the funeral Wednesday. Another has come from Nova Scotia.

Yet another telephoned from California to say he was grieved he could not return.

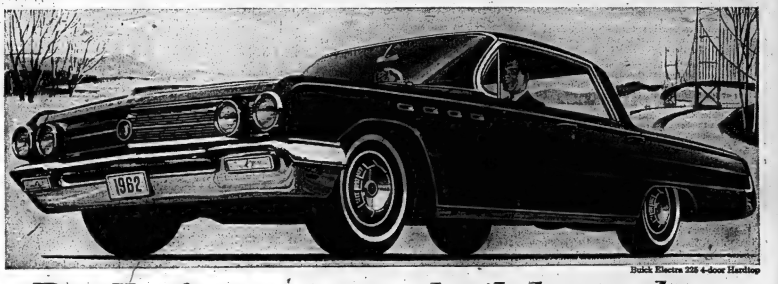
Still at home with Mrs. Walker are two 16 - year - olds, one adopted who is colored and nearly blind and the other a foster child.

WAS NO DIFFERENCE

"To Lew and me," Mrs. Walker said, "there was never any difference.

Mr. and Mrs. Walker cared for more than a score of foster children, besides those they adopted, during the last 17 years.

Their own son was seven when Mrs. Walker read a plea for a home for a handicapped youngster.



"Lew said 'go ahead,'" recalled Mrs. Walker. "We always tried to take children nobody else seemed to want."

Mr. Walker, who came to Canada from England when he was three, was a Protestant who attended no particular church.

"We went where it seemed best for the children to go," said Mrs. Walker. "For a while it was a synagogue."

RARE, MEDIUM, WELL-DONE

By GEO. H. CARVER, Sports Editor

They're talking about other things besides brooms and stones, ends and playoffs, up in the sparsette down around Kitchener way where the Dominion Curling Championship is in competitive throes.

The big topic is: "Is professionalism beginning to infiltrate a game that to this point has been pure and spotless as far as amateurism goes."

The said game of Bonnie Scotland is about the only sport that has not been tainted by the monied ranks but now, the story goes, the 1962 Brier is running into the bugaboo of eligibility and professionalism and the annual meeting this morning of the Dominion Curling Association devoted a good deal of time to it.

This session of the governing body was labelled as one of the most important ever held in the history of the game.

Attention on the question of professionalism has been focussed by the 1962 Ontario Brier rink skipped by Bayne Sneed of the Toronto Tam 'O Shanter Club. Three of the four members of the club are from Saskatchewan but are employed during the winter months by the Ontario club. The three are, Sneed from Richley, Saskatchewan; vice Vern Larsen and second Russell Lindberg, both from Brownell, Saskatchewan.

Lead John David McDonaough is from Port Credit, and manages the Tam 'O Shanter, a pay-as-you-play club.

However, the Kitchener story goes, there is no possibility the Sneed rink will be declared ineligible for this week's Brier. One claim is that they would not be classed as amateurs in other sports such as golf.

Dominion Curling Association president Earl G. Bourne of Regina, and vice-president J. C. Pattee of Montreal, point out that there is no rule in the Brier covering amateur eligibility standards.

In addition, Bourne and Pattee said the eligibility of Brier rinks is left to each province and the Ontario Curling Association ruled the Sneed rink eligible.

Prior to this morning's meeting, director Bruce Boreham of Winnipeg, said the conclave may consider some form of restriction on the value of prizes won in any bonspiel or tournament. This might amount to $150 for any one person, or $600 a rink. This rule would be, in effect, the same as that governing Canadian amateur golf.

Boreham also suggested some sort of residence rule might be considered to prevent commuting in curling as is the case of the Saskatchewan members of the Sneed rink. The three farm in the west for about five months of the year and work for the Tam 'O Shanter club the rest of the time.

Some rules, it was stated, are already embodied in the Dominion Curling Association code of ethics. Several provincers, among them Ontario, have similar codes which impose some limitation on competing curlers. Others do not.

Both Bourne and Pattee said the Association will strongly recommend that all provinces adopt the code. Most curlers are of the opinion there is nothing wrong with the Brier, which should remain the amateur tournament for all of Canada.

Curling officials are confident, says the story, that there would be no difficulty in finding sponsors for professional and open events, including some big enough to put up sizeable cash prizes for pro competition.

The only thing wrong with curling, to date, is that it is suffering with growing pains. Western Canada has gone all out for the sport which is curling hockey in several centres, particularly the smaller zone. It is becoming increasingly popular here in the east.

If curlers or curling bodies want to professionalize it let them go their own way. But let's keep the Brier what it was originally intended to be, an amateur sport for amateurs. Rarely we are entitled to at least one that is not money-blemished.

Rocky Wants To Be Boxing Boss

SAN JOSE, Calif. (AP)—Former heavyweight boxing champion Rocky Marciano wants to be appointed federal boxing commissioner if the U.S. government creates the post.

The undefeated champion, now customer relations man for an engineering company, told a reporter Tuesday boxing could be "going forward" two years after a commissioner is named.

"We expect the spot to be created in the government," Marciano said. Marciano said his first act if made boxing boss would be to name a board of boxing composed of former champions.

Langlois Gets Winner

BY THE CANADIAN PRESS

Al Langlois, a six-foot, 185-pound defenceman, never had much luck scoring goals when he played with Montreal Canadiens.

But in 44 games with New York Rangers this season, he has counted seven goals and some of them have been timely.

His seventh climaxed a three-goal comeback within two minutes and 18 seconds of the third period that brought Rangers an important 5-4 victory over Detroit Red Wings in Tuesday night's only scheduled National Hockey League game at Detroit.

The win heightened New York's chances of catching a Stanley Cup playoff berth for the first time since the 1957-58 season.

Rangers now hold a three-point lead over the Red Wings in the two teams' struggle for the fourth and last playoff spot. The Red Wings, however, have three games in hand, having nine more games to play to a game schedule ends March 25 for New York's six.

ERASED LEAD

Langlois scored at 12:00 of the third period with Rangers Hanna's second goal of the season and Camille Henry's 21st goal erased a 4-3 Detroit lead.

For Langlois, who came to Rangers in a trade for Jean Hanna last summer, it was his second game-winning goal this season. On another occasion he scored a goal that earned Rangers a tie.

In 155 schedule and playoff games with Canadiens, he counted only twice.

Johnny Wilson and Andy Hebenton were New York's other goal - getters. Hebenton also drew two assists, including one on Langlois' tally.

Gordie Howe and Alex Delvecchio were the key men in Detroit's attack.

Howe scored his 30th goal of the season and 499th of his brilliant career and also collected two assists. Delvecchio had three assists.

Howe's goal gave the Wings a 3-3 lead late in the second period and Marc Bolleau's goal at 5:35 of the third. Then the Rangers launched their rally.

Warren Godfrey and Vic Stasiuk were the other Detroit scorers.

The Wings went all out in the final minute in an effort to salvage a tie, pulling out goalie Hank Bassen for a sixth attacking skater. The Rangers fought them and even missed three shots at the open net.

Alberta, BC Double Winners

New Brunswick Is 'Surprise Rink'

By JACK SULLIVAN
Canadian Press Sports Editor

KITCHENER (CP) — Curling handicappers needn't wonder why New Brunswick sticks with the leaders in the big league. It's simple. The Moncton rink refuses to play patsy to generally acknowledged powerhouses.

This has been demonstrated in the four rounds played to date in the 10-game round-robin Canadian championships and explains the eastern province's accustomed role as co-leader with one loss in four draws along with the talented - packed rinks from Saskatchewan, Alberta and British Columbia.

It may topple from its lofty perch in the next couple of days but it hasn't given any indication of shifting down to its usual second - isolated status.

This was shown Monday when the N.B. rink forced vastly - experienced British Columbia to an extra end before losing 10-9. The fourth round after clobbering Northern Ontario 17-3 in the third draw.

Only a miracle would have beaten Reg Stone's Trail rink Monday but Stone, the Harold (Hap) Mabey, vice-skip who throws last rock. British Columbia now is tying in its fourfoot circle with the house practically unguarded.

RARELY MADE IT

Another few inches farther and New Brunswick would have earned the distinction of being the only unbeaten rink to date. The most relieved person in the Memorial Auditorium was cigar-smoking Stone, who is making his seventh appearance in this curling classic.

He made a 12th-end single to force the game into the extra and after building a 3-2 lead going into the sixth.

Meanwhile, the 2,378 spectators witnessed plenty of action on other sheets of ice.

The defending champion, Hec Gervais of Edmonton, acquired an extra end to get past Manitoba 11-9. Nova Scotia came from behind to defeat Newfoundland 11-6. Saskatchewan scored seven in the final four ends to beat Ontario 13-7 and Northern Ontario rounded out a four on the 11th to defeat Quebec 13-10.

The results left Ontario and Northern Ontario with 3-2 won-lost records and in third place contention.

Quebec and Nova Scotia follow with 1-3 records, Prince Edward Island, with a fourth-round win, is 0-3 and Newfoundland 0-4.

ROUGH ROAD FOR N.B.

Before anyone gets the idea that New Brunswick is sure to finish high up when the championship ends Friday, a closer look at its agenda is in order.

The rink has games against Manitoba, Alberta, Ontario, Saskatchewan, Nova Scotia and Newfoundland. Its most modest supporters can reasonably look for no more than split at best-losses to the western foursomes and a sweep over the eastern rinks.

Tuesday's rounds produced two double winners.

Alberta edged Nova Scotia 8-8 in the third and followed with its victory over Manitoba in the fourth. British Columbia opened with an easy 13-6 victory over Saskatchewan and followed with its close decision over New Brunswick.

The only double loser was Newfoundland, perennial last-place finisher. It lost 13-4 to Ontario and 11-6 to Nova Scotia.

Curlers had this morning off while the Dominion Curling Association held its annual meeting.

Two draws were on tap at 2 p.m. and 8 p.m. in the afternoon Newfoundland meets Manitoba, New Brunswick meets Ontario, Quebec goes against British Columbia, Northern Ontario meets Prince Edward Island and Nova Scotia meets Saskatchewan. Alberta has the bye.

The night draw: British Columbia and Prince Edward Island, Nova Scotia and New Brunswick, Manitoba and Saskatchewan, Newfoundland and Alberta, Quebec and Ontario. Northern Ontario gets the bye.

Signs for $28,000

Joey Jay Ends Holdout

NEW YORK (AP)—Joey Jay, well - heeled ollman and star pitcher, has ended his holdout and lifted the gloomy atmosphere in the training camp of Cincinnati Reds, 1961 National League baseball champions.

The 26-year-old righthander, who shared National League honors for most victories last year with Warren Spahn of Milwaukee Braves when he compiled a 21-10 record, signed Tuesday for $28,000, about $13,000 more than he received in 1961.

Jay's move gave a lift to spirits in the Reds' camp a day after Gene Freese, their star third baseman, fractured an ankle during an intra-squad game. Freese will be out of the lineup for three months.

Jay's salary boost did not equal the amount he demanded when he offered to purchase his contract for $200,000 so he could become a free agent and peddle his talents elsewhere.

Also ending his holdout was relief specialist Don McMahon of Milwaukee, who became the last member of the Braves to agree to terms. He received a slight pay boost.

Infielder Elio Chacon of New York Mets, new entry in the National League, also agreed to terms, reducing the majors' holdout list to four players—headed by slugger Orlando Cepeda of San Francisco Giants and pitcher Camilo Pascual of Minnesota Twins. Also at loose ends are catchers Doug Camilli of Los Angeles Dodgers and Bob Herrera of St. Louis Cardinals.

Former Grid Star Missing

OTTAWA (CP)—Police said Tuesday they have been asked to investigate the disappearance of Tom Daley, 44, widely-known sports personality who has been missing from his home here since Feb. 22.

Mr. Daley, Ottawa manager for a liquor firm, is a former football player with Ottawa Rough Riders and Hamilton Tiger-Cats. He was also a senior official with the Eastern Football Conference.

Trappers Tie Canadiens

BY THE CANADIAN PRESS

Hull-Ottawa Canadiens Tuesday night visited North Bay, where they've had nothing but trouble for most of the Eastern Professional Hockey League season.

They couldn't break their winless streak but managed a 3-3 tie with the Trappers, their second in six games at North Bay. It was enough to vault the visitors into possession of second place, a point back of Kitchener-Waterloo Beavers and one up on Kingston Frontenacs.

The result sets the stage for a first-place battle tonight when the Beavers visit Kingston.

North Bay scored a quick less than five minutes remaining earned a tie for the Trappers, who trail Sudbury Wolves by 11 points in the fight for the fourth and last playoff spot.

The teams went scoreless in the first period, split a pair of goals in the second and scrapped through the third, the Canadiens failing to land a shot.

Norm Wasiowsky and John Stewart, with their 15th and 16th goals of the season, were the other North Bay marksmen. Stanley Hall, John Gaudette and Bill Masterton scored for Hull-Ottawa.

Althea Wants to Be 'New Babe'

NEW YORK (AP) — Althea Gibson, the tennis queen, queen, has fixed her sights on a new goal. She wants to become the "new Babe."

She aspires to be the best woman golfer in the world and match the feats of the late Babe Didrikson Zaharias.

"It's no secret the Babe always has been an inspiration to me," Miss Gibson said in an interview. "She was a great all-around athlete who took up golf late—in her 30s—and became the undisputed champion.

"I have a God-given talent for being able to do things with a ball. I have gone as far as I can in tennis. Now I intend to do the same thing in golf."

Those who have watched Althea's phenomenal progress on the links figure the five-foot-10, 150-pound athlete will achieve her goal.

Records show the Babe took up golf in 1931.

She took up golf seriously two years ago. She shot 101 on her first trip around an 18 - hole course. She cut nine strokes off her score in 1960 and nine more last year, getting her average into the low 80s.

She recently won the United States North-South Negro tournament by 36 strokes.

Like the Babe, Althea is a long hitter. One of her drives recently measured 285 yards.

Tournament Starts Thursday

'No World Champions', Says Russia

COLORADO SPRINGS, Colo. (CP)—Russia sought Tuesday to turn the politically-motivated world hockey championships into a competition where the winner would be deprived of world recognition because of a communist boycott, a spokesman for the West predicted such a move would fail.

Canada is a heavy favorite to retain the world title it won for the 19th time in 29 championships last year in Switzerland.

The Russians announced that they would bring up the question of world recognition at a meeting of the directorate of the International Ice Hockey Federation, called late Tuesday night to certify that the visas of the competing teams are in order and to deal with last-minute details of the 12-day tournament starting Thursday.

Vasily Nepanikov, the Soviet member on the IIHF directorate, said Tuesday he would table a motion to strip the tournament of its championship label.

SAYS WEST HAS VOTES

But Bud Poile, president of the Amateur Hockey Association of the United States, said: "I'm sure we have the votes to beat the Russian move."

The preliminary phase of the tournament begins at noon EST today in Broadmoor World Arena here, with the regular competition scheduled to start Thursday in the Colorado arenas 50 miles apart—Broadmoor and the Denver Coliseum.

Switzerland and Austria, consolation round competitors in the 1961 championships, meet in the only preliminary game of the tournament. The winner qualifies for the Group A championship round-robin, made up of eight countries.

Canada, Britain, the United States, Sweden, Finland, Norway and West Germany are the other countries in the championship bracket.

Five countries and the loser of the preliminary match meet in Group B, a consolation round-robin. The five are The Netherlands, France, Japan, Australia and Denmark.

SIX START THURSDAY

Six of the eight countries in the championship group see action Thursday (times EST):

Colorado Springs—Britain vs Austria or Switzerland 5 p.m.; United States vs Norway 10:30 p.m.

Denver — Canada vs. Finland 10:15 p.m.

This year's Canadian representatives are not the all-star Cup champions, Galt Terriers. A power-packed club with such players as Pat Stasiuk and Jack McLeod, Galt boasts four professional-calibre lines and a hard rugged defence. The Canadians figure to walk away with their fourth straight March at Lausanne as Canada's Trail Smoke Eaters smothered the Finns 12-1.

After Finland, Canada meets West Germany, Switzerland or Austria, Sweden, Norway, Britain and the United States in that order. The tournament winds up Sunday, March 18, with the Canada-U.S. game to be televised by the Columbia Broadcasting System starting at 3:30 p.m.

FRANCE IN SWEEP

"I don't think we'll lose a game in the championship round," said Canada's coach.

The Americans and Swedes probably think Germany are the only clubs in the weakened tournament lineup considered to be on a par with Canada as an battle.

American coach Connie Phelan rates his club far superior to the one that took only fifth place in the Galt Christian brothers on it. They are good, solid players and if the others are equally good, the Americans are going to make a strong showing.

The Christian brothers, Billy and Gregory, were members of the United States team that won a gold medal in the 1960 Olympics at Squaw Valley, Calif.

Cleroux Rejects Clay Bout

SAN FRANCISCO (AP)—Joe Louis tried Tuesday to line up Bob Cleroux, Canadian heavyweight champion, for his debut as matchmaker of the new United World Enterprises, Inc. Cleroux said nothing came of it.

The former heavyweight champion didn't have the right number or enough money to interest manager Al Buchman at Montreal in a Los Angeles fight with Floyd Patterson, Cleroux said.

Louis offered Cassius Clay, 1960 Olympic champion said now the ninth ranking professional heavyweight, as an opponent for Cleroux. Cleroux ranks No. 7.

Buchman wanted Eddie Machen, No. 2, Zora Folley, No. 3, or "lots and lots of money" to interest either of them.

Monday the Montreal boxer knocked out George Logan of Boise Idaho, in the seventh round at San Francisco.

Difference in Goalies

Thinks Americans 'Tough'

BY BEN OLAN

COLORADO SPRINGS, Colo. (AP) — "The Americans are going to be plenty tough to beat in this tournament," Lloyd Roubell said today.

Roubell is the coach of Galt Terriers, who carry Canada's hopes of successfully defending the amateur hockey championship in the world tournament getting under way here.

"But the difference between our teams may be in the goal tending," Roubell added. "I've heard the American goalies are not too good. If that's true, we should have a pretty sizable edge."

The Canadians' netminder is Harold "Bud" Hurley, an experienced international competitor. The American goalies are Mike Curran of Denver, Norway, Britain and the United States in that order. The tournament winds up Sunday, March 18, with the Canada-U.S. game to be televised by the Columbia Broadcasting System starting at 3:30 p.m.

FRANCE IN SWEEP

"I don't think we'll lose a game in the championship round," said Canada's coach.

Barons Win Over Aces 4-1

QUEBEC (CP)—Two goals by right - winger Jim Pappin helped Cleveland Barons to a 4-1 victory over Quebec Aces in an American Hockey League game Tuesday night.

Pappin, Ed Atwell and right winger Dick Van Impe got the Barons' other goals. Defenceman Jim Morrison picks a fight out from Les Binkley in Barons' net.

Quebec had 31 shots at Binkley while Cleveland fired 21 shots at Hodge.

The defeat reduces Quebec's chances to participate in the AHL playoffs.

Quebec has not made the playoff since they entered the league two years ago. The aces now stand two points ahead of the last-place Providence Reds in the Eastern Division of the American Hockey League.

3 Canucks With Aussies

KENORA, Ont. (CP)—Three Canadians will be with the Australian national team when it enters competition in the ice hockey championships at Colorado Springs, Colo., March 8 to 18.

The three, all from the Kenora area, are manager Russ Carson, coach Bill Chase and player Gary Owen.

A fourth Kenora player, Bill Woodgate, was chosen to play on the team but returned to Kenora two months ago.

He was right wing on the Australian line.

Australia is entered in section B of the championships.

The three players played for Melbourne in the Australian National Hockey League with Carson manager of the team.

Carson, who went to Australia to play hockey and coach, was also for Kenora Thistles, is credited with being a leading force in starting hockey on the continent.

Score Back With Chisox

SARASOTA, Fla. (AP)— Could this be the year of decision for Herb Score?

The bespectacled, lanky left-handed pitcher is back with Chicago White Sox from the American League after being sent down last season to San Diego of the Pacific Coast League.

His troubles, he insists, have nothing to do with the accident in 1957 when a smash from the bat of Gil McDougald of New York Yankees hit him in the right eye at the start of the American League season. His eye was saved but he played no more ball that year.

When he came back the next year he would win only two games as against 20 in 1956. His trouble has been control.

"I hurt my elbow pitching against Washington in 1958. Everybody makes excuses for me because of the accident, but if there is an excuse, it's my arm. I tore a tendon, and it go into bad habits favoring it."

He says they had a pitch that in 1955 he won 16 and lost 10, striking out 245 batters in 227 innings. In 1956 it was 20-9, with 263 strikeouts in 249 innings.

"We still believe he can come back all the way to become the great pitcher he was before his unfortunate accident," says general manager Ed Short.

Western Hockey

BY THE CANADIAN PRESS

San Francisco Seals' hopes of reaching the Western Hockey League playoffs went from good to bad in 12 minutes Tuesday night.

Things appeared good for the Seals as they had a 4-0 lead over Spokane Comets nearing the midway mark of the third period. But the Comets picked up three quick goals and won 5-4.

In a game that had little significance in the Southern Division standings, Edmonton Flyers downed Vancouver Canucks 9-4. The win moved the first - place Edmonton eight points ahead of Seattle Totems. Vancouver remained in last place.

The Seals trail Los Angeles Blades by five points in the race for the Southern Division's second and playoff position. The Seals have a game in hand.

It appeared that Marty Pavelich and Ray Cyr would stand up for the Seals before Spokane scored. Pavelich and Yves Locas scored. Bob Bailey got one goal back for the Seals.

Veteran Forrest Len Lunde scored three goals in pacing Edmonton in the rout. He is 12 games against Vancouver this season. Howie Young, Ed Joyal, Chick Rivers, Don Rogers, Rodge DeJordy and Tom Burgess scored the other Flyer goals. Ed Diachuk, Phil Maloney, Don Ramburak and Bob McCusker answered for the Canucks.

LEADS PUNTERS

NEW YORK (AP)—Yale Larry d Detroit Lions succeeded the now retired Jerry Norton of St. Louis Cardinals as the National Football League's top punter, according to official league statistics released Tuesday. Larry punted 52 times for a 44.4-yard average in leading the Lions to the team title, just as Norton had passed the Cardinals to the 1960 title.

Comedian Paul Lynde May Be on His Own Next Year

By CYNTHIA LOWRY

NEW YORK (AP)—It is of but passing interest to television viewers when Perry Como wants to lighten his working schedule, when ABC debates whether to cancel a series such as Maverick, when CBS is moving its programs around its blueprint of next season's schedule like checkmen in a giant game.

But when you're a performer in a television series, you're going through the mid-of-winter anxious days as next year's plans are being made. The decisions vitally affect many careers and bread - and - butter sources.

Comedian Paul Lynde, a popular member of the Perry Como cast for the past season, is in a typical March situation. Como's next-season plans are still up in the air, Lynde is co-star of a projected comedy series which is under consideration for a possible network spot. He can't make any real decisions about his life.

"Television has been very good to me," Lynde said. "The exposure has been great. But it scares me to realize how fickle those audiences can be. I've seen what happened to comedians — Red Buttons, George Gobel, Martha Raye. One season they're right on top, and the next — nothing. What happened?"

Lynde, whose own specialty is comedy character roles, believes the secret of longevity is to "move along almost blandly—not demanding too much attention, not making too much of an impression."

NBC picked up the highest rating of the season for its White Paper series with its recent report on Communist China — Tony Randall and Connie Stevens were picked in a movie fan magazine poll as the year's best actor and actress—and nobody ever even mentioned their acting in the two Hawaiian Eye appearing weekly in TV's Surfside Six and Hawaiian Eye — ABC's The Untouchables and Target: Corruptors have been renewed for another season.

Lady, 15-Year-Old Mare, Generally Gets Mail Through

HATLEY, Que. (CP) — The city mailman, generally admired by many people for his devoted service in the face of unfriendly dogs, rain - winded housewives and inclement weather, would probably take his hat off to Alan Wheeler.

Mr. Wheeler, 73, is a hardy mail carrier who has been delivering the mail for 12 years in the Hatley area of Quebec's Eastern Townships. And he does it by horse and buggy.

Proud that he has never received a complaint from anyone on his route, he makes his rounds through the countryside in a buggy or sleigh pulled by Lady, his 15-year-old horse.

Six days a week, the not-so-old gentleman picks up the mail at the general store in Hatley and delivers it to the 35 houses on his 16½-mile route.

Why doesn't he use a car?

"A car is too expensive and besides there isn't a car made that can do the work that Lady does," Mr. Wheeler says.

"Lady has only turned back three times because of blocked roads during the wintertime. She's taken me through drifts so big that no car could ever get through.

I wouldn't trade her for anything.

LADY GETS MANY GIFTS

But Mr. Wheeler prefers the summer when he can enjoy the beautiful scenery and friendly people he chats with along his route.

At Christmas he receives gifts of boxes of chocolates. In the spring he is given more maple syrup than he can carry home.

With a wife and one of his four married children to support—the three other children are married—Mr. Wheeler has to supplement his salary as a mail carrier by doing odd jobs.

Known and loved by everyone in the Hatley district, Mr. Wheeler says he has time to talk to the children and pat the many dogs that come to meet him on his travels.

Mr. Wheeler has lived in the Hatley district since he was 18. He was a farmer before becoming a mailman.

And for how long he plans to deliver the mail, a twinkle comes into his eye and he answered: "As long as I can stand up—and I'm a long way from falling yet."

Remarkable and Spritely Swim Star, Mary Stewart, Also Is Whiz at Tumbling

By BRUCE McLEAN

VANCOUVER (CP) — It's hard to steer the conversation away from swimming when talking to Mary Stewart.

Not that Mary hasn't got anything else to talk about.

The remarkable and spritely astonishing star is a whiz at tumbling, a first - class high school student and a favorite with Vancouver football fans as mascot of British Columbia Lions.

But meet a youngster who has accomplished a stunning feat comparable to the breaking of the four-minute mile barrier and he inevitably finds that swimming dominates the discussion.

Like Mary is the first female swimmer to clock the 100-yard butterfly in less than a minute.

SET U.S. RECORD

She swam the distance in 59.7 in a meet at Portland, Ore., in February, trimming seven-tenths of a second off the U.S. mark held by Nancy Ramey of Santa Clara.

It came as no surprise to the swimming experts. Although Mary had been competing seriously in butterfly events for only a year, she broke the world record for the 100-metre distance twice last year.

These feats, added to 20-odd others she recorded, helped Mary to win rating as Canada's top woman athlete for 1961 in a Canadian press poll.

As a freckle-faced kid with auburn hair, teeth, flesh and a spot on Canada's 1960 Olympic team by setting three - metre records.

The year before, at age 13, she made track for the Pan American Games—where her older sister Helen won the 100-metre backstroke title.

TOOK DANCE LESSONS

Mary learned to swim when she was four, worked hard at her dancing lessons until she was 12, then started to train seriously for competitive swimming.

The dancing lessons brought out Mary's natural tumbling abilities a few years ago, she and two other Vancouver teenagers formed a trio and lived with a tumbling act and won a special award for their performance on the Stairway to Stardom television show.

It was then Mary, an acrobat rather than her fame as a swimmer that prompted B.C. Lions of the Western Interprovincial Football Conference to choose Mary as their mascot.

Wearing an orange and black costume complete with lion's tail and whiskers, Mary stands on her hands, back-flips and cartwheels on the football field at Empire Stadium as part of the half-time spectacle.

LIKES TO CLOWN

Mary's liking for acrobatic clowning helps to take the monotony out of the training sessions at the Dolphin Swimming Club.

The rest of the swimmers at the club enjoy her horseplay, says Mary's coach Howard Firby, who often warns her about the danger of an injury.

But in the classroom, Mary puts on the antics and gets scowls to buttons.

Her exam marks are high enough to place her among the students taking an accelerated program of studies. It will enable Mary to graduate from Kitsilano High School next June after completing four years of study in three.

She plans to go to university next fall and take up education.

"Not physical education," Mary said. "I want to teach English and French, my favorite subjects."

BOOKIES WILL PAY

LONDON (AP) — Off-track British bookies were told Tuesday that from—now on they'll have to put some of their profits back into the sport. The betting levy board, which collects and distributes money for the benefit of racing, expects to obtain about $4,300,000 in the first year. Starting April, bookies, legal in Britain, will pay an average of one shilling (14 cents) on every pound ($2.80) profit.

Second game of the round will be played in Niagara Falls Friday night.

It was a tense game and grew rougher as play progressed. Two of Montreal's key players were defencemen Jacques Laperriere and Serard Rejean Richer—were carried from the ice unconscious late in the game following collisions with Niagara Falls players. Neither was seriously injured.

Montreal was leading 4-0 when Laperriere was hurt at 17:16 of the last period and Niagara Falls counted its only goals shortly after.

Germain Gagnon, Bill Inglis, Johnny Taylor and Norm Denis each scored for the Canadiens while Gary Harmer and Jean-Paul Parise scored for the Flyers.

A free-swinging brawl broke out at 5:50 of the third period between Gary Dornhoefer of the Flyers and Roger Carpenter of Montreal. Each was assessed a major penalty for fighting.

More About Any-Deer Law

You may remember that last February we turned out a column having to do with the advisability of discontinuing the law, which requires that only bucks be shot during the powder-and-shot open season on deer (this distinguishes it from the archery season). As you no doubt know, Pennsylvania (my home state) is one of the top deer states, and in our woods there seems to be a disproportionate number of does as compared to the number of bucks.

Before writing this column we interviewed a considerable number of Deer hunters. Among these were quite a few hardworking conservationists, men who put in considerable time each year tending a hand with the hundred and one problems of the strenuous job of deer management. The consensus, probably thirty in all, not one single dissenter was found. All agreed that the any-deer law would be a good thing.

New York Wisconsin comes the report that they have in certain areas "an irrupting deer herd." The report goes on to say this — "Ideally we should harvest 100 does per 100 bucks and does annually to keep crop damage, road hazards and forest damage in check." Last season almost 40,000 bucks were taken in the state.

TOO MANY DEER

In New Jersey, which sticks rather closely to its buck law, hands down said in some quarters to the point that there were far too many deer. They formed a serious road hazard, and did much crop and tree damage. Mr. A. Heasley Underhill, Chief of the Fish and Game Division, wanted to install a one-day shoot during which deer of any sex could be taken. A great many New Jersey sportsmen took violent exception to the idea, but formed some kind of with it anyway.

This one-day hunt was held only in counties where there were simply too many deer. In some places the does bred as many as 40 deer per square mile, a ridiculously large herd which did considerable crop damage, not to mention setting up seriously hazardous driving conditions. During the one-day shoot where there were too many deer were killed, bringing conditions back somewhere near normal.

Added to this is the report of studies made at the University of Michigan's George Reserve. They have demonstrated that about one-third of the deer population can be harvested each year without substantially depleting the population, provided that the deer killed are shared proportional to the sex and age composition of the herd. Where the buck law is in force, less than 10 per cent of the herd can be killed.

If these studies are correct, and we have every reason to believe that they are, it should be obvious that less than 10 per cent would hardly serve to maintain a deer herd within balance with its food supply. Some interests, however, have a heavy winter kill, crop damage and extra road hazards. Also, it means that the hunters of the State in question are not being permitted to take that extra per cent or more which could be harvested safely.

Time was when the fish laws were foolishly over-restrictive. Some have liberalized fishing. No damage has been done to the fish supply; actually the fishing is generally better than it was. It seems to this department that the same laws can be liberalized as well. At least it is worth a trial.

Screen Producers Guild Gives Hope Milestone Award

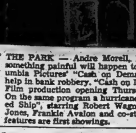
By BOB THOMAS

HOLLYWOOD (AP) — The banquet season is in full swing here, with its steaming beef, soup and fish, speeches, mothballed mink, roast beef rare, and awards.

The Screen Producers Guild dinner was one of the season's better outings, largely because it was relatively brief and because it honored the show-biz world's favorite, Bob Hope. Nobody questioned the logic of giving Bob the Milestone Award that had previously gone to pioneer producers and a beer popular Bob is.

Frank Sinatra, a fledgling producer, was enlisted as master of ceremonies. He started with a sure laugh: "Could I interest anyone in a hot engagement ring?"

Sinatra introduced Natalie Wood when he should have introduced Estelle Bail, the actress carried off his duties okay.



Instead of a George M. Cohan finish, the defence department came on in the middle with the marine corps band and the colors of each service. Then, brought to their feet, they cheered.

HOPE'S TAKEN ABACK

The curtains parted to reveal a communications feature that put Hope in contact with far-off defence bases. He was somewhat taken aback by the distant messages of cheer, but managed to stammer: "You calling collect?") When one of the calls failed to come through, Hope said: "Keep at our communications? I may sell my bonds tomorrow."

The final message was also a tough act to follow: J. F. K. in Washington said he was president.

Jack Benny followed, saying in it also got a phone message—"long distance from my uncle but I'd rather be myself."

in Haiti, who wants $100."

Benny was bright but also bitter. He criticized Hollywood as building a loyalty that lasts and lasts, adding: "Isn't that right, Bing? . . . Bing?"

No answer.

Brig. - Gen. James Stewart acted for the services in handing the plaque to Hope, "who somewhat takes aback by the distant messages of cheer, but managed to stammer: 'You calling collect?') When one of the calls failed to come through, Hope said: "Keep at our communications? I may sell my bonds tomorrow."

The final message was also a tough act to follow: J. F. K. in Washington said he was president.

Labor Problems Highlighted Joint Meetings

TORONTO (CP)—Labor problems highlighted joint meetings Monday of the Ontario Municipal Electrical Association and the Association of Municipal Electrical Utilities.

The 33rd annual joint meeting, which closes Wednesday, is expected to attract 1,200 delegates from across Ontario.

N. A. Grandfield of Brantford, a member of the AMEU, told a meeting some members of his association are in favor of asking the provincial government to declare public utilities as essential services—in the same category as police and firemen.

If such legislation were obtained utility workers would be denied the right to strike.

Howard Scheifele of Waterloo, a member of the OMEA, said public utility commissions have set a wage and benefit pattern the rest of industry will have to follow.

"We have all given in too readily to the unions."

He said that in 1950 the average wage increases granted in industry came to 6.8 cents an hour, while the electrical utilities granted 10.8 cents. Last year the utilities yielded twice as much to the unions as industry at large.

ICY GRIP — A heavy field of ice along the Atlantic coast could result in a severe ice blockade of Newfoundland ports this spring.

Map outlines general area covered by the ice at its peak. Last year, ice blocked St. John's harbor for weeks at a time and the N.S. - Nfld. ferry William Carson spent two weeks trapped in Quit of St. Lawrence ice. (CP Newsmap.)

Smoking Is Major Cause Of Lung Cancer Says Report

LONDON (Reuters)—Smoking is a major cause of lung cancer, a Royal College of Physicians and Surgeons committee concluded in a long-awaited report issued here today.

The nine-member committee, set up in April, 1959, was headed by college president Sir Robert Platt.

"Smoking is a cause of lung cancer, though there are other causes, such as air pollution and substances met in a few occupations," the report said. "None of these is of such general importance as smoking."

It said that cigarette smokers might have 30 times the death rate of non-smokers. Cigarette smokers. It said pipe smoking is much more affected than pipe of cigar smokers.

"Some means of persuading cigarette smokers to stub out their cigarettes before the end-coal half was burned would almost certainly reduce the risk," it added.

The committee was charged with inquiring into the relation between lung cancer and other ailments and smoking.

It said smoking cold exacerbates bronchitis, helps development of tuberculosis, especially in the aged, and appeared to play a role by causing arterial disorders other than high blood pressure.

Grocery heart conditions are a more frequent cause of death in smokers, mainly cigarette smokers, than non-smokers, it said.

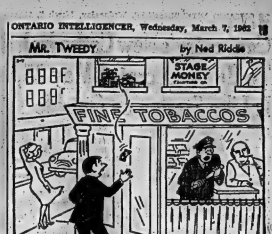
Smoking also delayed healing of gastric and duodenal ulcers.

The report quoted the pipe, cigar smokers:

1. The chance of dying in the next 10 years for a man of 35 who smokes heavily is one in 23; the risk of a non-smoker is one in 50.

2. The risk of dying of lung cancer by a smoker of 25 or more cigarettes daily is one in 14 between ages 35 and 74 and one in nine between 35 and 84.

The report noted that not all the difference in life expectancy can be attributed to smoking.



The government should take steps to educate the public, especially children, on hazards of smoking and to restrict tobacco advertising, it said.

It also urged that an additional tax be slapped on already heavily - taxed cigarettes and that purchasers be informed of the tar and nicotine content of cigarette smoke.

19 Members Walk Out of Legislature

REGINA (CP)—The 18-member Liberal opposition walked out of the Saskatchewan legislature Tuesday when Attorney-General Robert Walker rose to speak.

Liberal Leader Ross Thatcher said they were protesting breach of a gentlemen's agreement on the order of speakers by the CCF cabinet minister, who rose to speak at the same time as Allan Guy (L—Athabaska).

He said the agreement was to give Mr. Guy the floor before Mr. Walker because Mr. Guy had to attend university evening classes and would not be able to speak at the night session. Nine Liberal members returned as the evening session began.

Mr. Walker apologized for "any embarrassment caused the honorable member"" and said out of the misunderstanding was entirely his own.

LOSES APPEAL

KAMLOOPS, B.C. (CP)—County Court Judge Gordon Lindsay Tuesday dismissed an appeal by Highways Minister Philip Gaglardi of Hills, Columbia against his conviction and $ 2 for driving without due care and attention. The minister was fined $75 and lost his driving licence for three months.

Conventry's New Cathedral, To Be Consecrated May 25, Is Like Station on Outside

By DOUG MARSHALL

COVENTRY, England (CP) — Critics have complained that from the outside Coventry's new cathedral, to be consecrated May 25, looks like a pink power station.

Cathedral authorities are not worried by the charge. "Inside there's a different kind of power," one said. "And a fair bit of glory, too."

The sandstone building rises above the ruins of the 13th-century cathedral blitzed in the Coventry air raid of 1940. Stone for the new building came from the same quarry that supplied the original more-than 500 years ago.

Designed by Sir Basil Spence, the cathedral is a bold and vigorous architectural experiment.

In general, the building rejects the spirit of tolerance, nonconformity and just plain daring that has been associated with Coventry since the days when Lady Godiva rode out to edge the lanes with nothing on but her golden hair.

A series of massive perpendicular "cliffs" flank the walls. A huge canopy covers the porch and protects the entrance wall of sheet glass on which portraits of the saints are etched.

TOWER STRETCHES

On one side stands the bluebricked octagonal Chapel of Unity, a memorial to commonwealth prayer for a universal church. On the other a 30-foot-high bronze Epstein group of St. Michael in conflict with the devil sprouts from the wall.

Spence's design envisages the old cathedral's precinct as an integral part of the new building. The fine gothic spire, all but survived the raid, serves as the new cathedral's bell tower.

The cathedral's interior is a delicate cavern of ireadless splendor. It seems to contain in perfect unity all that is best in contemporary British art and craft.

On entering the visitor will be overwhelmed by Graham Sutherland's byzantine tapestry Christ in Glory, which splashes the whole east wall in majestic hues of gold and deep green.

The tapestry, measuring 75 by 40 feet, is the largest in the world. It took 12 French weavers three years to manufacture and carries a 500-year guarantee.

On the right of the entrance is a huge circular stained-glass window of complicated pattern 63 color sweep from dark to light tones, producing an almost three-dimensional effect.

BREATHTAKING WINDOWS

The side windows, angled to face the altar, do not become visible until the visitor penetrates into the depth of the church. They are breathtaking: seven pairs of panels mounted in a brilliant harmony of color and neo-primitive design.

The sets progress from light yellow, near the entrance, to deep violet near the altar. Roughly, they symbolize the 7 stages of man from birth to death but even the canon of the cathedral confesses he hasn't yet grasped the full meaning of the pattern.

On the floor, slabs of polished black marble catch the dancing rays of light and bounce them back against the complicated patterns of color sweep from dark to light tones, producing an almost three-dimensional effect.

CONTROVERSIAL CATHEDRAL — Work nears completion on the new cathedral at Coventry, England, under fire by critics who say its design makes it look like a pink power station. Remains of the famous 13th century cathedral (left), blitzed in air raids in 1940, are incorporated as an integral part of the new grey-pink sandstone building. The old and new are linked by a lofty porch (centre). To its right are the baptistry window and the five angled windows of the east wall. (CP from UKIO)

U.S. on Brink Of Mental Ills Over Prestige

TORONTO (CP)—The United States if on the brink of mass mental disease because Americans fear they have lost preeminence in the world, a Dalhousie University of Michigan professor said Monday.

"We can't even push the Cubans around," said Dr. Kenneth Boulding.

Dr. Boulding, a director of the Canadian Peace Research Institute, said Canada is a little freer than the U.S. and, since it is away from the centre of the cold war with access to information that would be off-limits in the U.S., is a good location for a peace research institute.

However, on a list of 50 of the world's most eligible peace researchers he compiled, he said he could think of no eligible Canadians.

"It's simply that your university departments are underfed in most fields of social and behavioral science."

Dr. Boulding is co-director of the University of Michigan's centre for research on conflict resolution.

Son of Italian Immigrant Built a Borrowed $2,500 Into a $40,000,000 Empire

By HAL BOYLE

NEW YORK (AP)—"Success begins at home," said Jeno F. Paulucci, who in 28 years built a borrowed $2,500 into a $40,000,000 food empire.

"No matter how depressed the area you live in may seem, if you look around you can find idle resources you can develop. Growth is possible anywhere."

Jeno is the son of an immigrant Italian miner in Minnesota's hard - hit Mesabi iron range.

At 13 he earned $2.50 a week in a grocery store and remembers "sometimes I had to take my pay in spoiled fruits and vegetables."

At 17 he became a wholesale grocery salesman, slept in his car at night, ate his own food samples to cut down expenses.

At 27 he borrowed $2,500 to grow bean sprouts. His office-plant was a rented quonset hut and the first year he took in $400,000. This year he expects a gross exactly 100 times that figure—$40,000,000.

At 43, Jeno has become far more than North America's largest bean sprout producer of the Chun King Corporation, with headquarters in Duluth, he is the largest U.S. manufacturer of American - Oriental foods.

NOW EMPLOYS 1,000

He also packages Italian delicacies. In the process of growth that stretches from Minnesota to Florida, He has six plants, some 1,000 employees, a fleet of 40 trailer trucks. He raises for processing himself from mushrooms to blueberries, wild rice to celery, on more than 700,000 acres.

He even markets potting soil, sod and moss. He has just started a country-wide chain of Chinese drive - in restaurants called "Richshaw Inns."

Paulucci believes that "business, like medicine, has too many specialists and too few general practitioners."

"I like to go by feeling, by intuition. When I started I didn't try to hire business specialists. I hired anybody who looked intelligent and energetic —cab drivers, welders, rug salesmen."

Many of his early employees, absorbing Paulucci's enthusiasm and merchandising skill have risen to executive rank with him.

"It pays to be ignorant, because if you are smart you already know it can't be done."

Jeno is full of boisterous meetings—push it through yourself."

29 Reported Dead Along Battered U.S. Shoreline

Looked Like Lumber Yard Says Official

NEW YORK (AP) — Coastal areas of seven mid-Atlantic states, many already in ruins from a record winter storm, again felt the hammer blows of extra-high tides battering into mountainous waves by violent winds Wednesday.

At least 29 persons were reported dead—along the battered and flooded shoreline from North Carolina to New York. New England escaped major damage as the storm's fury veered out to sea.

Pentagon officials said that the region be declared a disaster area. Most of the 1,000 residents of the famed resort at Ocean City fled their shattered homes.

Delaware Governor Elbert Carvel estimated damage at $50,000,000 and also asked for help to declare his state's coastline a disaster area.

Virginia had seven known storm deaths, with damage estimated at many millions.

ROCKET STATION HIT

At Wallops Island, off the Virginia coast, high winds caused severe damage to electronic equipment of a rocket launching station.

Virginia Beach officials declared a state of emergency and called in the National Guard to prevent looting.

At sea, a rash of shipping trouble was climaxed today by the British merchant ship Gem was reported broken by heaving seas off the coast of North Carolina.

Reports received by the U.S. Coast Guard from the Danish ship Jytte Kou, which was standing by, said the vessel "was broken aft of midships."

It said three members of the Gem's crew could be seen on the bridge, but gave no further information on the condition of the ship or its crew.

About 250 miles east of Portsmouth, Va., the 25-foot tanker A. H. Dumont had her heavy deck cargo of lumber washed overboard in mid-day. The 25-foot tanker A. H. Dumont had her heavy deck cargo of lumber washed overboard in mid-day.

The Coast guard cutter stood by the stricken Chesapeake lightship, which shifted some 30 miles from her position. The craft earlier had reported her forward bulkhead had buckled, and the chance of surviving was in doubt.

Hopes for the survival of three persons aboard the minesweeper Guinevere dimmed Wednesday night when a coast guard cutter spotted the vessel's water a small box, a plank, a pillow and life jacket a short while. Aboard the craft were an English couple, Rodney and Heather Hall, and his mother and a seaman identified as Duke Murtaugh.

PROPOSED LINE NOT ECONOMIC CLAIM OF CCFer

'Pious Statement' Says Government

OTTAWA (CP)—The government was accused in the Commons Wednesday of undertaking to build a $14,000,000 rail line in Quebec's Gaspe region without due regard for its economic feasibility.

Douglas Fisher (CCF — Port Arthur) said evidence already taken by a Commons committee "would seem to indicate that this proposed line has a rather shaky economic basis."

All that the government had offered in defence of the project was "pious statements."

Mr. Fisher spoke during clause-by-clause study of the bill, which has already received second reading — approval in principle. The debate was adjourned.

The bill would authorize the CNR to construct a 57-mile line from Sie. Anne des Monts on the north shore of the Gaspe Peninsula, southwestward along the St. Lawrence River to Matane.

PASS TWO BILLS

Earlier, the Commons gave third reading to two other bills, affecting farmers and fishermen.

These extended the life of the Farm Improvement Loans Act and the Fishermen Improvement Loans Act for three years—to June 30, 1965. Both bills now go to the Senate.

Shortly after the opening of the 35- hour sitting, Finance Minister Fleming announced signing of a Canada - United States agreement to cut tariffs on some $128,000,000 in goods traded annually between the two countries.

Tariff cuts negotiated by the U.S. with 20 other countries will also apply to Canada, Mr. Fleming said.

In his attack on the proposed rail line, Mr. Fisher said it was

Algerian Rebels in Tunisia Shell Border Just Before Final Peace Talks Commence

ALGIERS (AP) — French headquarters announced today that Algerian rebel units based in Tunisia have been bombarding French frontier defences for the last 24 hours, starting shortly before the peace negotiations opened in Evian, France.

A French spokesman said mortar and artillery fire smashed on a number of points along the electrified frontier barrier during Tuesday night. The shelling continued Wednesday and throughout Wednesday night, the communique said.

The French said five Algerian Moslem civilians had been killed and 20 Moslems and four members of the French Army had been wounded so far.

The rebels were attempting to reach the areas under fire were attacked by automatic weapons fire from across the frontier, the army said. Seven rebels were "put out of combat" when French troops answered the fire.

AIMED AT MOSLEMS

The French said most of the rebel artillery barrage was directed against the area between Cap Roux and Mt. Kouis. They charged it was aimed partly against Moslem villages.

Most of the firing was done by mortars, light cannons and rifles, the communique said.

The Algerian rebel army has an estimated 30,000 armed men based on Tunisian soil facing the French border defenses.

Meanwhile, a police patrol found the body of a strangled Moslem in central Algiers bearing the OAS initials of the European Secret Army organization painted in black.

Two days ago in a similar grim incident the mutilated body of another Moslem was found lashed to a tree with an OAS inscription painted in black over his chest and back.

Gun and bomb attacks have claimed two dead and three wounded in Algiers by midmorning.

In Evian, observers said no progress had been noted as talks got under way to hammer out a formula for a block agreement on a cease-fire and eventual Algerian independence.

Kennedy Suggests Projects For U.S.-Russia Space Team

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Kennedy is reported to have proposed to Premier Khrushchev a series of concrete steps for joint action by the United States and Russia to explore and develop outer space for peaceful purposes.

Officials indicated his specific suggestions embrace plans for joint international action on a weather satellite system and the development of communications satellites and deep space probes to other planets.

Disclosure of the new message to Moscow came in the midst of preparations here and in other capitals for the opening of disarmament talks in Geneva next week.

The president told a press conference Wednesday he had just written a letter to Khrushchev "putting forward some proposals" on the peaceful uses of outer space.

Businessmen Generally Welcome Tariff Reductions

By THE CANADIAN PRESS

Canadian businessmen generally welcomed negotiation of tariff reductions between Canada and the United States, although many asked time to study the impact of the complex agreement tabled in the House of Commons Wednesday.

The agreement, covering reductions on some $128,000,000 worth of goods, affects all of Canada's partners in the General Agreement on Tariffs and Trade.

L. C. Bozanquet, president of the Canadian Importers and Traders Association, said it appears the tariff concessions made by Canada affect customs revenue , producing duties on goods of which there is little Canadian production. The association recently sought full removal of these imposts.

"It should be remembered that Canada has a very adverse trade balance with the United States," Mr. Bozanquet said.

"The mutual lowering of tariffs is a good thing—anything is that tends to increase the flow of trade either way. But there is still a lot to be done in encouraging a greater flow of Canadian goods to the United States."

E. Randall, president of General Steel Wares Ltd., said the reduction is one more lowering of the tariff barrier between the U.S. and Canada.

"Certainly, free trade among countries is a natural move," he said, "in the short term, some companies might get hurt, but we're prepared to meet any challenge, as far as our company is concerned."

E. V. Rippingille, president of General Motors Diesel Ltd. of London, Ont., welcomed the reduction of duty on diesel and gasoline engines.

"If it means a reduction in our cost," he said, "it will mean a reduction in our customer's cost."

G. M. Brain, general sales manager of Provincial Paper Ltd., said it is unlikely the cut in the duty rate on coated papers to 20 from 22½ per cent will have any serious effect on Canadian firms.

"If a company can't operate under a 20 per cent tariff,"

TWO LEGAL BILLS ARE CONSIDERED THEN DEFERRED

House Resumes Sittings Today

TORONTO (CP) — Two bills which would have the effect of relieving judges of some of their out-of-court work were considered, then deferred, by the Ontario legislature's legal bills committee Wednesday.

One bill would qualify persons other than judges to serve on arbitration boards; the other would remove the requirement that one of the three members of a police commission be a judge or magistrate.

Vernon Singer (L—York Centre) said the bills seem designed to cut away duties for which judges are paid money by the province, and move them to other duties they receive from the federal government.

Under rules of the General Agreement on Tariffs and Trade, the other tariff reductions must be passed on to all other GATT partners, including Canada.

Mr. Fleming told the Commons this will mean "greatly increased prosperity for Canadian exports" which will benefit almost every sector of the Canadian economy.

Officials said there is no clear indication yet whether the tariff cuts will result in savings to the Canadian consumer. The reduction on grapefruit juice for example is to 7½ per cent from 10. But this would be less than one cent on a large can.

The newest move to lowering world trade barriers — the result of tough bargaining at Geneva which began last May — was welcomed by Opposition Leader Diefenbaker and CCF spokesman Erhart Regier.

The tariff cuts between Canada and the U.S. will go into effect 30 days after the two countries give each other formal notice.

The Canadian government also announced that reductions into effect without parliamentary action.

The American reduction—a two-stage move not fully effective for a year—will be carried out under powers given President Kennedy by the Reciprocal Trade Agreements Act.

The president is seeking con-

Recapture Man 15 Minutes After Escape

BARRIE (CP) — A 21-year-old man serving a provincial police Wednesday night but was recaptured 15 minutes later and charged with escaping lawful custody.

Douglas Ross, 21, son of a father of three children, was remanded to March 15.

Ross escaped when a questioning room where he had been taken by provincial police. Provincial and city police searched the north end of Barrie before constables found him in an alley.

Lance- and a 14-year-old girl from Thornbury, who ran away with her father's car in Toronto last Dec. 31, were also questioned later Wednesday when they were found hitchhiking on the highway 27 near here.

The girl was charged as a juvenile delinquency and returned to her home.

Lance, who worked as a railway car checker, was taken to jail at Parry Sound.

British Bank Again Slashes Rates From 6 to 5½ Per Cent

LONDON (Reuters) — The British bank rate today was cut to 5½ from six per cent.

The rate — which is interest charges in Britain—had been six per cent since Nov. 2, 1961.

The bank of England's statement said the cut was made "in the light of the continued strength of sterling in the exchange markets and also the general economic situation."

The reduction was the third since the government's austerity budget of last July which introduced the present controversial "pay pause" and pushed the rate up from five to seven per cent.

The effect will be to further slacken the clamps on the home economy and ease borrowing for investment, especially in the building industry, by making money easier to borrow.

The bank rate is the rate of interest charged to the government-controlled Bank of England. In the light of the continued strength of sterling in the exchange markets and also the general economic situation."

A secondary effect will be to reduce the flow of "hot money" from abroad. This is money which comes from overseas investors to take advantage of high British interest rates. It has been a major factor in the flow of gold from the United States.

Only Fraction Of Seven Billion Trade Affected

Kennedy Asks Congress For Right to Cut More

WASHINGTON (CP) — President Kennedy has launched a fresh appeal for vast new power to reduce American tariffs in the wake of a successful though limited U.S. attempt to break the common market's tariff wall. Canadian and other exporters will benefit from these transatlantic reductions in duties.

Having concluded tariff cuts with Europe and other countries to the extent of some $2,800,000,000 in annual trade, Kennedy emphasized Wednesday his bargaining power now is exhausted.

The real opportunities are still ahead, he told a press conference, but they will not be beyond reach unless Congress passes a strong trade expansion act.

Kennedy spoke as the House ways and means committee prepared public hearings on the Kennedy bill to arm him with authority to eliminate some American tariffs and trim others by as much as 50 per cent across the board. Monday and likely will continue for weeks.

Negotiations Open Tariffs

Under negotiations just completed, the U.S. will extend a 20-per-cent cut on duties on a wide range of commodities over a two-year period in exchange for what the U.S. terms major gr e a t e r concessions obtained from the Common Market. The reduction of 10 per cent each year likely will start in June.

In fact, the Common Market found the American offer so unattractive that at one stage in some 18 months ' of complex Geneva negotiations, bargaining almost collapsed.

Kennedy said the U.S. finally had to breach the peril point—the tariff level beyond which the U.S. Tariff Commission advises that increased imports of a U.S. industry—on some items to help balance European reductions.

Even the president appeared generally content with results, some of his advisers said they didn't do as much business with Canada as they have expected, mainly because Canada remained preoccupied with protection of domestic industry at a time when Britain might be joining the Common Market.

The U.S. is willing to offer a deal on nickel and aluminum—major Canadian exports—but found the Canadians unwilling to provide a sufficiently attractive exchange.

Starts Career as Charwoman, Will Be Millionaire in 3 Years

LONDON (AP) — Sibylla Edmonstone, 18, a sultry beauty who says she'll be a millionaire in three years, got down on her shapely knees Monday to start a career as a charwoman.

She's doing it for fun, she says and because there's so little to occupy her time in her $540-a-month luxury apartment.

Sibylla says she is a niece of the late Marshall Field III, Chicago department store millionaire. That bit of news came as a surprise to her new employer, Mrs. H. W. Brandon.

What with her five children, Mrs. Brandon has a lot of housework for the new young scrublady and was understandably delighted to see Sibylla arrive for the first day of work in a cab.

When she learned that Sibylla was looking forward to acquiring millions on her 21st birthday Mrs. Brandon exclaimed "good gracious me!"

Sibylla's day includes house cleaning in the morning and airing the youngsters in the afternoon. She gets 50 cents an hour plus car fare.

Many Requests for Approval Of Multiple Housing Units

TRENTON — Housing in Trenton is becoming "big business" these days. Requests for approval of sub-division plans and re-zoning of lots for multiple housing units, dealt with by the members of the Trenton and Suburban Planning Board on Tuesday night.

Meeting at the regular monthly board meeting were Chairman Dr. W. A. C. Mc-Donald; board members Mrs. Harriett Simmons, John Forbes, Dick Burnett and Bruce Linhardt; town engineer Eric Aldred; and Mrs. Mildred Smith, secretary to the engineer, Arie Hoorneweg, as clerk-compiroller O. W. Larry, who acts as secretary for the board.

A request that the extension of Prince Charles School, owned by the Downey Construction Co., be allowed to permit the erection of "row" housing was considered. The proposed building, eight in all, are termed "maisonettes," and will be erected on Prince Charles Dr. Each building contains eight, two or twelve single family units and will be connected by a central hall, running the entire length of the structure.

Each unit would rent for around $120 a month.

The consulting firm responsible for drawing up the town's official plan will be asked to guide the board in its decision on the plan.

One thing which must be taken into consideration is the possibility of 100 school children, more or less, might result from the development. The area school, Prince Charles, is already bursting at the seams and the proposed addition of a new school on part of Murray township property on the Sidney road would find itself overcrowded to accommodate the influx of students.

WANTS CHANGE

Stan Kleinecke, developer of the Stanley Heights housing area, came before the board to ask that Fifth Ave., be rezoned to permit the erection of semi-detached dwellings. Mr. Kleinecke said that this type of multiple dwelling will be coming more and more popular, and that he could erect an office one or more lots on the street to suit. Bungaw and side-allowance regulations for the larger units. Originally, the owner of the proposed plan called for single family dwellings on the street.

The board has asked Mr. Kleinecke to submit a drawing of his proposed development before any action on re-zoning is taken.

Mr. Kleinecke also asked that a two-acre area in the vicinity of Glenwood Park and Broken Front Road be re-zoned to allow for the erection of a multiple housing unit. He said that he would have plenty of room to provide playgrounds area, parking space and "perhaps a swimming pool" for the tenants in the building. The board also delayed decision on this item.

On the verge of approving a sub-division plan for an area north of Elmwood Acres, on Monday, board members discovered, to their chagrin, that the area had been designated "monumental" on the official plan map. The town's councillors and engineers will be called into the picture to restrict the board to rectify this situation. It will meet with the board next Tuesday night.

The proposed arrangements to the Elmwood Acres sub-division would contain 25 building lots.

Former Airman Given Two Year Suspended Term

A 22-year-old Hamilton man, Sandro Vanturelli, who has been in custody since the day of his arrest on Feb. 14, was on day placed on a two-year suspended sentence by Magistrate R. C. Jackson after pleading guilty to the theft of approximately $1,000 worth of pneumatic and power equipment taken from the RCAF Station Trenton.

Vanturelli elected to be tried by magistrate's court and had been set at $1,000 cash. He sat a ground crewman at the air force base stealing had been discharged from the service.

OPP Constable Ken William son gave evidence that on Sept. 3rd, a car was observed coming out the air force station and was suspected of containing a stolen tool box and a quantity of gasoline.

The const. said the licence number of the car was taken and it was traced to the accused's residence in Hamilton, 118 Ray Street. Two officers from a Toronto police force acceded to Vanturelli's residence and discovered the tool box and an electric drill were recovered.

As a result of this finding, Vanturelli was brought back to Belleville on January 25. At this time the constable said he became resquainted with the accused and it was at this time that a power unit was recovered in the city valued at $650.

A statement was taken from the accused, who admitted taking an electric saw, valued at $345, a gasoline engine, valued at $46, a power unit, a portable air compressor, worth $2,550, a portable exhaust fan, valued at $80, a three-horse power electric motor valued at $60, tool box and tools and a number of carpenter tools.

The constable said all of the articled been recovered with the exception of the exhaust fan, the one-horse power electric motor, the drill and the tool box.

The value of the articles not recovered was said to be $320. $2 which the accused was asked if he wanted restitution and was given until Sept. to do so.

The magistrate in passing sentence said, "I will point out to you that for this period of two years, if there is any not-a sense, you be brought back here and tried and given a sentence that will be of reform level." "You now have a record and if you get into trouble again, this will be here to face you."

Ancient Map Is Unearthed In Town Office

TRENTON—On Jan. 1, 1883, Trenton was incorporated as a village. In 1907, one-time clerk of the village, Jeremiah Simmons, took pen in hand and drew a map of the village. Recently, the ancient map was unearthed at the municipal office and now holds a place of honor in the council chamber. It declared as to how best preserve the museum piece is pending.

Also among the archives at the town office is a fabric map on which the landholdings of Jeremiah had painted a realistic picture of Trenton in 1842. Dwellings are few and far between in the scene; cedar trees abound, but Trenton did have a bridge, a covered wooden structure stretching across the River Trent.

It is said that pedestrians walked in the centre of the bridge and those who had horse traffic proceeded along either side. This bridge, according to Trenton oldsters, was finally used up until 1915, when the present bridge was erected.

Plan $11,000 Expansion Job At Yacht Club

An $11,000 project which will include the enlargement of visitors' facilities and "give a general brightening up" to the Bay of Quinte Yacht Club was approved this week by the board of directors of the club. The architectural firm of Watson and Wingrove will be in charge of drawing up the specifications and the Watson Company will handle the construction, which will start May 1.

The new addition will double the club's facilities for visiting boating enthusiasts and yachtsmen, with modern shower facilities and enlarged washrooms.

A new foyer and entrance, together with a new roof, will extend the present building's usefulness by well about another 10 feet.

There is also an extensive program of landscaping planned to beautify that area of the park to, the north of the yacht club premises.

Commodore Ernie Coleborne has stated that this project will be the first of a long-range plan of the club to bring better and more facilities to accommodate the club membership and to meet the requirements of an ever increasing number of visitors to Belleville, harbor.

Mr. Coleborne, in commenting on boating activity in this area, stated that it is important for the government to take action on the building of a new dock, similar to the present L-shaped structure, at the southern extremity of the park. He said that every other port in the area had received new docks except Belleville, despite the fact that Belleville was undoubtedly the centre, of boat traffic in the area.

A new dock, he suggested, could also serve as a breakwater and prevent some of the turbulence which is experienced at the harbor mouth in a west wind, besides providing much needed docking area for visiting boats.

Cancer Fund Drive Opens In April

The local unit of the Canadian Cancer Society will be holding its annual campaign for funds in April this year. The campaign and house-to-house canvass will begin on April 2nd, campaign chairman Fred Deacon announced at a recent executive meeting of the unit, held in its quarters at 224 Pinnacle St. President Clarence D. Purzen conducted the meeting.

Mrs. Ed. Long, chairman of the Women's Service, reported on dressings. Number of patients being served by the Belleville unit is increasing as the public becomes aware of the facilities being offered by the society. An invitation was extended to the ladies of the branches at Deseronto, Tweed, Madoc, Marmora and Stirling to drop in next Monday afternoon and participate in the preparation of the dressings.

Miss Mildred Hall, chairman of education, gave a resume of films on cancer being shown to different women's groups in the Quinte district, also distributing and sending literature out of the city.

Films have been shown to Rednersville Women's Institute, namely "Time and Two Women." "The Scoular Case" and "Outlaw Within."

On March 7th, Mountain View Women's Institute were shown "Time and Two Women," and "The Scoular Case."

Major Acton of the Salvation Army requested 250 pamphlets, "To Smoke or Not to Smoke" for the youth conference to be held in Oshawa, on March 19th and 19th.

Mr. Fred Deacon and Miss Rita MacDonald attended the campaign and staff conference in Toronto.

Mr. E. M. Lush, president of Deseronto branch was welcomed and participated in the discussion on how best to serve the cancer patients in each community.

TWO LEGAL BILLS

representations, either to the committee or to the whole House.

Elmer Sopha (L — Sudbury) said he was anxious that magistrates be removed from commissions because their service as magistrates is paid and a man was expected to judge an officer's testimony in court and act as employer at the same time.

Provincial Secretary John Yaremko accused Mr. Winterseyer of misleading the committee.

Mr. Sopha claimed the meeting had become a forum for vilification of his party and accused the cabinet ministers of trying to ram the bills through the meeting.

"That's a lie!" shouted Mr. Yaremko.

The legislature devoted Wednesday entirely to committee meetings. Sittings of the House will resume today with afternoon and evening sessions.

The education committee passed a bill which would make private schools in Ontario subject to inspection by the education department.

Such schools have previously been entirely free from control.

According to the bill all private schools must be registered with the department by Sept. 1—or close. After registration, they will be subject to inspection.

G. E. Hall, assistant inspector of elementary education, said there has been an increase in private schools—which numbered 129 in 1960—mainly because a number of Canadians have opened schools "to perpetuate certain aspects of their way of living."

He said most operators of private schools are conscientious, but there are some "unscrupulous" individuals who try to make money out of such schools.

To Robert Nixon (L—Brant), Mr. Duffin said consultants had been received from persons in Nova Scotia regarding the quality of a correspondence school located in Toronto, but which offered courses only outside of Ontario.

He said control of adult education through correspondence courses may have to be done under the Criminal Code.

Another bill approved by the committee will allow habitual truants, together with their parents, to be brought before a juvenile court judge for counselling and correction. Under existing legislation, a child had to be dealt with under the Truancy Schools Act and, if found guilty, sent to a training school.

Wingham Radio And TV Station Are Destroyed

WINGHAM, Ont. (CP) — Fire today swept the Wingham CKNX radio and television station after a gas explosion and explosion rocked the building.

Cause of the explosion was not immediately determined.

Officials declined to give an immediate estimate of loss but an estimate of the value of the buildings housing the radio and television studios has been placed at $500,000 to $300,000.

The film and tape records, films and all studio equipment were destroyed.

Executives of the stations were to meet to find a new location where radio operations could be continued. The CBC has offered its services to the television station which plans to broadcast taped programs from the CBC relay transmitter at Formosa six miles northeast of here.

But CKNX radio continued to broadcast from a mobile unit parked nearby while firemen from two departments, Wingham and nearby Teeswater, battled the flames.

Charles-Millard Coming Out Of Retirement

TORONTO (CP)—Charles Millard, former international labor leader and old-time CCF campaigner, is coming out of retirement to re-enter politics.

In an interview today Mr. Millard said he would let his name stand for nomination as New Democratic Party candidate in the federal riding of York-Humber.

The 65-year-old union leader said he would announce his decision to the York-Humber NDP executive officially "within a few days." The executive earlier invited him unanimously to be the party's candidate.

Mr. Millard sat in the Ontario legislature as CCF member for York West for two terms, from 1943 to 1945 and from 1948 to 1951. He was defeated in 1951 and 1956.

WAS SPOKESMAN

In 1943 he was one of the party's chief spokesmen when the CCF elected 34 members against 38 Progressive Conservatives and became the official opposition under E. B. Jolliffe.

He was one of the eight CCF survivors of the 1945 election which the Conservatives won by a landslide.

Mr. Millard became a union leader almost 20 years ago and was first president of the United Auto Workers local in Oshawa, a congressional approval for broader powers to bargain for reciprocal tariff reductions with other world trading countries—a development which presumably would touch off another major round of GATT tariff bargaining.

MORE MAY FOLLOW

However, the present round of tariff negotiations has not run its course, and Mr. Fleming indicated that Canada may be making further tariff cuts in return for concessions from other countries.

Under the Canadian - U.S. agreement, Canada will cut 61 items on American goods which averaged about $63,000,000 annually in the 1958-60 period.

In return, the U.S. will reduce 74 tariff items on Canadian exports which averaged $65,000,000 a year during 1958-60.

The American reductions, most of them amounting to 20 per cent, will affect products such as synthetic rubber, electric stoves and washing machines, industrial compressors, furs, salt cod and herring, and simple synthetic pig iron and metal railway cars.

The Canadian reductions vary widely in amount. Tariffs on base metals—such as copper and zinc—will be reduced 50 per cent. Others, such as fishhooks, oak and douglas fir timber, diesel engines, rough castings of iron and steel, grapefruit juice, shrimps and a number of paper products.

Filling Pot Holes Quickly Big Saving to Corporation

Local motorists undoubtedly appreciate the gesture, but the continuing program of the public works department in filling pot holes in city pavements is being actually done for another reason.

The reason is financial, in that filling the holes as they occur the water and thaw minimizes further damage to the pavement.

City Engineer Malcolm Turnbull points out that the contention of pot holes, water and frost can and does play havoc with the pavements.

If the pot holes are not kept filled, water gets in and freezes, causing further damage to the street.

"So our program of trying to keep the pot holes filled is not entirely for the benefit of the motorists," commented the engineer.

Mr. Turnbull noted the public works pot hole fillers are kept busy throughout the winter whenever the temperature is above 32 degrees.

Sealing of cracks in the city pavements is also being carried out when weather conditions permit.

said, "there's something wrong with it.

"Actually, we're in favor of completely duty-free trade in this field, for us, it would then come down to stating fewer grades of paper, but with longer runs."

E. H. Walker, president of General Motors of Canada Ltd., said the 35-per-cent tariff reduction on cars entering the U.S. will not improve the chances of Canadian car makers selling their products south of the border.

U.S. plants already are producing cars at lower cost than their Canadian subsidiaries, he said.

Ian F. McRae, chairman of Canadian General Electric Co. Ltd., said the reduced tariff on electric stoves and washing machines throughout the world whenever the temperature is above 32 degrees.

Sealing of cracks in the city pavements is also being carried out when weather conditions permit.

CBC Under Fire Again

Richard Jackson, The Ontario Intelligencer's Ottawa correspondent, noted on this page the other day that Progressive Conservative backbenchers, as a group, have little use for the CBC.

Their main criticism stems from a conviction that the CBC shows political bias in its public affairs programs. Mr. Jackson examined some of the reasons why this may be so. Frankly, though, this form of criticism of the CBC does not concern us so much as does criticism of its dramatic programs. If all the public affairs programs on the CBC were watered down so that they were innocuous, or even eliminated entirely, we personally feel we would have ample opportunity to inform himself on these matters, through the daily and periodical press. Eliminate dramatic shows, or mold them on the familiar pattern of U.S. commercial TV, and many Canadians would be virtually isolated from significant theatrical performances.

For this reason, a week ago, when the Festival program Monday evening presented an original play "Bousille the Just" by the celebrated Montreal French-Canadian, Gratien Gelinas, with the author in the title role, we paid particular attention to it. It was a devastating attack on hypocrisy and those who flaunt the appearance of religious devotion without any respect for the true spirit of religion—contrasted with the true humility and deep religious feeling which can make a person of weaker intellect not merely lovable but truly noble. Controversial—yes, as great theatre should be. But anti-religious, filth—in our opinion—it was not.

So what happens? Sure enough, the anticipated protest appears, in a letter to the editor of the Peterborough Examiner; the producers were labelled morons and not merely their work but they themselves called anti-religious and filth.

We have only one bit of advice to readers: never accept any criticism of the CBC programs at their face value unless you have happened to see the program itself. Some of the critics would like all plays patterned after "Leave It to Beaver" and "Dennis the Menace."

Russia's "Quebecs"

The scientific-minded have on more than one occasion in the past pointed out that Canada and Russia have much in common. Their geographical location gives them a common interest in many problems pertaining to living and working in cold climates. Both have vast areas of sparsely populated wasteland. In their forests, in their mineral wealth and in their vast plains, call them prairies or steppes, they are much alike.

Now here comes Dr. Anastasy Arountunian, Russian ambassador to Canada, to point out another similarity, this time in a field in which the average Canadian probably considered his native land was unique. The existence of different cultures side-by-side in the same country should for pose a problem for education, he observes, not an insurmountable one. In the USSR all education from first grade to university is in the native language, with courses in Russian being obligatory where the native language is not Russian and a foreign language being taught in Russian-speaking areas. The speech is a nation with not one but several Quebecs ought to signal effectively some English speaking Canadians who have regarded La Belle Province as Canada's cross.

Provocation the Aim

It is generally accepted that the terrorist tactics adopted by the so-called Secret Army in Algeria are aimed at provoking Moslems into retaliation, in the hope that the ensuing strife may delay implementation of the peace agreement reached between General de Gaulle and the Algerian nationalists.

If any proof of this theory were needed, it appears to have been provided by the Secret Army raid on a prison in Oran. The terrorists were in complete control of the prison and could have massacred as many of the 1,850 Moslem inmates as they desired. Instead they set off an explosion, resulting in a fire, and then locked the prison gates. Leaving the inmates imprisoned in a burning building was an atrocity which might reasonably be expected to provoke the Moslems into reprisals, but murdering these prisoners in cold blood, while it would certainly have enraged their compatriots beyond endurance, might easily have led to a revulsion amongst the members of the regular French Army.

Physical Fitness and One Syllable Words Interest MPs

BY RICHARD JACKSON
(from The Ontario Intelligencer's Ottawa Bureau)

OTTAWA . . . Notes off the reportorial cuff . . .

. . . The physical fitness fad that has been turning Parliament Hill's big Centre Block into a sort of unofficial pertime gym for MPs who aspire to become musclemen, is getting just a little out of hand.

Ever since Prime Minister Diefenbaker, with his long walks and short diets, made physical fitness politically fashionable, almost everybody in the whole House of Commons has been confessing to active participation in athletic enterprises.

Variously the MPs ski, snowshoe, trail hike, swim, walk, ride horseback, row canoe, play tennis golf, bowl, curl, and, catching the fitness fever, even the chair-borne "tatties" like Finance Defence Headquarters have gone for the hard grind of the Air Force's physically demanding "XBX" drill.

Fitness has reached the point now where it's getting frightening, the way Ernie Campbell, the Conservative MP for Lambton-Kent (and probably the fittest man on Parliament Hill) tells it.

In his 39th year, he skips rope, 100 times without a miss, fast, and does 30 pushups — not the ordinary, sag-in-the-middle kind, but the kind most people do, but a fancy muscleman variety on which he lifts the air and his whole body stiffed and lowered in balance.

WORMS AT WORK

The Air Force "XBX" drill, which even the ordinarily fit must find hard, is reported too soft for Mr. Campbell.

Transport Minister Chevrier's fame apartment and his Centre Block office, morning and night, he walks one block to and runs the next for a mile each way.

"I'd sprint the whole 40 blocks," he reported the other day, "except that some people might think I'd flipped."

Fitness is not confining to come by casually.

He worms at it, by both the things he does and more, important perhaps, doesn't do.

Food he consumes sparingly, liquor and tobacco he leaves strictly alone.

Breakfast daily is a small serving of fruit, a glass of milk, three crackers and a raw egg.

Lunch he doesn't eat. "Who needs it?"

Dinner is "the usual thing," but always skeletal in serving.

With Lambton-Kent's Campbell setting the pace the rest of field in the fitness fad. Parliament Hill seems in a fair way to be producing a team for Olympic team or at least an edge in the Pepsi-Cola . . .

ONE SYLLABLE WORDS

In this short-tempered preelection year, Mr. Diefenbaker is no danger of becoming namby-pamby in his daily political and working words.

To the fine art of calling a spade a spade he has been being caught out as being "unparliamentary" by the Speaker, a cunning contribution has been made by Works Minister Walker, the Diefenbaker Cabinet's expert.

In the Commons the other day, he had this to say about J. W. "Jolly Jawn" Pickersgill, the Liberal Northumberland, and no overlocked airy himself:

"We on this side of the Commons have a one-syllable word starting with 'P' to adequately describe the political member for Bonavista-Twillingate . . . but we won't put it on the record."

The dictionary offers a wide choice of one-syllable words starting with P—pox, pill, poop, punk and the like. . . . But Walker couldn't be blunt—spoken Walker could hardly have anything in mind such words as prize, pride, pluck and power.

There is a small selection of other one-syllable words starting with "P" to adequately describe the political member for Bonavista-Twillingate . . . but we won't put it on the record.

Walker, a skilled lawyer, tough debater and low-boiled-barred in-fighter, manages with smooth and smiling dexterity to use such verbal "curves" around Mr. Speaker and outo Hansard to spear his foes . . . often enough to persuade them that it is the better part of valor not to antagonize him.

Just precisely which word he had in mind to exactly describe Mr. Pickersgill is something he has confided in might few, and so has almost everybody, including the Prime Minister, guessing.

The first wondering out loud in a public speech the other day it might be "pest."

Not even—close.

But perhaps Prime Minister Diefenbaker wasn't really trying.

Walker is an expert at calling a spade a spade. He has a five-letter word without actually spelling it out.

Had Bought Tickets, Could Not See Game

Editor
Ontario Intelligencer

Enclosed are two tickets to Tuesday night's game between the Police and the Firemen. These tickets were bought in good faith to support a worthy cause. Standing quietly, the arena there were many people with small children who came to see this game and no doubt this referee, Rocket Richard.

These people were treated to the most shameful display of anti-sportsmanship I've seen in quite sometime. Many had bundled children in warm clothes and the children were all excited over the prospect of a night's recreation, only to be disappointed by the sight of closed doors.

Obviously, members of the Shrine Club in their effort to get the most for their money, neglected to consider the fact that tickets must have been printed for more people than the arena could hold.

Many people will remember the incident received with the "Shriners" come to raise money for crippled Canadian children. I for one hope they do not do it in a worthy cause and should be suspended from not in this manner.

Perhaps the public apology should be made by these "Shriners" to the city of Belleville for the disgrace certain obvious mistakes regarding crippled children and not the amount of tickets sold. It is hoped that a lesson has been learned.

I am not writing for myself, but for many people whose comments I overheard. No doubt they were angry and rightly so, but couldn't vent most of all for the sake of those children who certainly did not gain any esteem in the minds of some children, the men who will support them in the future.

Keep the tickets.

KEEP ON LOOKING

Some time ago one of my grandchildren sent me a comic postcard. It showed the picture of a funny little animal, presented in the care to the grandchild, and above were the words, "I don't know why you said it, but keep on looking."

This is more — and better — than a motto. It is a good philosophy of life. Sometimes we encounter people whom we are inclined to dislike on first sight. Even more often we meet people who are drab and uninteresting. It is hard for say of us, of course, to endure a braggart, or any all inclined to form our opinion of people on the basis of feelings of them. We are not willing to keep on looking.

But if we do keep on looking we frequently find qualities which attract and please us. Any person of drab personality has an interest in life which you may find entrancing. Any braggart may be a self sacrificing hero at heart. Any man may find a heavy personal burden and has the courage to put himself aside for the welfare of someone else.

Keep on looking! Frequently you will encounter some good quality far above anything you ever suspected that person of possessing. It may be hard to see anything attractive or good in that person — or in that idea or that movement — but keep on looking.

Supplementing the activities of Provincial Police in the district, six new O.P.P. constables have been added to the No. 2 District Headquarters here today. The addition of six new constables will enable the provincial force to inaugurate a full night shift, two officers being on duty for the full 24 hours, as a night shift is to be introduced. Each proceeding along Victoria Ave. splashed a young lady with the surface water to such an extent that she was forced to return home to change her clothes.

So generous was the response to the appeal of the Navy League for books and magazines for those in the naval service, that the members of St. Julien Chapter were able to ship 1,000 of these articles to Halifax.

This morning Belleville, and district were attempting to dig out of the heaviest snowfall of the winter and were fighting a losing battle. Traffic had begun to fall last evening continued with almost unabated force to this morning when it is estimated that fifteen inches of fluffy snow had piled or zened a strange sight as the heavy drifts were high in the more sheltered places. County roads are blocked and telephone and electric wires bended under the weight of the snowfall. Many small country branches of trees gave way under the weight of the snow. Scores of men were put to work by the city authorities to clear the streets of the snow, but the snow continued to fall. Merchants on Front and Bridge Street progressing slowly in clearing the entrances to their stores.

All snow plows in this district were returned to Toronto a week ago last Saturday by order of Hon. Hugh Guthrie, instructions from the Department of Highways and as a consequence the roads could not be cleared of the unexpected heavy snowfall. Traffic was impeding through to Belleville but are considerably behind time.

Wed Women Seem to Resent Bachelors

By SYDNEY J. HARRIS

Purely Personal Prejudices:

Married women resent bachelors, as an affront to their whole sex: but this is a misplaced feeling, for some men decline to marry for the best reasons—for women, not out of contempt. A man who recognizes that he is not good marriage material is doing a service to himself and to the women he is staying single.

Greatness in public life is so rare because those qualities that drive a man to the top — aggressiveness, energy, tenacity and so on — are rarely coupled with patience, restraint and mercy, which are necessary for true greatness of leadership; and the whole political problem of power can almost be resolved into the psychological problem of temperament.

What binds many a female friendship going for years is a discussing the character and flaws of common acquaintances; men's friendships thrive on mutual likes, women's, on mutual dislikes.

The basic art of conversation is how-dreary-life-is, and the more you are through.

Psychologists say it's even safe to say that the more a man has become the prevailing mod, ern heresy, rather than faith in God or any conventional belief; but as Nietzsche observed nearly a century ago "A casual stroll through a psychiatric asylum shows that faith does not prove anything."

It is impossible to learn anything important about anyone until we get him to disagree flatly with us; it is only in contradiction that character is disclosed — which is why autocratic employers remain so ignorant about their subordinates.

The voice of the people may not be the voice of God, but it is the voice of any side, once in control, does not become the voice of the Devil. Play Pen Useful Invention Providing Properly Used

By JOSEPH G. MOLNER, M.D.

Dear Dr. Molner: What do you think of keeping a 20-month-old, perfectly normal baby in a play pen all day? He is wild when he gets out. — Mrs. B.C.

I don't approve. The baby may be normal, but what about the parents? Are they keeping the little fellow cooped up that way purely for their own convenience?

Mind you, I have nothing against a play pen. It is a useful invention, properly used. For the very little fellows, it's a means of giving them a safe place to begin creeping, learning to haul themselves up on their feet, and so on.

A period in the play pen gives a mother a chance to get some of her housework done without wondering whether Baby is getting into something that will hurt him.

It also protects the window curtains and such. (And I've known of people who put their furniture, too, in the play pen, to keep the very little ones from tipping it over, picking the ornaments off and marring their little hands on the lights.)

But for several reasons, too much confinement in a play pen is harmful.

A child 20 months, on the average, should walk alone, sit in a small chair by himself, be fed solid food, and interested in toys.

He needs to practise his walking and his balance, learn to fall on his little bottom and get up again, and have a chance of the energy in that growing body.

If a child, kept all day in a pen, becomes "wild" when let out in the afternoon — is it any wonder? I'd begin to worry if he didn't. He's making his protest against not being allowed to grow. Take him out and let him again.

Let him work off his steam during the day, so he'll be tired enough by the second asleep at 6 p.m. Don't keep him during an afternoon nap, or mid-day nap.

Finally, what about the frustrated resentment that builds up from being penned too long? We wonder where excess aggressiveness comes from in some children. It can come from too tight a rein, or too much confinement.

Give a little man of 30 months the chance to start growing up!

Dear Dr. Molner: I am a man close to 50. Recently microscopic blood was found in my urine. One doctor suggested going to the hospital for a cystoscopic examination. Another recommended a kidney X-ray which he called an "intravenous pyelogram." What is your opinion? — G.M.

I'm sure your either would be useful, and blood in the urine always should be investigated. But if you have microscopic quantities, that's fine, because people catching the trouble in whatever it is, earlier than would if you could see the blood.

My opinion is that the cystoscopic examination gives more detailed information, and it permits visual observation of the whole bladder, and allows urine to be collected from each kidney separately, helping to determine the exact source of bleeding. Then a dye is injected into the kidneys to aid in giving the same data as the intravenous pyelogram.

Note to J.A.: This "glassy" look might well occur when the person has some form of epilepsy. The medication is to prevent violent convulsions.

A great many people see a town in the same manner as they judge human beings — by riding over the surface.

The car or bus may show many beautiful and interesting places, but you don't know a town until you know the people who live in it and what they have given of themselves to make it what it is.

To see a town, you must talk with those who live in it.

I recall driving through one particularly interesting town. I thought I had seen about all that was worth seeing, when I stopped at the tiny store and began talking to a young man who had lived in the town all his life. The fun began. I put on double interest for me when I learned about then and women who had made so much to make the town interesting.

THE PACKSACK

By GREGORY CLARK

At the theatre the other night, and some newly revealed illness, out in the lobby between the acts, I ran into a young fellow I had not seen for two or three years, and I was shocked to find him badly changed. He was used to be a dashing, extremely well-dressed sort of cavalier about town, a bit of a beau at the nighter, a ringside seater, the kind you see head waiters escorting to reserved tables.

But here he was looking seedy. His eyes seemed larger than formerly, as he stared about eagerly. And his coat was heavy. I got the idea that he didn't. He's making his protest against not being allowed to grow. Take him out and let him again.

Let him work off his steam during the day, so he'll be tired enough by the second asleep at 6 p.m. Don't keep him during an afternoon nap, or mid-day nap.

Special Hospital Committee Will Seek Further Facts

Elected representatives from city and county council on the special hospital committee formed to look into means for providing necessary hospital accommodation for the Belleville area, will seek further facts from the Belleville General Hospital Board and also inquire how to go about financing the project.

This was the result of a special committee meeting held yesterday when it was decided by elected representatives from the two municipalities who are members of the committee.

"It was a good fact finding meeting and I feel that progress was made", noted Aldermen Ross Bailey, chairman of the city council finance committee.

Hospital board members read a new hospital on a new site is required as the long term solution to hospital bed requirements for the Belleville area.

The general opinion of the board although this apparently is not unanimous is that further expansion at the present hospital would be uneconomical and would not fill the long term need.

START WITH 40 BEDS

The suggested plan of the hospital board is that a 60-bed nucleus of a new hospital be constructed now with this to be added to as the need demanded.

Overall cost of the entire project is expected to be in the neighborhood of $4,000,000.

But, as Alderman Bailey suggests "you don't jump into a four million dollar expenditure without having some idea of where the money is coming from".

This is the reason for further facts being sought by the special committee from the Hospital board.

Attending yesterday's meeting were Mayor A. M. Haig and Alderman Bailey, George Wishart and Ben Corke representing the city with Warden Herbert Terry, and Reeves J. N. Brown of Sidney, Earl Sager, Madoc township, Percy Hamilton, Sidney, Thomas Burnside, Madoc village and William Shannon of Marmora village, along with Clerk Treasurer Cecil Bateman, representing Hastings County.

PROPOSED LINE

fine in concept in that it sought to improve an area "that had been passed by in the boom economic growth."

On detailed examination, however, the project gave rise to "very grave doubts."

Mr. Fisher contended that the CNR "would have no part of this enterprise on its own" if had considered building the line but rejected the idea on economic grounds.

He argued that the volume of pulpwood and wood chips moved on the railway would be only a "pittance."

The motion by Hazen Argue (L—Assiniboia) calling on the government to extend the scope of the Prairie Farm Assistance Act was "talked out."

Not having come to a vote in the single hour, allotted to private members' business, the motion went to the bottom of a list and may not come up again in this session of Parliament.

Mr. Argue said his proposal would provide a basic minimum income for Prairie farmers in bad-crop years. This basic minimum would be $1,600 for a 400-acre farm.

Jack H. Horner (PC—Acadia) questioned whether Mr. Argue had the support of the Liberal party in seeking Commons approval of his motion.

AIM AT VOTES

"If I will support," interjected Liberal Frank Benidickson, Mr. Benidickson, member for Kenora-Rainy River.

Arnold Peters (CCF—Timiskaming) said there is great resentment in the western farmers to support eastern farmers despite the support which eastern farmers long to those in the west.

He said most western MP's would oppose an extension of the Prairie Farm Assistance Act to all Canada.

Presbyterian Church Growing In This Region

KINGSTON — Encouraging increases and improvements in all aspects of the church's work were reported to the regular meeting of the Presbytery of Kingston of the Presbyterian Church in Canada, held in St. Andrew's Church, Kingston, on Tuesday.

The statistical report was presented by the Presbytery clerk, the Rev. R. A. Sinclair of Madoc. Communicant membership, church school enrolment, number of households and number of Elders showed increases up to 9 per cent. The 21 congregations in the Presbytery, ranging in size from 10 members at Camden East to over 900 in St. Andrew's, Kingston, raised a total of $159,230 in 1951, an increase of 14 per cent over 1950. Of this amount, $145,515 was for local purposes; an increase of 18 per cent. $24,020 was for the budget fund of the Presbyterian Church in Canada, an increase of 10 per cent, and $6,623 was for the Women's Missionary Society, an increase of 6 per cent. Overall increase was for other missionary and benevolent purposes.

The Reverend Malcolm C. Young, minister of St. Andrew's Church, Gananoque, was elected Moderator of the Presbytery, succeeding the Rev. M. V. Putnam of St. Andrew's Church, Kingston.

Special Presbytery functions planned for the immediate future include a service of ordination and induction of Elders and recognition of the ministry at St. Columba Church in Belleville on March 25th, the opening of the basement unit of the new Presbyterian Church at Roslin on April 29, a service of ordination to the ministry of Mr. Zander Dunn at Amherst Island, on May 1, and a youth rally in Picton in April.

The congregations of Amherst Island and Amherstview were joined together into one pastoral charge.

Senior Citizens' Zone Gathering To Be Held Here

The regular monthly meeting of the Belleville Senior Citizens' Club was held on Wednesday evening in the Recreation Centre on Pinnacle Street.

C. L. Hyde, the president, was in the chair. A brief sing-song was enjoyed under leadership of Mrs. T. Thorn, with Mrs. A. Shirley at the piano.

The secretary, Mrs. M. Drummond, read the minutes of the February meeting. The treasurer's report was quite satisfactory.

Mrs. Gist, the chairman of the visiting committee, reported on various members ill, who had been visited or otherwise remembered. Three new members were introduced and received into the club.

The president reported the coming to Belleville of the East Central Zone Conference to be held in Moira Secondary School all day on Saturday, April 7; a conference of special significance to all members of Senior Citizens' Clubs and to which all members are cordially invited.

The program was devoted to euchre in which nearly all participated. The winners were: ladies' first, Mrs. N. Calhcart; second, Mrs. Dowson and Mrs. Gist; men's first, Mr. F. Edgar and second, Mrs. M. Wanamaker, substituting for Mr. Kemleman. The door prize winner was Mrs. Bowman.

The refreshment committee served delicious refreshments.

'Lines on Life'

By Dr. Stuart M. Rosenberg

"Love thy neighbor" is honest?

The commandment doesn't read that that way but unless you mean this for, the larger point is clearly lost in confusion.

Love without freedom can result in security, tyranny. If the one we claim to love is really tied firmly to our power and control.

Only if our love is given freely and may be freely received can those whom we say we love retain their uniqueness, and maintain their personal integrity.

Too often, we exploit love as a false, unacceptable, way of expressing our desire to control and dominate the lives of others. The child who never marries because his mother's love is all he thinks he needs — has been duped, not loved. The husband who does his wife's bidding, not because he wants to, but because his feeling of love has been replaced by a false sense of duty — is no lover, but a de-humanized robotized slave.

Love — or real love — seeks no coercion, no authority, no military power. It desires no overnight popularity, rather, it finds reward in the self-fulfillment of the beloved.

Parents ought never confuse love with suppression of the child's individuality, or the need for the younger one to be someone other than the elder.

When we want to have it our way and refuse to appeal to reason and common sense, we usually turn out in hysterical, dramatic scenes which sometimes end with some such spiteful punch line:

"You don't love me!" But why should anyone be expected to love you, if your love is based on fear, compulsion, or even uncivil, obedience. Better forget that your "lover" now and then, and come closer to telling the real truth of your desire.

And even those who "love" the world — their neighbors, strangers, according to Christ Scriptural imperative — must learn to love with freedom.

When we do love your neighbor — and how? When he thinks as you do, prays as you do, votes as you do, acts as you do! If so, your love is not love — it is hate for differences, inverted as love for similarity.

The real test of our protestations comes when we let him be what he must be, what he himself — and love him for what he is. Not for what he isn't.

For love is a two-way street and the traffic has the right of way in the direction it is travelling. When we start playing the traffic — or the policeman — by changing the movement our way, we have lost control. We may be speaking softly, but our big stick is showing.

Separatists Denied Guns

MONTREAL (CP) — Members of La Renaissance Nationale, the leading Quebec separatist organization, have been denied permission to carry guns.

The group, charged with a number of minor thefts from their Montreal office, asked provincial police about the chance of carrying firearms.

"The only reason for us refusing to issue them permits is that they haven't any justifiable reasons for carrying firearms," a spokesman said.

Suggests Ontario Imitate Alberta's Pay-as-Go Plan

By THE CANADIAN PRESS

A member of the Alberta legislature suggested Wednesday that Ontario might be by imitation other provinces — might well benefit from following Alberta's policy of pay-as-you-go financing.

Ira McLaughlin (SC—Grand Prairie) said the policy is saving Alberta's taxpayers millions of dollars in debt charges. He spoke during the budget debate in the Alberta legislature.

People who say oil has made the policy possible, he said, don't stop to think that Alberta's revenues from natural resources "are only a few bits compared with Ontario's, yet Ontario goes merrily on with its never-ceasing borrowing".

"In Ontario they cry about their taxes, yet when you tell them they could help themselves by following Alberta's example, they shrug their shoulders and say, 'well, things would be different over there'."

Mr. McLaughlin said the Social Credit government of Premier Ernest Manning has eliminated provincial social-services, health, unemployment, forest, amusement and wild-land taxes while reducing motor vehicle fees, exempting farm trucks from the gasoline tax, cancelling sales taxes, and discontinuing over-all gasoline taxes to the point where they are the lowest in Canada.

RATE TRADE POLICIES

Developments in other provincial fields:

Victoria—Trade and industry Minister Robert Sommer said that while there was no lack of investor interest in British Columbia, Ottawa's trade policies, rather, than encouraging industrial expansion, have left Canada in a vast state of confusion. "Canada is the most unbalanced country for manufacturing trade of all international traders in the world at this moment."

Toronto—All private schools in Ontario will have to register with the education department by Sept. 1 or cease operations under a bill passed by the legislature's education committee.

G. L. Duffin, assistant superintendent of elementary education, told the committee private and most private schools often religious groups—are simply "corner stores." There are a few individuals who are trying to make money out of private schools and who are quite unscrupulous.

Quebec—Montreal city councillor Raymond Mondor told the Quebec legislature's legislation bills committee a racket is issuing taxicab permits is thriving in the city. He said taxi permits are sold "five, 10, 15, 20 times" for up to $10,000 a

Women Demand PM Ask Kennedy to Call off U.S. Plans for Nuclear Testing

OTTWA (CP)—A delegation of 250 outspoken women demanded Wednesday that the Canadian government try to persuade President Kennedy to call off United States plans for nuclear testing in the atmosphere.

The women, some pushing baby carriages and others holding small children, crowded into the largest committee room on Parliament Hill to present their demand to Prime Minister Diefenbaker, External Affairs Minister Green and other cabinet ministers.

Most of them came from Montreal aboard a special train chartered by the Voice of Women organiztion.

Mrs. Therese Casgrain of Montreal read in French from a brief outlining the group's demands that Canada renounce nuclear weapons and take part in a U.N. disarmament club of nations proposed by Sweden.

Its main proposal was that Mr. Diefenbaker immediately ask Mr. Kennedy to reconsider his decision" on renewed testing.

The loudest applause of the meeting was touched off by an unidentified woman who said that if the U.S. goes ahead with its tests "all the people in this room would like to see a protest from Canada on that subject."

MAKE NO PROMISES

The prime minister and Mr. Green said Canada is doing all it can to promote peace and end nuclear explosions, but they made no commitments on any of the women's proposals.

Both stressed that Russia was to blame for breaking the no-test period that the West could not afford to let its military power lag behind the Soviet.

Mrs. Helen Tucker of Toronto, president of the Voice of Women asked Mr. Green if new tests would not accelerate the arms race. The minister said that might happen.

Mrs. Fred Davis of Toronto asked if it was worth testing to achieve only minor technical improvements in nuclear arms. Mr. Green said only experts could say if new tests would yield such "minimum value."

One woman suggested that a "thrill of hope" would run through the world if the U.S. announced the test plan.

Mr. Green said he still holds hope that talks at Geneva will accomplish a test-ban agreement in time to stop new U.S. blasts.

"Don't be pessimistic," he advised.

A French-Canadian Pie With Welsh Touch Wins

MONTREAL (CP) — Mrs. Colette Beer, petite, brunette mother of two pre-schoolers, won first prize in the 100th National Salon of Agriculture's queen-of-the-kitchen contest for what she describes as "a French-Canadian pie with a Welsh touch."

Her husband Peter—a singer and drummer in Montreal night clubs—is a Welsh immigrant with a passion for sage and thyme, so Mrs. Beer regularly incorporates both in her cooking. Her prize-winning pie was no exception.

In the competition, at the week-long exhibition, Mrs. Beer won a mink coat, a radio-phonograph stereo combination and an electric stove.

A French-Canadian from the Eastern Townships area of Quebec, Mrs. Beer's hobbies include collecting cookbooks in different languages, taking evening courses in ceramics, and sewing. Her children are aged two and four.

Her recipe for tourtiere:

One pound minced pork, 1 small onion, 1 clove of garlic, minced, ½ teaspoon salt, ½ teaspoon thyme, ½ teaspoon sage, ¼ teaspoon dry mustard, ½ teaspoon cloves, ½ cup water, and 1 small cooked potato, mashed.

Mix all the ingredients except the potato in a casserole dish. Bring to the boiling point and allow it to cook uncovered for 25 minutes or until the surplus water is reduced. Add the cooked potato and mix together well. Place in an unbaked pastry shell and cover with top pastry in which slashes have been made. Seal the edges and bake at 400 degrees for 10 minutes. Reduce the heat to 350 and bake 20 minutes longer or until the crust is golden.

Pastry: Ingredients are 2 ½ cups pre-sifted flour, 1 teaspoon salt, ¾ cup lard, 5 ½ tablespoons cold water.

Measure 2 cups of the flour with the salt. Add the lard, cutting it in with two knives until the pieces are the size of not too thin.

small peas. Put the remaining ¼ cup flour in a small bowl and gradually add the cold water and mix until smooth. Add this to the first mixture, then combine with a fork. Form it into a ball, wrap in waxed paper and place in the refrigerator for not more than ½ hour. Then roll out the pastry,

Many Purpose Cake

by Mary Moore

I am sure every cook has her own favorite butter layer cake (sort of a good old reliable) that she uses as a basis for birthday cakes or to put together and frost in a dozen different ways. This is my well-tried sure-fire version. (like to make it a day (or even two) ahead of a celebration, for it keeps well. Then it's not so much of a project to decorate as it when I'm getting the rest of a meal together.

THREE-EGG CAKE:

Separate yolks and whites of 3 eggs. Beat whites until stiff and add ½ cup sugar. Set aside until needed. Measure shortening into mixing bowl and allow to stand at room temperature to become soft. Grease two 8-inch layer cake tins, and line bottoms with waxed paper. Grease again. Preheat oven to 375 deg. Fahr. Heat in double boiler 1 cup plus 2 tablespoons milk. Add ½ cup sugar and stir until sugar is dissolved. Set aside to cool slightly. Sift together 2¼ cup sifted flour, 4 teaspoons baking powder and 1 teaspoon salt. Cream shortening until fluffy and add 1 teaspoon almond extract. Gradually add ½ cup sugar, then add egg yolks, beating until very light. Fold in dry ingredients (about ¼ of each at a time) alternately with milk and sugar mixture (which should be slightly warm). When all mixed, beat for 1 minute. Fold in beaten whites, just enough to blend. Turn into prepared cake tins, spreading batter evenly. Bake 25-30 minutes. Remove from oven and leave in tins for 5 minutes. Then turn out on wire cake rack to cool.

Dinner Menus

THURSDAY

SUNDAY: (Guests)

Roast Pork with Small Apple Pancakes (see Monday); Quick-cked New Cabbage Wedges; Leaf Lettuce, Shredded Cauliflower and Spinach Salad with French Dressing; First Prize Cherry Pie 1962 (see Wednesday); Coffee.

NOTE:

This mixture may also be baked as a loaf cake. If baking in loaf pan bake oven at 360 deg. Fahr. and bake 45-50 minutes.

Frost cake with pale green icing for St. Patrick's Day and decorate with a darker green shamrock. For Easter, use an orange filling and mask your frosting pale yellow. Finish with orange sections. For any day of the year, make a delicious filling and flavor icing with instant coffee and cocoa (Mocha).

For a Birthday Cake, which you will, make this Strawberry Filling: Defrost a 16-oz. carton of fresh frozen strawberries. Drain off enough juice to fill 1 cup (adding a few berries to fill cup if you can't get enough juice). Heat. Soak 1½ teaspoons gelatine in 1 tablespoons cold water. Pour hot juice over to dissolve. Add 2 unsalted beaten and cool. Make a rich cream sauce by melting 4 tablespoons butter, stirring in 2 tablespoons flour to blend and then 1 cup milk until thick. Remove from heat and cool and stir in ½ cup icing sugar and ½ teaspoon salt. Beat it well and beat the strawberry mixture well then fold both together. Split above cake into 4 layers. Spread all of this filling between the layers. Spread top with butter icing made by creaming together 2½ cups icing sugar, 2 tablespoons soft butter and just enough defrosted berries to make of spreading consistency. Cover sides liberally with unsweetened whipped cream — I used ½ pint. This is an aristocratic forte-type dessert.

Philippine Mission Work Topic at CGIT

The city-wide CGIT mother and daughter banquet was held recently in Tabernacle United Church.

One enlightening item on the program was the explanation by the president of the Girls' Work Board, Mrs. R. Mills, of the various tasks of the Work Board. She mentioned that they had held a "Leadership Training Course," a girls' rally at Keirle's Island in September and helped in sending a girl to Ontario Camp Council. The Work Board also assists the girls' camps at Camp Quin-Mo-Lac.

Miss Elizabeth Hamilton, who was chosen as the Belleville representative of Ontario Camp Council this past summer, gave the highlights by showing interesting slides.

An impressive dedication of the leadership cards was given by Mrs. R. Varcoe. A presentation also was made to the girls graduating this year from the CGIT by Mrs. G. W. Campbell.

The guest speaker was Mrs. Ross Jeffries, a Canadian missionary who has worked in the Philippine Islands. Her talk was inspiring to the girls and their mothers, regarding her work among the less aged.

Mrs. Jeffries displayed the handicraft of that country, stating that there were 87 different dialects spoken on the islands.

The speaker also related the difficulties of the young people in obtaining an education which they obtained by their own courage and effort.

In closing, Mrs. Jeffries compared orchids to the fragile looking bamboo which can withstand winds and storms. Its internal channels through the stalks representing the young people's lives which love should flow through, and be used as vessels of usefulness for the church.

There Is Variety in Secretary's Job

Miss Doris Clark, Master of Social Work has had special training in psychology and vocational guidance. In preparing this series, "Careers for Girls", Miss Clark has interviewed career women in the fields she is covering, as well as employers and guidance counsellors.

Doris Clark's human relations column "Successful Living" runs regularly in The Ontario Intelligencer.

by Doris C. Clark, M.S.W.

(Sixth in a Series for Teen-Agers on Careers for Girls).

Away back in the fourth century B.C., "scribes" were much in demand. These were usually educated young men who wrote letters for other folk. Though rich or conducting important business, could not read nor write.

Why any kind of industry there has always been a need for record facts. Correspondence, records of conversations and agreements, day-to-day messages about events, call for a helper who can write things down.

Up until the present century such work was done almost entirely by men. But things have changed. Today there are many thousands of women employed as secretaries and secretaries on this continent, and if you don't think their work is important, just listen to what the men they work for say about them. Here is one from the owner of a manufacturing concern:

"What do I think about Miss Campbell? Why, I just wouldn't know what to do without her! She knows more about my business than I do. If she were not so thoroughly interested and capable I could not get nearly so much done. The rest of the whole business would fall through!"

This one from the manager of a retail store

"Before Brenda Jones came, my desk was piled high with unanswered correspondence. I was so busy managing the store I could never catch up. Now Miss Jones has found out how sales are made and she takes care of many of my letters herself. She will do anything I ask, whether it involves filling records, or counting stamps, or keeping the sales room tidy — nothing is beneath her dignity when it helps the store. And she does everything with a smile!"

AND A third:

"Miss Brown is a wonder. Many people call at this office daily, and she has such a nice way of finding out what each person's business is that no one resents it".

MANY JOBS IN ONE

Sound enthusiastic, don't they? Those are just a few of the ways in which good stenographers and secretaries make themselves indispensible — and get pleasure out of their jobs!

Pacific Casserole For Male Eaters

Ask men who sometimes complain about being served casseroles why they object, even if they otherwise enjoy the foods that go into them and often they'll say it's because they can't tell to look at the dish just what's in it! Pacific Casserole entirely avoids such objections. It's the perfect casserole for even the most suspicious and finicky male eater. Rice, tomatoes, onion rings, salmon and olives are arranged in layers that keep their individual savor and identity throughout baking. The final layer, a simple cheese sauce made with cream soup is crowned with barbecue potato chips — a new idea for a casserole topping — whose hot seasonings get another vote of approval from the men in your cooking audience. Though it's primarily designed as a family supper feature, Pacific Casserole has the appearance and flavor contrasts that make it a good menu choice for informal entertaining too.

1 10-oz can cream of vegetable or celery soup, ½ cup of milk, 2-3 cup shredded cheddar cheese, 1½ cups packaged precooked rice, ¼ teaspoon salt, ½ teaspoon oregano (optional), dash of pepper, 1 10-oz. can whole tomatoes, water, app. 1 to 1¼ cups, 1 onion thinly sliced, 2 cups canned salmon, ½ cup sliced stuffed olives, barbecue or plain potato chips.

Preheat oven to 375 deg. F.

Blend soup, tomatoes and water moderately well in saucepan over low heat, blend milk into soup. Add cheese; heat, stirring occasionally, until cheese melts. Meanwhile, in greased shallow 6-cup baking dish combine rice, salt, oregano and pepper. Drain tomatoes; to juice add enough water to make a total of 1½ cups liquid. Stir this into rice. Save a few tomatoes for top of casserole, slice rest. Arrange sliced onion and tomatoes in separated into rings, over rice. Drain salmon; break into chunks. Arrange with sliced olives on top of tomatoes and onion rings. Pour cheese sauce over top. Cover top surface with barbecue chips. Garnish with remaining whole tomatoes, sliced, and if desired, additional sliced olives. Bake in preheated moderately hot oven 30 to 35 minutes or until sauce is bubbly. Makes 6 servings.

Canadian Home Economist Will Study Problems of Farm Families in Nigeria

HOME (CP) — A Canadian home economist who long has studied problems of Canadian farm families is examining similar problems in northern Nigeria on behalf of the United Nations Food and Agriculture Organization.

Main concern of Dr. Helen Abell in Nigeria will be the role of women in rural life; how much of the family income they earn and spend; what their duties and function in the family is, and what part do they play in actually working the land.

Results of the survey in which she will be assisted by an agricultural economist an agricultural teaching expert will be used by the Nigerian government in an agricultural development plan for the northern region of the country.

Born at Medicine Hat, Alta., Dr. Abell moved to Toronto at an early age with her parents and after graduation from the Ontario Agricultural College at Guelph became the first nutrition specialist with the Ontario agricultural department's home economics branch. She later went to Cornell University.

WAR SERVICE

She served overseas with the Canadian Women's Army Corps in the Second World War, and afterwards worked as a research assistant at Cornell while taking her doctorate in sociology. She joined the federal agriculture department in 1951, and as head of the rural sociological unit in the economics division is concerned mainly with research into problems of farm life in Canada.

In an interview at FAO headquarters here Dr. Abell told of some of the projects undertaken by her department, from which she is on loan for four months to FAO.

One of these studies, now under way, was set up to examine present extension teaching in Ontario. She said all phases of rural life are being studied—for

WORKS IN NIGERIA — Dr. Helen Abell, home economist from Medicine Hat, Alta., is conducting a survey in Nigeria to determine the role of women in rural life. example, in the Nigerian project, how much of the family's income is controlled by the wife; how work on the farm is divided; how farm women do their marketing and whether they are familiar with various cuts of meat and types of clothing.

JAMAICA SURVEY

Dr. Abell told of an FAO-assisted project in Jamaica of which she was director, while on loan for a year in 1955 from the Canadian government. There she directed a training course for 24 West Indian women, all teachers or welfare workers.

"This was a very down-to-earth course," Dr. Abell said. Held at the University College of the West Indies, it involved practically all phases of home economics education.

"In one phase dealing with extension work the trainees went to the village of Augustown, met the villagers and conducted courses in everything imaginable.

"They developed a skimmed milk program in the little day nursery school. At first we bought the powdered skimmed milk and taught the village mothers how to reconstitute it. Later on the families themselves supplied the milk.

"It sounds like a simple thing — mixing water with powered milk — but unless the women learn to measure accurately and follow directions, the children will not like the milk."

TAUGHT HONESTY

Another course in family relationships was given by the trainees. The course was given for men because, Dr. Abell said, many basic attitudes towards family and social responsibilities had to be learned by them.

"We had to teach families by instance that when children came home with a stolen spoon they should be reprimanded instead of being congratulated."

Dr. Abell, who returns to Canada after her four or five months in Nigeria, has a simple philosophy.

"You don't just talk nutrition. When the food is not there, you must make it available before you can eat it. You must provide seeds before gardens can be grown, and fertilizers to make the seeds grow."

THE FAMILY COUNCIL

Claudia V. — My sister and my mother won't talk to each other.

Mae V. — It's better this way. It's all my mother's fault.

Claudia V. — We are two sisters, unmarried, living with our mother. We are in our 40's, both employed in pleasant though not high-paying jobs.

Lately things have grown unbearable at home due to the friction between my sister and my mother. While they never got along well before, they had a big quarrel about a telephone message a month ago. One thing led to another, Mae brought in everything from the year one, including childhood hurts, money grievances and old, forgotten disagreements. Some of these beefs had nothing to do with my mother. She wound up saying to Mae, "That's all I'm going to take from you. Don't talk to me any more."

Mae agreed. They haven't exchanged one word since. It's so unnatural and stiff I can't stand it. Mae should stop her nonsense.

Mae V. — Maybe it's because my mother and I are too much alike that we explode at each other like a row of firecrackers. Claudia is the calm one and she can take all those accusations, the blaming, the belittling. I can't. I throw it right back. She's my mother, but she's unfair and cruel. And I tell her so.

She happened to take a phone message for me. A man left his number, and asked me to call him back. It was about a business matter. My mother must have thought it was a social call because she nagged me about dialing back. I had decided not to. That led to her telling me to be more friendly, etc. I told her to mind her own business.

Claudia and everyone only notice what I do to her. She's comfort seems to be available. Can it be habit? Or a desire to punish? Or enjoyment of martyrdom?

In generations past, this sort of quiet feuding was rather common. It accounted for long, dreary patches in many lives. We know of a situation and let this be a warning to Mae — where a non-talking impasse between a mother and daughter lasted 40 years. There were many times when each would have liked to soften, but then were "too proud to give in." What was gained? Zero. What was lost? The juice and pulse of living, for these require positive emotions. The V's are imprisoned by the negative, deadly emotions of anger, guilt and self-pity.

It would be tragic for this childish state of affairs to drag on even one more day. In this period of mental health difficulties, such personality clashes can be probed by a guidance counselor. "What's eating Mae?" would be the first line of inquiry. Mrs. — and Claudia would have their "day-in-court," too — a quiet chance to tell and be told. We hope that one of this trio will initiate counseling as sure aid to more generous, normal relationships among them.

But what can be done pronto? Although Claudia has her own problems, let's limit our suggestions to the Mae-Mother discord. Here are two unhappy women, venting their bitterness on each other. The sadness is that they are only their own unhappiness, not the torment of the other. They feel the other has it too good, and can take it. Previous, rough handling . . .

We'd start with Mae. We can extend a measure of sympathy to her as a misunderstood, under-appreciated daughter. But we'd ask her to look behind her mother's errors and see here another misunderstood woman, frustrated and too old to hope. Mae must be the forbearing, loving one.

Living apart would help. But it must be as friends, not as enemies. Be a "big" girl, Mae, in every sense of the word. Say Hello, Mom, tonight! And tomorrow, too.

Successful Living

(A Canadian Social Worker) Helps with Human Problems)

Has Problem Child

DORIS CLARK

DEAR DORIS:—What does one do with a "problem" child when everything which one does to help seems to be of no avail? . We have a son 17 who is in Grade 9 for the third year in a row!

Though a seven-month child, who had considerable sickness for some time after birth, he is now a strapping youth, close to six feet tall. He has an average of around 55 to 60 in all school subjects except mathematics, at which he is hopeless. He is not capable of concentrating. We have tried to help him by coaching him at home, and by buying special books, but to no avail.

He does not appear to have any personal pride in himself; does not change his clothing or take a bath of his own accord, and has to be told repeatedly about such things. He lies all the time, and lately has taken to stealing money from us with which to buy cigarets.

He has had interviews at Child Guidance Clinic and with a psychiatrist, but this also does not appear to have been any help.—LOOKING FOR HELP.

DEAR LOOKING:—Premature babies have trouble catching up. If yours also had illness in those first months, this meant a double handicap. Brain development after arrival on this earth takes place at a great rate for a month or two in a healthy infant. Illness could retard this—could even prevent full development.

Understanding his trouble comes first. If a clinic and a psychiatrist have failed, what can a long distance operator like me have to say?

Failure to concentrate, poor mathematics, point to limited intelligence. Lying, petty thefts, lack of personal pride, point to frustrations. One affects the other.

Find out what he can do—even if it's just hitting a nail squarely on the head—and let him get some satisfaction at it. We can't all be university graduates. Encourage, praise, be full of cheer and confidence, and don't press the mathematics.

It is skilled personal counselling which can assess your boy. All I can say is, try again. And be sure he knows you love him, whatever he does or doesn't do.

DEAR DORIS—I'm 18 years old and every place I go everybody keeps telling me how beautiful I look, the good figure and voice I have, and the nice personality I have. This has been going on for a long time, but before I sort of took it for a joke.

Now I wish I could make something of my looks (I do housework for a priest and the wages are low). Could I do something besides this, like something to do with my looks, etc.? I wish you could give me an address or tell me of something that's suitable.

You've helped a lot of people and I hope you can help me.—MISS WONDERING.

DEAR MISS WONDERING—A good figure might suggest modelling. Nice voice might suggest telephone or radio work. Nice personality? Receptionist.

But they could all be wrong. We need to know other things, about education, aptitudes, general interests. You need personal counselling.

Visit the youth section of the Belleville branch, National Employment service, and ask for guidance about a vocation. Or see a private vocational counsellor.

TO SUZIE:—Write again, sending your name in full on a stamped envelope, and I will send you a pamphlet on the treatment of pimples, written by a Canadian authority on the subject.

* * *

(Doris Clark, Master of Social Work, is a graduate of McGill, Toronto and McMaster universities, and has has broad experience in social work. If you would like help with your problems, write to her in care of this newspaper, enclosing a self-addressed, stamped envelope.)

MAIL CALL

Question: Recently, my father-in-law passed away. A group of friends sent flowers collectively. My mother-in-law will send a note of thanks. In addition, some in this group sent sympathy cards to my husband and me. Should we acknowledge these cards by mail?

My husband's employer sent flowers, which my mother-in-law will acknowledge. In addition, he sent my husband a personal letter of sympathy. Should my husband answer it?

Other acquaintances sent cards only. Should each be acknowledged? — Mrs. V.P., New Haven Conn.

Answer: Cards and letters of condolence should be answered with a short note of appreciation, and should be acknowledged by the person to whom they are addressed. Answers to sympathy letters usually are written on plain white paper, instead of on black-bordered mourning paper, which was the custom up until a few years ago.

Question: There seems to be some difference of opinion about whether soup should be spooned or drunk when served in a cup with handles. I've seen soup served in cups attacked both ways. Would you please see me straight on which method is correct? — H.M., Chicago, Ill.

Answer: When soup or broth is served in a cup it should be lifted by the handles and drunk. Any vegetables or garnishes that remain in the bottom of the cup should then be eaten with a spoon.

Cross-Canada Survey

Fluoridation of Municipal Water Supplies Shows More Progress in Acceptance

By KEN KELLY
Canadian Press Staff Writer

Fluoridation of community water supplies — hailed on one hand as a great contribution to dental health and attacked on the other as a threat to civil rights — is making slow but steady progress toward wider acceptance in Canada.

A Cross Canada Survey by The Canadian Press showed that one of every 13 Canadians lives within reach of water to which fluoride has been added as a means of curbing tooth decay.

In Manitoba, more than half the population is included in municipally operated programs. The proportion is greater than one in five in Nova Scotia. One - third of Saskatchewan's urban residents live where it is added.

Only in Newfoundland, New Brunswick and Prince Edward Island have no communities successfully undertaken fluoridation programs.

STARTED IN BRANTFORD

Since Brantford, Ont., became one of three North American communities to begin fluoridation in 1945, more than 80 Canadian cities, towns and villages with populations total ling 1,293,600 have taken this step.

They range in size from Winnipeg with 255,000 residents to Carrot River, Sask., with 1,000. Another dozen communities plan to begin fluoridation this year.

In some communities — such as Stratford, Aylmer and Shoal borough in Ontario — fluoridation has never been an issue since they have used fluorides in their water supply.

Nearly every city to add fluoride in recent years was marked by vocal and sometimes well - organized opposition.

But as experience and the evidence of scientific studies piled up, fluoridation found advocates among the leaders of such professional organizations as the Canadian Dental, medical and public health associations and the Health League of Canada.

Fluoridation stems from the discovery many years ago that people born and raised in areas with a high proportion of fluorides in their drinking water — the water supply had good, healthy teeth.

FIGHTS ACIDS

Experiments indicated the fluoride gives the tooth a protective coating against mouth acids that cause tooth decay.

But the next step — addition of fluoride in the proportion of one part of fluoride to a million parts of water—lies at the heart of the controversy, say health Canada communities.

Provincial laws on fluoridation were either non-existent in Newfoundland, New Brunswick, Alberta, Saskatchewan, Quebec and Manitoba — or vested the problem in the individual municipal councils, if a vote in various ways.

Nova Scotia was first with provincial legislation. A 1955 law enabled municipalities to fluoridate their water supply without a plebiscite on fluoridation.

The following year, Alberta decided that municipal councils could fluoridate only through a bylaw if endorsed by a majority in a plebiscite.

B.C. and Saskatchewan acted in 1957, B.C. requiring a three-fifths majority vote in municipal bylaw and Saskatchewan permitting fluoridation by bylaw or petition.

OPPOSITION WINS

Ontario last year authorized it by referendum based on a simple majority of votes cast in a municipal bylaw passed by a majority of municipal council. Ontario municipalities may begin adopting fluoridation, opposition mounted, but not all of it was well-organized or as successful as in a 1961 plebiscite in which the experts put it down by a narrow margin—it will probably be because of their candidacy. 56-year-old Peter Goldman. Observers say his intelligence and drive mark him out as potential cabinet timber.

A man with a similar image is Dick Taverne, the Labor candidate and probable victor in Thursday's byelection at Lincoln.

QUADROS RETURNS

SANTOS, Brazil (AP) — Ex-president Janio Quadros returned to Brazil Wednesday after six months of voluntary exile and got a big welcome from several thousand supporters in this steamy port city. The demonstration strengthening reports that he will open a new drive for political power.

ment—that fluoride is a cumulative poison, when hardened bones as well as teeth.

SAYS HARDENS ARTERIES

These arguments also were used in anti-fluoridation campaigns in Alberta, counted in one another—that plumbing is corroded by fluoridated water. The Manitoba Pure Water League argued that fluoridation is mass medication contrary to individual rights.

Poison, civil rights and property damages are main themes of opposition across the country. Usually it's expressed in letters to the editor or in pamphlets, public meetings, door-to-door canvasses or paid advertisements.

Organized support for fluoridation is the municipal level generally comes from dental, medical, professional, citizen and parent societies. Nationally, the Health League and the Canadian Dental Association have taken up the issue through pamphlets examining anti-fluoridation arguments in detail.

A dental association pamphlet says fluoridation is not mass medication. Medication is the administration of remedies, fluoridation a preventive like chlorination and pasteurization.

The association's official position is that fluoridation "is safe and that its effects are is effective in reducing tooth decay by approximately two-thirds."

STUDIES MADE

This figure of tooth decay reduction is supported by a number of studies in fluoridated and non-fluoridated communities.

Brantford has been the subject of a continuing federal study. A study of tooth decay rates was made in Moose Jaw, Sask., in 1955, a year before fluoridation began there. Seven years later a survey indicated a reduction in tooth decay ranging between 25 per cent to 40 per cent. Comparable rates and 60 per cent in the youngest.

The experience was similar in naturally fluoridated Aylmer, Ont., which was compared with Brantford, Sarnia and Sudbury, Ont. Two years after fluoridation was started in 1955 in Brandon, Man., a survey showed a marked decrease in tooth decay.

A Ontario government committee studying fluoridation reported last year that it found, among other things:

1. The presence of fluoride in the recommended concentration does not cause mottling of tooth enamel, pipes and fittings nor does it affect chemistry in any way industrial processes.

2. "We hold the firm opinion that the fluoridation of municipal water supplies by the authorities of the municipality in which it is sent enough to the advantages of fluoridation."

"What we're fighting is apathy and indifference," says Dr. Murray Brown, medical director of the Health League of Canada. "Fluoridation (opponents) is not like polio, which can be extremely serious—may not be serious for years."

Dr. J. C. Boullion, Montreal's municipal health director, says the big stumbling block is "massive public indifference." He says the public must be educated by the public. Unfortunately, he says, it costs money that does not impress the public much.

SEVEN PROVINCES

Following are Canadian communities fluoridating their water supply:

Nova Scotia: Halifax, Dartmouth, Kentville.

Ontario: Brantford, Brockville, Burlington, Cornwall, Deep River, Fort Erie, North Bay, Oshawa, Port Credit, Sudbury, Teck Township (Kirkland Lake), Thorold, Tilsdey, Township, Toronto Township, Wallaceburg.

Manitoba: Boissevain, Brandon, Dauphin, Killarney, Minnedosa, Portage la Prairie, Steinbach, Greater Winnipeg (including Winnipeg, St. James, Brooklands, Charleswood, Fort Garry, St. Vital, Tuxedo, East Kildonan, Old Kildonan, North Kildonan, Old Kildonan, Transcona).

Saskatchewan: Assiniboia, Birch Hills, Blaine Lake, Cabri, Canora, Carnduff, Deer Chaplin, Davidson, Estevan, Eston, Kamsack, Kindersley, Leader, Maryfield, Melville, Moosomin, Moose Jaw, Naicam, Prince Albert, Rosetown, Shaunavon, Saskatoon, Star City, Swift Current, Tisdale, Watson, Weyburn, Yorkton.

Alberta: Bonnyville, Devon, Drumheller, Edmonton, Hinshill, Red Deer.

B.C.: Burns Lake, Campbell River, Courtenay, Elkford, Lake Cowichan, Mesachie Lake, Prince George, Prince Rupert, Smithers.

Fluoridation has been approved by plebiscite in Whitby, Renfrew and Streetsville, Ontario, Athabasca, Coaldale, Fort Saskatchewan, Leduc, St. Albert Raisins and Gold Lake in the Province of Alberta, and Kamloops in B.C.

Ontario, Ont., plans fluoridation but city council delayed final reading of the bylaw pending a report on cost and operating procedure.

Windsor, Ont., city council has approved fluoridation but a referendum will be held sometime in December. Other Ontario referendums are scheduled for December in Metropolitan Toronto and St. Thomas.

Foster Parents Were Witnesses In Murder Trial

MONCTON, N.B. (CP)—Mr. and Mrs. Ernest Joseph Murray of Halifax, foster parents of the accused, were witnesses Wednesday at the preliminary hearing of a charge of capital murder against 20 - year - old George Herbert Harris of Camp Gagetown, N.B., and Halifax.

Harris is charged in the stabbing to death of Arthur Felix Casey, 35-year-old construction worker whose body was found along the roadside near Petitcodiac about 25 miles southwest of here Jan. 29.

Mr. Murray described his son's mood as "jolly" when he left Halifax the afternoon of Jan. 28 to hitch-hike to Camp Gagetown.

Mrs. Murray said Harris was in frequent trouble to her home. He was a "good son" and had never been arrested before.

Both witnesses said: "We minded our own business. We didn't ask him his business and he didn't tell us."

Mrs. Portida Casey, mother of the victim, identified pieces of clothing as those of her son.

CURIOSITY WAS FATAL

110,000-Member Canadian Teachers' Federation Will Leave Education Forum

MONTREAL (CP)—The Canadian Conference on Education, a national forum that was born six years ago, has given itself six months to decide on its own life or death.

If it makes up its mind to continue, it will do so without the 110,000 - member Canadian Teachers' Federation.

The national committee of the conference, whose 2,000 delegates will wind up their five-day meeting today, met Wednesday night and adopted a proposal that it be continued, though not necessarily in its present form.

Executive chairman Arthur Sweetlove, education director for the Canadian Labor Congress, said the problem of how to finance a continuing organization will have to be solved within six months because the conference organization hasn't the money to carry on for a longer period.

A proposal to approach the federal government for an annual grant of $50,000 was defeated amid suggestions that it would hardly be wise for the conference to accept federal money for education, constitutionally a provincial matter.

TEACHERS BOW OUT

S. G. McCurdy of St. John's, Nfld., president of the Canadian Teachers' Federation, said his organization isn't opposed to the conference carrying on. If it did however, the CTF would not wish to act as a sponsor because it wanted to preserve its independence.

Teachers represent only about 10 per cent of the sponsors, he said, and the conference are to turn a spotlight on the problems and needs of education in Canada by bringing together representatives of all interested groups to exchange ideas.

At Wednesday's meetings experts discussed such matters as the role of teaching machines in education and educational research.

Prof. Miles Wisenthal of the McGill Institute of Education said teaching machines and programmed instruction, far from replacing the teacher, will free the teacher for the job of stimulating students in a variety of creative activities.

Dr. Floyd Robinson of Ottawa, research director of the CTF, said experiments had shown it might be more efficient in terms of learning to make less use of teachers and more use of teaching machines and programmed texts.

A group discussing the metric system unanimously favored its adoption in Canada in preference to the present English system of weights and measures.

Dr. H. H. Saunderson of the National Research Council, Ottawa, said it would not be sensible for Canada to change until the United States and Britain adopt it.

Progress in Red Rocketry Seen in Spy Controversy

By JOSEPH MacSWEEN
Canadian Press Staff Writer

One of the things to come out of the Washington controversy over spy pilot Francis Gary Powers is an indication of impressive Soviet advances in rocketry.

Representative Carl Vinson (Dem. Ga.), chairman of the House of Representatives armed services committee, told reporters that United States Central Intelligence Agency officials believe Powers' U-2 plane was brought down from 68,000 feet by a surface-to-air missile.

That level would represent a significant advance in Russian rocketry, United States military experts have said. It is believe that the Russians possessed a surface-to-air missile capable of such a feat.

Powers — in his appearance before the house armed services committee—avoided saying that he was his airplane when the plane was crippled. He stated he didn't know what did the damage.

PILOT RECALLS

"I can remember feeling, hearing, the explosion," Powers recalled, adding that "it's right in my mind as all that I felt in the aircraft itself.

"I immediately looked up from the instruments and everywhere I looked there was fire.

"I had never seen anything like this before and I'm sure that I was hit somehow. I felt that the explosion was external to the aircraft and behind me.

"I don't really know."

All this is compatible with the rocket theory and Powers also said that after landing on Soviet territory he noted a parachute descending high in the sky.

At the time, he said, he thought the parachute might be returning the first stage of an anti-aircraft rocket that had exploded near his plane.

SECRET AUTHORITY

Powers was treated gently in questioning by the senators. Some commentators criticized the saccharine aspects of the questioning as demonstrated by references to Powers as a "Virginia boy." Star Lerner, in the New York Post put it this way: whether this was necessary and remarks smacked of that from senators on the committee—"the southern boys act"—comes from the Russian state and neighboring states.

Lerner and other columnists are willing to believe Powers' statement that "I always remembered that I am an American."

But they thought it was unnecessary and a little too sweet—for Mississippi's Senator James Eastland.

"And you felt that the American flag would finally find you and bring you home and so what was good for you."

Boy Charged In Stabbing Is Remanded

TORONTO (CP) — A 16-year-old boy charged with juvenile delinquency in the stabbing death of storekeeper Stefan Turkewycz was remanded in custody for a court week Wednesday.

Judge Margaret Chambers also postponed for a week her decision on a crown application to have the grade IX student tried in adult rather than juvenile court.

He is charged with juvenile delinquency that he did "commit murder."

Turkewycz, 56-year-old former professor at Lvov University in the Ukraine, was found dying of a knife wound in his grocery store late night in the little candy store in which he was a part owner. A customer found the body.

Police said robbery apparently was the motive. The knife had been snatched off the store counter.

PHILIP PLANTS TREE

SANTIAGO, Chile (Reuters)—Prince Philip attended a banquet in his honor given by President Jorge Allesandri Wednesday night. During the day Philip planted an Arcadian pine tree at the Prince of Wales Club. He laid the foundation stone of the club building when he was here in 1958 on a two-month tour of South America.

Demand Made for Troops In Wake of Far-Reaching Terrorist Attacks in B.C.

NELSON, B.C. (CP) — Demands for troops to augment hard pressed RCMP officers were made Wednesday in the wake of the most far-reaching terrorist attack in the history of British Columbia's turbulent Kootenay district.

The call for troops was followed by a B.C. government offer of a $10,000 reward for information leading to the conviction of each of the men who blasted a steel power pole, shutting off power in several areas and making hundreds jobless.

In announcing the reward for each conviction, Attorney-General Bonner promised in the legislature that more RCMP officers are being sent to the Kootenay.

The blasting of the power pole shut down industries, left homes unheated and shut down many gasoline pumps.

RCMP said they suspected it was the work of radical Sons of Freedom Doukhobors, possibly in retaliation of the arrest of more members of the Freedomites' ruling fraternal council.

Power outages resulting from the dynamiting of a 366-foot steel tower carrying three major power lines across Kootenay Lake Tuesday night brought industrial stoppages that put close to 1,000 men out of work at the various operations of the giant Consolidated Mining and Smelting Company's complex that is the base of the Kootenay's economy.

Police said plastic-wrapped dynamite was used.

COST $500,000

The tower toppled in a mass of cables and insulators. Concnoc, owners of the pole, said it would take months to repair the damage at a cost of at least $500,000. Some police officers felt other acts of terrorism might follow and there were demands for extra men to dock watches, on bridges and ferries and other vital links.

There were these immediate developments:

The mayors of Trail, Kimberley, Nelson and Creston sent wires to Prime Minister Diefenbaker demanding federal troops. Nelson's mayor called for an emergency curfew.

The Associated Chambers of Commerce of Southeastern British Columbia sent a telegram to the prime minister and Premier W. C. Bennett urging that federal measures, as in wartime, to be used if necessary, to end this reign of terror by bombs.

The B.C. Power Commission said it would do everything possible to help out in the Kootenay power shortage that could keep industry idle for weeks.

West Kootenay Power and Light Company owns seven mills in the area to cut back or halt operations.

5,000 FACE SHORTAGES

Power and heat shortages faced more than 5,000 residents. Many fear the cold will set in, leaving the possibility of frozen water pipes, house without heat and closed schools.

In Ottawa Prime Minister Diefenbaker told the Commons the federal government will cooperate fully with B.C. in controlling the terrorism.

The blasting of the transmission tower carrying vital lines two miles across Kootenay Lake followed by just hours a further RCMP crackdown on the Freedomites. Police termed it "the worst and most costly act of terrorism yet in the Kootenays." Comieco officials said it was "industrial sabotage."

The six top-ranking elders of the Sons of Freedom, ruling fraternal council were charged with wilfully attempting to obstruct the course of justice. No further particulars of the charge were given immediately by police.

Arrested were Tom Work, 61; Fred Cherneckoff, 70; Nick Bryan, 54; Mike W. Hashlin, 74; John Sabitskog 43, and Pete Elasoff Sr., 61.

The arrests brought to 14 the total number of fraternal council members now under charge. A total of 89 Freedomites have been charged or convicted—the terms ranged up to 28 years—in an RCMP crackdown on crime and terror which began last year.

A special assize court is sitting the accused here.

British Liberal Party Thrives On Byelections

LONDON (CP) — It has become an accepted pattern in British politics that the flagging Liberal party comes to life in byelection swings but expires in general elections.

The pattern was first established in 1958 when the Liberals snatched Torrington from the Conservatives by 219 votes and emerged as runners-up in several other contests.

There were high Liberal hopes of a permanent change in the party's fortunes. But in the 1959 general election Torrington returned to the Tory fold and most of the Liberal gains elsewhere vanished.

The byelections think the March 14 byelection in the suburban Kent constituency of Orpington, held by Conservative Quebec and Manitoba — or tested the problem to the individual municipal bylaw decide in various ways.

Nova Scotia was first with provincial legislation. A 1955 law enabled municipalities to fluoridate their water supply without a plebiscite on fluoridation.

The following year, Alberta decided that municipal councils could fluoridate only through a bylaw if endorsed by a majority in a plebiscite.

B.C. and Saskatchewan acted in 1957, B.C. requiring a three-fifths majority vote in municipal bylaw and Saskatchewan permitting fluoridation by bylaw or petition.

OPPOSITION WINS

Ontario last year authorized it by referendum based on a simple majority of votes cast in a municipal bylaw passed by a majority of municipal council. Ontario municipalities may begin adopting fluoridation, opposition mounted, but not all of it was well-organized or as successful as in a 1961 plebiscite in which the experts put it down by a narrow margin—it will probably be because of their candidacy. 56-year-old Peter Goldman. Observers say his intelligence and drive mark him out as potential cabinet timber.

QUADROS RETURNS

SANTOS, Brazil (AP) — Ex-president Janio Quadros returned to Brazil Wednesday after six months of voluntary exile and got a big welcome from several thousand supporters in this steamy port city. The demonstration strengthening reports that he will open a new drive for political power.

Delegates Fear Hydro Will Be Taken Over

TORONTO (CP) — Delegates to the Ontario Municipal Electrical Association convention expressed fear Wednesday that the provincial government may move to take over the Ontario Hydro-Electric Power Commission.

The association unanimously condemned a bill, which has received its first hearing, amending the Power Commission Act.

The act now says the commission shall consist of three to six members, and that one of them shall be a cabinet minister.

The new bill eliminates the provision that one member must be a minister, but permits as many as two ministers to be appointed.

Removal of the cabinet minister from the commission carries the implication of eventual absorption of the commission to a government department, said Bertram Mezmerian, chairman of Ontario Hydro, Electric System.

This could trigger a sequence of events, aimed at dissolving the commission's $300,000,000 sinking fund and using the money for another purpose, he said.

Anthony Frame, a Burlington delegate, urged the setting up of three members on a three-man commission could lead to the same result.

WHITTON ALSO OPPOSED

Hydro-Electric Commissioner Charlotte Whitton, mayor of Ottawa, told the conference the original concept of the commission was that it should consist of two cabinet ministers and an engineer.

This had been changed so the government would not have unconfined power.

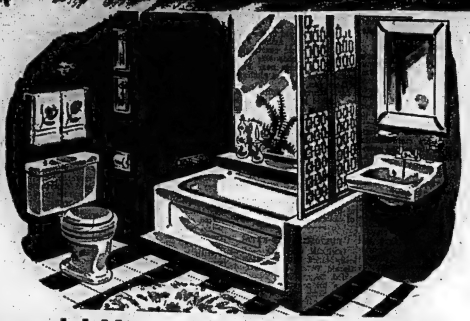
The evil of monopoly can be avoided, she said, by competition as easily as in a private enterprise, Miss Whitton said.

Two-Year-Old Boy Missing, Feared Dead

CARLISLE, Ont. (CP)—A two-year-old boy is missing and feared dead after fire destroyed a two-storey apartment building, in this Hamilton suburb early Wednesday night.

Police are investigating the ruins for the body of Albert Berwald, son of Mr. and Mrs. Philip Berwald, Mrs. Berwald escaped with her two other children after the fire started about 5 p.m. in their ground-floor apartment.

Two other families were left homeless by the blaze, which also destroyed a sub-office of the Toronto-Dominion Bank on the ground floor.



SURVIVES HEART STOPPAGE

MELBOURNE, Australia (Reuters)—The heart of an 8-year-old girl stopped for 15 minutes—for as long as 30 seconds—during a heart operation, but doctors said Wednesday he is in satisfactory condition.

"Look, darling! He's taking his first step."

RARE, MEDIUM, WELL-DONE

By GEO. H. CARVER, Sports Editor

The mid-season selection of National Hockey League all-stars is not fair and should be discontinued. Maurice "Rocket" Richard said in an interview during his visit here to referee the annual Police-Firemen hockey game.

"Take the case of Bobby Hull," he said. "Here is a fine young player who had a poor start but in the second half of the year he is zooming and threatens to break some records. If he does, or some near it, he should be deserving of a place on the first all-star squad. As the system is now he could be deprived of the honor.

The Rocket suggests that players should be judged on game star-selections over the period of the whole season. This, he feels, is the proper and only sure way of a player getting the proper credit.

He said he thought the Chicago Black Hawks would be the team to beat for the league championship and the Stanley Cup. The Hawks got away to a poor start, he said, "but right now they are hitting their stride and will be a tough team to beat."

The Canadiens are going to have to go all out in the playoffs, the famous star said. "And they are not in good shape. Beliveau has been hurt, my brother will be out with that broken arm and Bobby Moore is not in good shape. The guy that can really help them is Boom-Boom and he has not had a good season, although he is finding his stride now."

"However, Jacques Plante is having the best season of his career. He is playing exceptional hockey and has exploded the theory held by many that without Doug Harvey he would not hold up. He has proved that he is still the best in the league."

Asked the secret of the Canadiens' success down through the years, Richard said it was the fine calibre of the players who filled in when a regular or regulars were injured. "This year the Canadiens have the Tremblays with young Bobby Rousseau playing spectacular hockey. Backstrom is going well and rounds out a fine group of younger players."

He said he thought it would be years before European hockey teams would attain National Hockey League calibre. The Czechs were exceptionally good skaters, he said. "Your Montrealers found that out during the 1959 world tournament in Prague. They will be tougher as time goes on. They are always in good shape but their style of hockey is not the wide open kind.

"They will not improve very much as they do not have the proper competition they need," the Rocket pointed out. "I would suggest the Russians and Czechs send teams over here or to the United States and play a season against our pro clubs. In a couple of years they might be ready for National Hockey League competition but as of now it will take a long time before they can equal our pro players."

Richard, who appeared in Marmora Monday night, where he was greeted by some 1,500 people, is closing out another Canadiens' good-will tour of the country. Each year he said he travelled some 25,000 miles, coast-to-coast, mostly by aircraft.

There was some amusing byplay at Corbyville when he was greeted by some special guest at a reception there Tuesday afternoon, met attractive Carolyn Hall, sister of Bobby.

"I don't think I want to meet you," said the Rocket with a frowning smile.

"I do not think I want to meet you either," twinkled Miss Hall.

"I think Bobby is going to break your record," said Miss Hall.

"I don't think he will this year," said the Rocket. "However, he is young, a great hockey player with many years ahead of him. He might break that 50-goal mark in the future, but I do not think he will do it this year. The pressure and tension is great at this stage of the game."

BC 'Oldsters' Prance Into 5-2 Lead

Tops Favored Prairie Rinks

By JACK SULLIVAN
Canadian Press Sports Editor

KITCHENER (CP) — Big-league curling is supposed to be a game for healthy young chaps in their 20s, but you can't prove it by 67-year-old Reg Stone of Tyall, B.C.

He keeps rolling along, as evi-denced by his performance in the physically - tough Canadian curling championships.

The chauffeur skip of the British Columbia champions pranced into the final stages of the 11-round, round-robin classic today at the top of the standings. Not bad for a rink whose average age is 43, oldest of them all is the 67-year-old Stone.

Stone accomplished it by accepting a gift from lady luck and despite observance of a strict milk diet prescribed by his doctor, finished a slight dog of influenza.

He whipped past Quebec 8-5 in the fifth draw Wednesday and then was a trifle lucky in the sixth to edge lowly Prince Edward Island rink 8-6 with a three-ender in the 12th.

Ontario—with an average age of about 26—was the only other team to finish the day undefeated.

The Toronto rink of Bayze Secord walloped upstart New Brunswick 13-3 in the fifth round and followed with an 11-6 victory over a battling Quebec quartet.

N.S. SCORES UPSET

Saskatchewan was handed a 10-6 licking by Nova Scotia in the fifth round and settled down to defeat Manitoba 7-5 in a roaring finish. Nova Scotia has downed 11-7 to New Brunswick in the other game.

Newfoundland and Prince Edward Island were double losers. Manitoba defeated Newfoundland 10-5 in the fifth round and Alberta clobbered them a 16-6 decision. P.E.I. lost 11-10 to Northern Ontario in the fifth round.

Alberta and Ontario have a 5-0 record and Northern Ontario is the only undefeated with 3-0 records. Nova Scotia had a 3-3 posting. Quebec 1-4 and New Brunswick, Manitoba and Newfoundland 0-5.

When action wound up Monday night Stone led the race with a 5-0 record and one defeat, The defending champion Alberta rink was next with four wins and one loss.

Saskatchewan, New Brunswick and Ontario each had four wins and two losses. Manitoba and Northern Ontario were deadlocked with 3-3 records. Nova Scotia had a 3-3 posting. Quebec 1-4 and P.E.I. 0-5 and Newfoundland were both winless.

Nova Scotia's victory over Saskatchewan was the only major upset of the day.

ALL CLOSE

But a crowd of 5,429, largest to watch the sport in the long history of entering Canada curling, was in an uproar, throughout the day's sixth round when all but one of the five games were decided on last rock.

Stone, an unusually tough draw skipper, was behind 4-3 going home when skip Art Burke of Charlottetown chipped one of his own rocks out of the house, leaving B.C. two shots. Stone drew in for his winning margin.

In the same bout as Burke was Manitoba skip Norm Houck, a dead-panned 26-year-old from Winnipeg who blew a 5-4 lead in the 12th.

He missed with his first rock, setting up a count. Saskatchewan, Skip Ernie Richardson of Regina drew to perfection and Houck's coming a home stone chipped off a Saskatchewan rock and nudged one of his own into the 12-foot circle. Richardson was almost on the button with his second for three.

A fantastic last shot by Second Orval Gaudet of Moncton round win. Quebec, behind 9-8 and with that aspect to be an unbeatable guard protecting shot rock in the eight-foot circle, had its house dashed by a Second runner that crashed both out of the house and stayed to count two with another biting on the 12-foot ring.

Western Hockey

By THE CANADIAN PRESS

One of the few highlights in what has been a disastrous Western Hockey League season for Calgary Canucks was provided Wednesday night by former Canuck Ed Litzenberger.

The 32 - year - old native of Granum, Alta., established a record by scoring his second hat trick of the season as last-place Canucks dropped a 5-4 decision to Calgary Stampeders. Portland Buckaroos crushed San Francisco Seals 7-1 before 7,000 fans at Portland.

Edmonton Flyers downed the previous high of 38, set by Barry Cullen of Winnipeg Warriors in the 1952-53 season, Wayne Glowa and Gerry Brisson, both of Winnipeg, later tied it, mark.

In was Vancouver's second loss in 60 games.

Hapless Hornets Lose 9-1

By THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

Pittsburgh Hornets, who returned to the American Hockey League this season after an absence of five years, may be beginning to wish they hadn't bothered.

The hapless Hornets have won only nine of 62 games this season, one of the poorest records in professional hockey. They're in fourth and last place in the Western Division, six points back of the third - place Rochester Americans. The Hornets have allowed 308 goals and scored 197.

They took another beating at Pittsburgh Wednesday night, losing 9-1 to Hershey Bears.

Gordon Bodnar started a shutout with a goal at 9:17 of the third period. Jack McKenzie and Steve Chiminello each scored twice for Hershey. Bez Lalande, Pete Conacher, Cleo Daniels and Ron Stewart and Les Duff added singles.

Meet Finland Tonight

Terriers Ready To Go

COLORADO SPRINGS, Colo. (CP)—All of our injured players are ready now and we'll have no excuses," says coach Lloyd Roubeli of Galt Terriers, Canada's entry in the 1962 world amateur hockey tournament tonight against Finland.

Eight countries are entered in the championship division and each will play seven games in Broadmoor World Arena and at Denver, 50 miles away.

Tonight's match Wednesday, Switzerland defeated Australia 5-3 in the first game in the championship round-robin, joining Canada, the defending champion, and the United States, Sweden, Britain, West Germany, Czechoslovakia and Norway.

Today's schedule:

Group A (championship)
Colorado Springs—Norway vs Switzerland 5:30 p.m. EST; United States vs. Norway, 10:15 p.m.

Denver—Canada vs. Finland 10:15 p.m.

Group B
Denver — Australia vs. The Netherlands 5:30 p.m.

CANADIANS HEALTHY

Galt Canadian Hockey Terriers held their final practice this morning without Wednesday and Roubeli declared the Canadians "are all be at full strength for their opener.

Four forwards who have been slowed down recently by a variety of ailments are all announced healthy. Centre Tod Sloan and Bill Wyatt will start and either Bob Mader or Don Rope will get the call at left wing.

Sloan and Rope have been missing from practice sessions but missed the final two exhibition games.

Wyatt is recovering from an attack of stomach influenza. Mader has been troubled with bronchitis and an inflamed chest cartilage.

Defence Mader will work with centre Joe Hogan and right-winger Butch Martin.

Sloan will work between Jack McLeod and Joe Mako, while Wylie will centre for Butch Martin and captain Bob McKnight. Defence partners Harry Sosiak and Ted Makt and Bill Mitchell will be the defencing with Bob Robertson in reserve. Veteran Harry Coach Toe Blake of Montreal Canadiens is worried about the rash of injuries which has been hitting his club.

Because of the injuries, he is also apprehensive about the team going into the Stanley playoffs as crippled as last spring when it was eliminated in the semi-finals by Chicago Black Hawks.

Then the Canadiens haven't won in their last three starts—losing one—and tying two—and their lead atop the National Hockey League standings has been slashed to seven from 15 points.

"You remember how life seemed so rosy only 10 days ago," Blake, the perpetual pessimist, was saying Wednesday.

"Well, now you must have an idea how a coach feels when things are going bad. But, I guess injuries can't be helped."

BROKE ARM

Centre Henri Richard is the most serious casualty. He broke his right arm Monday and also is out for the remaining 2½ days of the schedule and the playoffs.

At least five other players are suffering various ailments, but Blake doesn't think the Canadiens' chances on second-place Toronto Maple Leafs in Montreal.

The only question mark is Fontinato, a stalwart on defence. He keeps posting forwards honest with his solid body-checking. Fontinato has been inactive for two weeks with a groin injury.

Centre Jean Beliveau and winger Don Marshall also have groin injuries, but both are expected to see action along with defenceman Jean-Guy Talbot, who has a sore knee, and winger Claude Provost, with a sore leg.

The Toronto-Montreal game is crucial. Canadiens will be seeking to narrow the gap towards a fifth straight championship while the Maple Leafs will be out to improve their slim chances of finishing first for the first time in 15 years.

TO PLAY BRUINS

Elsewhere tonight, the fifth-place Detroit Red Wings will be at Boston in a date against the hapless Bruins.

Red Wings are three points behind New York Rangers in the struggle for the fourth and last playoff berth but have three games in hand. Bruins will be out to extend eight-game starts — losing 14 and tying three.

Canadiens need only a combination of six wins or Toronto defeats to wrap up the league title. They have 10 more games to play to Toronto's nine.

Punch Imlach's Maple Leafs cannot be counted out for first place yet. And as far as Imlach is concerned, if the Leafs fall short of first, they'll finish no worse than second.

Deal With White Sox

Giants Get Pierce, Larsen

NEW YORK (AP)—San Francisco Giants, seeking depth, reasoning and stability for their pennant drive, Wednesday staff when they concluded a multi-player trade with Chicago White Sox, that they believe fills the necessary ingredients in securing their objectives.

The 35-year-old veteran, twice a 20-game winner with Chicago, left the assortment of talent at the Giants' training camp Wednesday and outfielder Harry Bright said he believed Pierce, "was throwing as hard as he was in 1960" when he was a mainstay in the American League.

Pierce went to the Giants along with outfielder Don Larsen in a whiter deal that cost San Francisco outfielder Jim Ray Farley and promising hurlers Don Zanni and Eddie Fischer, both of whom are left-handers.

Pierce will be the first in a prolonged batting practice session, sending up fastballs as directed by Ruenn and whipping curve balders to Hard - hitting Willie Mays.

SEEK MORE PITCHING

Pierce was 10-9 at Chicago last season with a 3.08 earned run average and with Larsen, 8-2 in relief for the White Sox could provide the added pitching power the Giants need to move toward the 1962 National League pennant.

Hopeful rookies were parading their talents at other sites.

Pitcher Ron Herbel, Independence, up briefly with Pittsburgh Pirates last year, threw straight for which he hit .314 last season, belied two home runs and accounted for the only tallies in the Pirates' five-hoping intra.

Pitcher Joel Horlen, up from San Diego of the Pacific Coast League, gave evidence of not-tail ball as the White Sox staged a six-inning game.

Injuries hit Detroit Tigers. Outfielder Al Kaline reported a sore throwing arm will keep him out of Saturday's opening game, while pitcher Phil Regan, Ron Kline and Don Wert complained of minor miseries.

Dick Stuart Hit 66 Homers

Calls Maris to Repeat

FORT MYERS, Fla. (AP)—Dick Stuart, who once hit 66 home runs in a season, sat in the shade of Pittsburgh Pirates' canteen and talked about Roger Maris.

"It makes me mad when I hear somebody ragging Maris, because he only batted .269 while hitting those 61 home runs," the National League player said Wednesday. "Batting averages don't mean a thing in the sense of a man like Maris who hit 61.

"To a fellow who hits only 30 or 35 it is necessary to bat .300 to make money. In my case it's meant something that I finished with .260.

"Maris had the perfect park for a left-hander to hit home runs in. He got out of new-law year like me. He might get off 50 or more. But I think he will hit 50 or more again.

"In our league Orland, Cepeda ought to hit over 30. Hank Aaron and Eddie Mathews could hit 40 if they ever get to be lucky to get that high."

Stuart, 6-3 and 210 pounds, hit the most home runs for any Pirate since the day of Ralph Kiner's assault on Babe Ruth's record

The Tracks

ARCADIA, Calif. (AP)—Candian - owned Four-and-Twenty found everything to his liking Wednesday as he won the $28,-000 Santa Anita Handicap in a wire-to-wire performance at Santa Anita Park.

Emerging from the doghouse after his third-place finish as the betting choice in a $100,000-added Santa Anita Handicap 10 days ago, the pride of Alberta Rancher of Calgary won by four lengths.

A tiny shot, Macdan, finished second and Juandro was third in the field of 10.
